Austria shall be obliged to make to the European commission of the Danube all restitutions, reparations and indemnities for damages inflicted on the commission during the war.

Article 308.

Should a deep draft Rhine-Danube navigable waterway be constructed, Austria hereby undertakes to accept the application to the said navigable waterway of the same regime as that prescribed in articles 292 and 294 to 299 of the present treaty.

Chapter III.—Hydraulic System.

Article 309.

In default of any provisions to the contrary, when as the result of the fixing of a new frontier the hydraulic system (canalization, inundations, irrigation, drainage or similar matters) in a state is dependent on works executed within the territory of another state, or when use is made on the territory of a state, in virtue of prewar usage, of water or hydraulic power, the source of which is on the territory of another state, an agreement shall be made between the states concerned to safeguard the interests and rights acquired by each of them.

Failing an agreement, the matter shall be regulated by an arbitrator appointed by the council of the league of nations.

Article 310.

Unless otherwise provided, when use is made for municipal or domestic purposes in one state of electricity or water, the source of which as the result of the fixing of a new frontier is on the territory of another state, an agreement shall be made between the states concerned to safeguard the interests and rights acquired by each of them.

Pending an agreement, central electric stations and waterworks shall be required to continue the supply up to an amount corresponding to the undertakings and contracts in force on Nov. 3, 1918.

Failing an agreement, the matter shall be regulated by an arbitrator appointed by the council of the league of nations.

Section III.—Railways.

Chapter I.—Freedom of Transit to the Adriatic for Austria.

Article 311.

Free access to the Adriatic sea is accorded to Austria, who with this object will enjoy freedom of transit over the territories and in the ports severed from the former Austro-Hungarian monarchy.

Freedom of transit is the freedom defined in article 284 until such time as a general convention on the subject shall have been concluded between the allied and associated powers, whereupon the dispositions of the new convention shall be substituted therefor.

Special conventions between the states or administrations concerned will lay down the conditions of the exercise of the right accorded above, and will settle in particular the method of using the ports and the free zones existing in them, the establishment of international (joint) services and tariffs including through tickets and waybills, and the maintenance of the convention of Berne of Oct. 14, 1890, and its supplementary provisions until its replacement by a new convention.

Freedom of transit will extend to postal, telegraphic and telephonic services.

Chapter II.—Clauses Relating to International Transport.

Article 312.

Goods coming from the territories of the allied and associated powers and going to Austria, or in transit through Austria from or to the territories of the allied and associated powers, shall enjoy on the Austrian railways as regards charges to be collected (rebates and drawbacks being taken into account), facilities and all other matters, the most favorable treatment applied to goods of the same kind carried on any Austrian lines, either in internal traffic or for export, import or in transit under similar conditions of transport, for example as regards length of route. The same rule shall be applied, on the request of one or more of the allied and associated powers, to goods specially designated by such power or powers coming from Austria and going to their territories.

International tariffs established in accordance with the rates referred to in the preceding paragraph and involving through waybills shall be established when one of the allied and associated powers shall require it from Austria.

However, without prejudice to the provisions of articles 288 and 289, Austria undertakes to maintain on her own lines the regime of tariffs existing before the war as regards traffic to Adriatic and Black sea ports, from the point of view of competition with North German ports.

Article 313.

From the coming into force of the present treaty the high contracting parties shall renew, in so far as concerns them and under the reserves indicated in the second paragraph of the present article, the conventions and arrangements signed at Berne on Oct. 14, 1890, Sept. 20, 1893, July 16, 1895, June 16, 1898, and Sept. 19, 1906, regarding the transportation of goods by rail.

If within five years from the date of the coming into force of the present treaty a new convention for the transportation of passengers, luggage and goods by rail shall have been concluded to replace the Berne convention of Oct. 14, 1890, and the subsequent additions referred to above, this new convention and the supplementary provisions for international transport by rail which may be based on it shall bind Austria, even if she shall have refused to take part in the preparation of the convention or to subscribe to it. Until a new convention shall have been concluded, Austria shall conform to the provisions of the Berne convention and the subsequent additions referred to above, and to the current supplementary provisions.

Article 314.

Austria shall be bound to co-operate in the establishment of through ticket services (for passengers and their luggage) which shall be required by any of the allied and associated powers to insure their communication by rail with each other and with all other countries by transit across the territories of Austria; in particular Austria shall, for this purpose, accept trains and carriages coming from the territories of the allied and associated powers and shall forward them with a speed at least equal to that of her best long distance trains on the same lines. The rates applicable to such through services shall not in any case be higher than the rates collected on Austrian internal services for the same distance, under the same conditions of speed and comfort.

The tariffs applicable under the same conditions of speed and comfort to the transportation of emigrants going to or coming from ports of the allied and associated powers and using the Austrian railways shall not be at a higher kilometric rate than the most favorable tariffs (drawbacks and rebates being taken into account) enjoyed on the said railways by emigrants going to or coming from any other ports.

Article 315.

Austria shall not apply specially to such through services, or to the transportation of emigrants going to or coming from the ports of the allied and associated powers, any technical, fiscal or administrative measures, such as measures of customs examination, general police, sanitary police and control, the result of which would be to impede or delay such services.

Article 316.

In case of transport partly by rail and partly by internal navigation, with or without through waybill, the preceding articles shall apply to the part of the journey performed by rail.

Chapter III.—Rolling Stock.

Article 317.

Austria undertakes that Austrian wagons shall be fitted with apparatus allowing:

(1) of their inclusion in goods trains on the lines of such of the allied and associated powers as are parties to the Berne convention of May 15, 1886, as modified on May 18, 1907, without hampering the action of the continuous brake which may be adopted in such countries within ten years of the coming into force of the present treaty, and

(2) of the inclusion of wagons of such countries in all goods trains on Austrian lines.

The rolling stock of the allied and associated powers shall enjoy on the Austrian lines the same treatment as Austrian rolling stock as regards movement, upkeep and repairs.

Chapter IV.—Transfers of Railway Lines.

Article 318.

Subject to any special provisions concerning the transfer of ports, waterways and railways situated in the territories transferred under the present treaty, and to the financial conditions relating to the concessionnaires and the pensioning of the personnel, the transfer of railways will take place under the following conditions:

(1) The works and installations of all the railroads shall be handed over complete and in good condition.

(2) When a railway system possessing its own rolling stock is handed over in its entirety by Austria to one of the allied and associated powers, such stock shall be handed over complete, in accordance with the last inventory before Nov. 3, 1918, and in a normal state of upkeep.

(3) As regards lines without any special rolling stock, the distribution of the stock existing on the system to which these lines belong shall be made by commissions of experts designated by the allied and associated powers, on which Austria shall be represented. These commissions shall have regard to the amount of the material registered on these lines in the last inventory before Nov. 3, 1918, the length of track (sidings included) and the nature and amount of the traffic. These commissions shall also specify the locomotives, carriages and wagons to be handed over in each case; they shall decide upon the conditions of their acceptance, and shall make the provisional arrangements necessary to insure their repair in Austrian workshops.

(4) Stocks of stores, fittings and plant shall be handed over under the same conditions as the rolling stock.

The provisions of paragraphs 3 and 4 above shall be applied to the lines of former Russian Poland converted by the Austro-Hungarian authorities to the normal gauge, such lines being regarded as detached from the Austrian and Hungarian state systems.

Chapter V.—Provisions Relating to Certain Railway Lines.

Article 319.

When as a result of the fixing of new frontiers a railway connection between two parts of the same country crosses another country or a branch line from one country has its terminus in another, the conditions of working, if not specifically provided for in the present treaty, shall be laid down in a convention between the railway administrations concerned. If the administrations cannot come to an agreement as to the terms of such convention, the points of difference shall be decided by commissions of experts composed as provided in the preceding article.

The establishment of all the new frontier stations between Austria and the contiguous allied and associated states, as well as the working of the lines between those stations, shall be settled by agreements similarly concluded.

Article 320.

With the object of insuring regular utilization of the railroads of the former Austro-Hungarian monarchy owned by private companies which, as a result of the stipulations of the present treaty, will be situated in the territory of several states, the administrative and technical reorganization of the said lines shall be regulated in each instance by an agreement between the owning company and the states territorially concerned.

Any differences on which agreement is not reached, including questions relating to the interpretation of contracts concerning the expropriation of the lines, shall be submitted to arbitrators designated by the council of the league of nations.

This arbitration may, as regards the South Austrian Railway company, be required either by the board of management or by the committee representing the bondholders.

Article 321.

Within a period of five years from the coming into force of the present treaty Italy may require the construction or improvement on Austrian territory of the new trans-Alpine lines of the Col de Reschen and the Pas de Predil. Unless Austria decides to pay for the works herself, the cost of construction or improvement shall be paid by Italy. An arbitrator appointed by the council of the league of nations shall, after the lapse of such period as may be fixed by the council, determine the portion of the cost of construction or improvement which must be repaid by Austria to Italy on account of the increase of revenue on the Austrian railway system resulting from these works.

Austria shall hand over to Italy gratuitously the surveys, with their annexes, for the construction of the following railway lines:

The line from Tarvis to Trieste by Raibl, Plezzo, Caporetto, Canale and Gorizia.

The local line from S. Lucia de Tolmino to Caporetto.

The line from Tarvis to Plezzo (new scheme).

The Reschen line connecting Landeck and Mals.

Article 322.

In view of the importance to the Czecho-Slovak state of free communication between that state and the Adriatic, Austria recognizes the right of the Czecho-Slovak state to run its own trains over the sections included within her territory of the following lines:

(1) From Bratislava (Pressburg) toward Fiume, via Sopron, Szembathely and Mura Keresztur, and a branch from Mura Keresztur to Pragerhof.

(2) From Budejovic (Budweiss) toward Trieste via Linz, S. Michael, Klagenfurt and Assling, and the branch from Klagenfurt toward Tarvisio.

On the application of either party, the route to be followed by the Czecho-Slovak trains may be modified either permanently or temporarily by mutual agreement between the Czecho-Slovak railway administration and those of the railways over which the running powers are exercised.

Article 323.

The trains for which the running powers are used shall not engage in local traffic except by agreement between Austria and the Czecho-Slovak state.

Such running powers will include, in particular, the right to establish running sheds with small shops for minor repairs to locomotives and rolling stock, and to appoint representatives where necessary to supervise the working of Czecho-Slovak trains.

Article 324.

The technical, administrative and financial conditions under which the rights of the Czecho-Slovak state shall be exercised shall be laid down in a convention between the railway administration of the Czecho-Slovak state and the railway administrations of the Austrian systems concerned. If the administrations cannot come to an agreement on the terms of this convention, the points of difference shall be decided by an arbitrator nominated by Great Britain, and his decisions shall be binding on all parties.

In the event of disagreement as to the interpretation of the convention or of difficulties arising unprovided for in the convention, the same form of arbitration will be adopted until such time as the league of nations may lay down some other procedure.

Chapter VI.—Transitory Provision.

Article 325.

Austria shall carry out the instructions given her, in regard to transport, by an authorized body acting on behalf of the allied and associated powers:

1. For the carriage of troops under the provisions of the present treaty, and of material, ammunition and supplies for army use;

2. As a temporary measure, for the transportation of supplies for certain regions, as well as for the restoration, as rapidly as possible, of the normal conditions of transport, and for the organization of postal and telegraphic services.

Chapter VII.—Telegraphs and Telephones.

Article 326.

Notwithstanding any contrary stipulations in existing treaties, Austria undertakes to grant freedom of transit for telegraphic correspondence and telephonic communications coming from or going to any one of the allied and associated powers, whether neighbors or not, over such lines as may be most suitable for international transit and in accordance with the tariffs in force. This correspondence and these communications shall be subjected to no unnecessary delay or restriction; they shall enjoy in Austria national treatment in regard to every kind of facility and especially in regard to rapidity of transmission. No payment, facility or restriction shall depend directly or indirectly on the nationality of the transmitter or the addressee.

Article 327.

In view of the geographical situation of the Czecho-Slovak state Austria agrees to the following modifications in the international telegraph and telephone conventions referred to in article 235 of part X. (Economic Clauses) of the present treaty.

(1) On the demand of the Czecho-Slovak state Austria shall provide and maintain trunk telegraph lines across Austrian territory.

(2) The annual rent to be paid by the Czecho-Slovak state for each of such lines will be calculated in accordance with the provisions of the above mentioned conventions, but unless otherwise agreed shall not be less than the sum that would be payable under those conventions for the number of messages laid down in those conventions as conferring the right to demand a new trunk line, taking as a basis the reduced tariff provided for in article 23, paragraph 5, of the international telegraph convention as revised at Lisbon.

(3) So long as the Czecho-Slovak state shall pay the above minimum annual rent of a trunk line:

(a) The line shall be reserved exclusively for transit traffic to and from the Czecho-Slovak state;

(b) The faculty given to Austria by article 8 of the international telegraph convention of July 22, 1875, to suspend international telegraph services shall not apply to that line.

(4) Similar provisions will apply to the provision and maintenance of trunk telephone circuits, but the rent payable by the Czecho-Slovak state for a trunk telephone circuit shall, unless otherwise agreed, be double the rent payable for a trunk telegraph line.

(5) The particular lines to be provided, together with any necessary administrative, technical and financial conditions not provided for in existing international conventions or in this article, shall be fixed by a further convention between the states concerned. In default by agreement on such convention, they will be fixed by an arbitrator appointed by the council of the league of nations.

(6) The stipulations of the present article may be varied at any time by agreement between Austria and the Czecho-Slovak state. After the expiration of ten years from the coming into force of this treaty the conditions under which the Czecho-Slovak state shall enjoy the rights conferred by this article may, in default of agreement by the parties, be modified at the request of either party by an arbitrator designated by the council of the league of nations.

(7) In case of any dispute between the parties as to the interpretation either of this article or of the convention referred to in paragraph 5, this dispute shall be submitted for decision to the permanent court of international justice to be established by the league of nations.

Section IV.—Disputes and Revision of Permanent Clauses.

Article 328.

Disputes which may arise between interested powers with regard to the interpretation and application of this part of the present treaty shall be settled as provided by the league of nations.

Article 329.

At any time the league of nations may recommend the revision of such of the above articles as relate to a permanent administrative regime.

Article 330.

The stipulations in articles 284 to 290, 293, 312, 314 to 316, and 326, shall be subject to revision by the council of the league of nations at any time after three years from the coming into force of the present treaty.

Failing such revision, no allied or associated power can claim after the expiration of the above period of three years the benefit of any of the stipulations in the articles enumerated above on behalf of any portion of its territories in which reciprocity is not accorded in respect of such stipulations. The period of three years during which reciprocity cannot be demanded may be prolonged by the council of the league of nations.

The benefit of the stipulations mentioned above cannot be claimed by states to which territory of the former Austro-Hungarian monarchy has been transferred, or which have arisen out of the dismemberment of that monarchy, except upon the footing of giving in the territory passing under their sovereignty reciprocal treatment to Austria.

Section V.—Special Provision.

Article 331.

Without prejudice to the special obligations imposed on her by the present treaty for the benefit of the allied and associated powers, Austria undertakes to adhere to any general conventions regarding the international regime of transit, waterways, ports or railways which may be concluded by the allied and associated powers, with the approval of the league of nations, within five years of the coming into force of the present treaty.

PART XIII.—LABOR.

Section I.—Organization of Labor.

Whereas the league of nations has for its object the establishment of universal peace, and such a peace can be established only if it is based upon social justice;

And whereas conditions of labor exist involving such injustice, hardship and privation to large numbers of people as to produce unrest so great that the peace and harmony of the world are imperiled; and an improvement of those conditions is urgently required; as, for example, by the regulation of the hours of work, including the establishment of a maximum working day and week, the regulation of the labor supply, the prevention of unemployment, the provision of an adequate living wage, the protection of the worker against sickness, disease and injury arising out of his employment, the protection of children, young persons and women, provision for old age and injury, protection of the interests of workers when employed in countries other than their own, recognition of the principle of freedom of association, the organization of vocational and technical education and other measures;

Whereas also the failure of any nation to adopt humane conditions of labor is an obstacle in the way of other nations which desire to improve the conditions in their own countries;

The high contracting parties, moved by sentiments of justice and humanity as well as by the desire to secure the permanent peace of the world, agree to the following:

Chapter I.—Organization.

Article 332.

A permanent organization is hereby established for the promotion of the objects set forth in the preamble.

The original members of the league of nations shall be the original members of this organization, and hereafter membership of the league of nations shall carry with it membership of the said organization.

Article 333.

The permanent organization shall consist of:

(1) A general conference of representatives of the members, and

(2) An international labor office controlled by the governing body described in article 338.

Article 334.

The meetings of the general conference of representatives of the members shall be held from time to time as occasion may require, and at least once in every year. It shall be composed of four representatives of each of the members, of whom two shall be government delegates and the two others shall be delegates representing respectively the employers and the workpeople of each of the members.

Each delegate may be accompanied by advisers who shall not exceed two in number for each item on the agenda of the meeting. When questions specially affecting women are to be considered by the conference, one at least of the advisers should be a woman.

The members undertake to nominate nongovernment delegates and advisers chosen in agreement with the industrial organizations, if such organizations exist, which are most representative of employers or workpeople, as the case may be, in their respective countries.

Advisers shall not speak except on a request made by the delegate whom they accompany and by the special authorization of the president of the conference, and may not vote.

A delegate may by notice in writing addressed to the president appoint one of his advisers to act as his deputy, and the adviser, while so acting, shall be allowed to speak and vote.

The names of the delegates and their advisers will be communicated to the international labor office by the government of each of the members.

The credentials of delegates and their advisers shall be subject to scrutiny by the conference which may, by two-thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present, refuse to admit any delegate or adviser whom it deems not to have been nominated in accordance with this article.

Article 335.

Every delegate shall be entitled to vote individually on all matters which are taken into consideration by the conference.

If one of the members fails to nominate one of the nongovernment delegates whom it is entitled to nominate, the other nongovernment delegate shall be allowed to sit and speak at the conference, but not to vote.

If in accordance with article 334 the conference refuses admission to a delegate of one of the members, the provisions of the present article shall apply as if that delegate had not been nominated.

Article 336.

The meetings of the conference shall be held at the seat of the league of nations, or at such other place as may be decided by the conference at a previous meeting by two-thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present.

Article 337.

The international labor office shall be established at the seat of the league of nations as part of the organization of the league.

Article 338.

The international labor office shall be under the control of a governing body, consisting of twenty-four persons, appointed in accordance with the following provisions:

The governing body of the international labor office shall be constituted as follows:

Twelve persons representing the governments.

Six persons elected by the delegates to the conference representing the employers.

Six persons elected by the delegates to the conference representing the workers.

Of the twelve persons representing the governments eight shall be nominated by the members which are of the chief industrial importance and four shall be nominated by the members selected for the purpose by the government delegates to the conference, excluding the delegates of the eight members mentioned above.

Any question as to which are the members of the chief industrial importance shall be decided by the council of the league of nations.

The period of office of the members of the governing body will be three years. The method of filling vacancies and other similar questions may be determined by the governing body subject to the approval of the conference.

The governing body shall from time to time elect one of its members to act as its chairman, shall regulate its own procedure and shall fix its own times of meeting. A special meeting shall be held if a written request to that effect is made by at least ten members of the governing body.

Article 339.

There shall be a director of the international labor office, who shall be appointed by the governing body, and, subject to the instructions of the governing body, shall be responsible for the efficient conduct of the international labor office and for such other duties as may be assigned to him.

The director or his deputy shall attend all meetings of the governing body.

Article 340.

The staff of the international labor office shall be appointed by the director, who shall, so far as is possible with due regard to the efficiency of the work of the office, select persons of different nationalities. A certain number of these persons shall be women.

Article 341.

The functions of the international labor office shall include the collection and distribution of information on all subjects relating to the international adjustment of conditions of industrial life and labor, and particularly the examination of subjects which it is proposed to bring before the conference with a view to the conclusion of international conventions, and the conduct of such special investigations as may be ordered by the conference.

It will prepare the agenda for the meetings of the conference.

It will carry out the duties required of it by the provisions of this part of the present treaty in connection with internationad disputes.

It will edit and publish in French and English, and in such other languages as the governing body may think desirable, a periodical paper dealing with problems of industry and employment of international interest.

Generally, in addition to the functions set out in this article, it shall have such other powers and duties as may be assigned to it by the conference.

Article 342.

The government departments of any of the members which deal with questions of industry and employment may communicate directly with the director through the representative of their government on the governing body of the international labor office, or failing any such representative, through such other qualified official as the government may nominate for the purpose.

Article 343.

The international labor office shall be entitled to the assistance of the secretary-general of the league of nations in any matter in which it can be given.

Article 344.

Each of the members will pay the traveling and subsistence expenses of its delegates and their advisers, and of its representatives attending the meeting of the conference or governing body, as the case may be.

All the other expenses of the international labor office and of the meetings of the conference or governing body shall be paid to the director by the secretary-general of the league of nations out of the general funds of the league.

The director shall be responsible to the secretary-general of the league for the proper expenditure of all moneys paid to him in pursuance of this article.

Chapter II.—Procedure.

Article 345.

The agenda for all meetings of the conference will be settled by the governing body, who shall consider any suggestion as to the agenda that may be made by the government of any of the members or by any representative organization recognized for the purpose of article 334.

Article 346.

The director shall act as the secretary of the conference and shall transmit the agenda so as to reach the members four months before the meeting of the conference, and, through them, the nongovernment delegates when appointed.

Article 347.

Any of the governments of the members may formally object to the inclusion of any item or items in the agenda. The grounds for such objection shall be set forth in a reasoned statement addressed to the director, who shall circulate it to all the members of the permanent organization.

Items to which such objection has been made shall not, however, be excluded from the agenda, if at the conference a majority of two-thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present is in favor of considering them.

If the conference decides (otherwise than under the preceding paragraphs) by two-thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present that any subject shall be considered by the conference, that subject shall be included in the agenda for the following meeting.

Article 348.

The conference shall regulate its own procedure, shall elect its own president, and may appoint committees to consider and report on any matter.

Except as otherwise expressly provided in this part of the present treaty, all matters shall be decided by a simple majority of the votes cast by the delegates present.

The voting is void unless the total number of votes cast is equal to half the number of the delegates attending the conference.

Article 349.

The conference may add to any committees which it appoints technical experts, who shall be assessors without power to vote.

Article 350.

When the conference has decided on the adoption of proposals with regard to an item in the agenda, it will rest with the conference to determine whether these proposals should take the form: (a) of a recommendation to be submitted to the members for consideration with a view to effect being given to it by national legislation or otherwise, or (b) of a draft international convention for ratification by the members.

In either case a majority of two-thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present shall be necessary on the final vote for the adoption of the recommendation or draft convention, as the case may be, by the conference.

In framing any recommendation or draft convention of general application the conference shall have due regard to those countries in which climatic conditions, the imperfect development of industrial organization or other special circumstances make the industrial conditions substantially different and shall suggest the modifications, if any, which it considers may be required to meet the case of such countries.

A copy of the recommendation or draft convention shall be authenticated by the signature of the president of the conference and of the director and shall be deposited with the secretary-general of the league of nations. The secretary-general will communicate a certified copy of the recommendation or draft convention to each of the members.

Each of the members undertakes that it will, within the period of one year at most from the closing of the session of the conference, or if it is impossible owing to exceptional circumstances to do so within the period of one year, then at the earliest practicable moment and in no case later than eighteen months from the closing of the session of the conference, bring the recommendation or draft convention before the authority or authorities within whose competence the matter lies, for the enactment of legislation or other action.

In the case of a recommendation, the members will inform the secretary-general of the action taken.

In the case of a draft convention, the member will, if it obtains the consent of the authority or authorities within whose competence the latter lies, communicate the formal ratification of the convention to the secretary-general and will take such action as may be necessary to make effective the provisions of such convention.

If on a recommendation no legislative or other action is taken to make a recommendation effective, or if the draft convention fails to obtain the consent of the authority or authorities within whose competence the matter lies, no further obligation shall rest upon the member.

In the case of a federal state, the power of which to enter into conventions on labor matters is subject to limitations, it shall be in the discretion of that government to treat a draft convention to which such limitations apply as a recommendation only, and the provisions of this article with respect to recommendations shall apply in such case.

The above article shall be interpreted in accordance with the following principle:

In no case shall any member be asked or required, as a result of the adoption of any recommendation or draft convention by the conference, to lessen the protection afforded by its existing legislation to the workers concerned.

Article 351.

Any convention so ratified shall be registered by the secretary-general of the league of nations, but shall only be binding upon the members which ratify it.

Article 352.

If any convention coming before the conference for final consideration fails to secure the support of two-thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present, it shall nevertheless be within the right of any of the members of the permanent organization to agree to such convention among themselves.

Any convention so agreed to shall be communicated by the governments concerned to the secretary-general of the league of nations, who shall register it.

Article 353.

Each of the members agrees to make an annual report to the international labor office on the measures which it has taken to give effect to the provisions of conventions to which it is a party. These reports shall be made in such form and shall contain such particulars as the governing body may request. The director shall lay a summary of these reports before the next meeting of the conference.

Article 354.

In the event of any representation being made to the international labor office by an industrial association of employers or of workers that any of the members has failed to secure in any respect the effective observance within its jurisdiction of any convention to which it is a party, the governing body may communicate this representation to the government against which it is made and may invite that government to make such statement on the subject as it may think fit.

Article 355.

If no statement is received within a reasonable time from the government in question, or if the statement when received is not deemed to be satisfactory by the governing body, the latter shall have the right to publish the representation and the statement, if any, made in reply to it.

Article 356.

Any of the members shall have the right to file a complaint with the international labor office if it is not satisfied that any other member is securing the effective observance of any convention which both have ratified in accordance with the foregoing articles.

The governing body may, if it thinks fit, before referring such a complaint to a commission of inquiry, as hereinafter provided for, communicate with the government in question in the manner described in article 354.

If the governing body does not think it necessary to communicate the complaint to the government in question, or if, when it has made such communication, no statement in reply has been received within a reasonable time which the governing body considers to be satisfactory, the governing body may apply for the appointment of a commission of inquiry to consider the complaints and to report thereon.

The governing body may adopt the same procedure either of its own motion or on receipt of a complaint from a delegate to the conference.

When any matter arising out of articles 355 or 356 is being considered by the governing body, the government in question shall, if not already represented thereon, be entitled to send a representative to take part in the proceedings of the governing body while the matter is under consideration. Adequate notice of the date on which the matter will be considered shall be given to the government in question.

Article 357.

The commission of inquiry shall be constituted in accordance with the following provisions:

Each of the members agrees to nominate within six months of the date on which the present treaty comes into force three persons of industrial experience of whom one shall be a representative of employers, one a representative of workers and one a person of independent standing who shall together form a panel from which the members of the commission of inquiry shall be drawn.

The qualifications of the persons so nominated shall be subject to scrutiny by the governing body, which may by two-thirds of the votes cast by the representatives present refuse to accept the nomination of any person whose qualifications do not in its opinion comply with the requirements of the present article.

Upon the application of the governing body, the secretary-general of the league of nations shall nominate three persons, one from each section of this panel, to constitute the commission of inquiry, and shall designate one of them as the president of the commission. None of these three persons shall be a person nominated to the panel by any member directly concerned in the complaint.

Article 358.

The members agree that in the event of the reference of a complaint to a commission of inquiry under article 356 they will each, whether directly concerned in the complaint or not, place at the disposal of the commission all the information in their possession which bears upon the subject matter of the complaint.

Article 359.

When the commission of inquiry has fully considered the complaint it shall prepare a report embodying its findings on all questions of fact relevant to determining the issue between the parties and containing such recommendations as it may think proper as to the steps which should be taken to meet the complaint and the time within which they should be taken.

It shall also indicate in this report the measures, if any, of an economic character against a defaulting government which it considers to be appropriate, and which it considers other governments would be justified in adopting.

Article 360.

The secretary-general of the league of nations shall communicate the report of the commission of inquiry to each of the governments concerned in the complaint and shall cause it to be published.

Each of these governments shall within one month inform the secretary-general of the league of nations whether or not it accepts the recommendations contained in the report of the commission; and if not, whether it proposes to refer the complaint to the permanent court of international justice of the league of nations.

Article 361.

In the event of any member failing to take the action required by article 350, with regard to a recommendation or draft convention, any other member shall be entitled to refer the matter to the permanent court of international justice.

Article 362.

The decision of the permanent court of international justice in regard to a complaint or matter which has been referred to it in pursuance of article 360 or article 361 shall be final.

Article 363.

The permanent court of international justice may affirm, vary or reverse any of the findings or recommendations of the commission of inquiry, if any, and shall in its decision indicate the measures, if any, of an economic character which it considers to be appropriate, and which other governments would be justified in adopting against a defaulting government.

Article 364.

In the event of any member failing to carry out within the time specified the recommendations, if any, contained in the report of the commission of inquiry or in the decision of the permanent court of international justice, as the case may be, any other member may take against that member the measures of an economic character indicated in the report of the commission or in the decision of the court as appropriate to the case.

Article 365.

The defaulting government may at any time inform the governing body that it has taken the steps necessary to comply with the recommendations of the commission of inquiry or with those in the decision of the permanent court of international justice, as the case may be, and may request it to apply to the secretary-general of the league to constitute a commission of inquiry to verify its contention. In this case the provisions of articles 357, 358, 359, 360, 362 and 363 shall apply, and if the report of the commission of inquiry or the decision of the permanent court of international justice is in favor of the defaulting government, the other governments shall forthwith discontinue the measures of an economic character that they have taken against the defaulting government.

Chapter III.—General.

Article 366.

The members engage to apply conventions which they have ratified in accordance with the provisions of this part of the present treaty to their colonies, protectorates and possessions which are not fully self-governing:

(1) Except where owing to the local conditions the convention is inapplicable, or

(2) Subject to such modifications as may be necessary to adapt the convention to local conditions.

And each of the members shall notify to the international labor office the action taken in respect of each of its colonies, protectorates and possessions which are not fully self-governing.

Article 367.

Amendments to this part of the present treaty which are adopted by the conference by a majority of two-thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present shall take effect when ratified by the states whose representatives compose the council of the league of nations and by three-fourths of the members.

Article 368.

Any question or dispute relating to the interpretation of this part of the present treaty or of any subsequent convention concluded by the members in pursuance of the provisions of this part of the present treaty shall be referred for decision to the permanent court of international justice.

Chapter IV.—Transitory Provisions.

Article 369.

The first meeting of the conference shall take place in October, 1919. The place and agenda for this meeting shall be as specified in the annex hereto.

Arrangements for the convening and the organization of the first meeting of the conference will be made by the government designated for the purpose in the said annex. That government shall be assisted in the preparation of the documents for submission to the conference by an international committee constituted as provided in the said annex.

The expenses of the first meeting and of all subsequent meetings held before the league of nations has been able to establish a general fund, other than the expenses of delegates and their advisers, will be borne by the members in accordance with the apportionment of the expenses of the international bureau of the universal postal union.

Article 370.

Until the league of nations has been constituted all communications which under the provisions of the foregoing articles should be addressed to the secretary-general of the league will be preserved by the director of the international labor office, who will transmit them to the secretary-general of the league.

Article 371.

Pending the creation of a permanent court of international justice, disputes which in accordance with this part of the present treaty would be submitted to it for decision will be referred to a tribunal of three persons appointed by the council of the league of nations.

Annex—First Meeting of Annual Labor Conference, 1919.

The place of meeting will be Washington.

The government of the United States of America is requested to convene the conference.

The international organizing committee will consist of seven members, appointed by the United States of America, Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium and Switzerland. The committee may, if it thinks necessary, invite other members to appoint representatives.

Agenda:

(1) Application of principle of the eight hour day or of the forty-eight hour week.

(2) Question of preventing or providing against unemployment.

(3) Women's employment.

(a) Before and after childbirth, including the question of maternity benefit;

(b) During the night;

(c) In unhealthy processes.

(4) Employment of children:

(a) Minimum age of employment;

(b) During the night;

(c) In unhealthy processes.

(5) Extension and application of the international conventions adopted at Berne in 1906 on the prohibition of night work for women employed in industry and the prohibition of the use of white phosphorus in the manufacture of matches.

Section II.—General Principles.

Article 372.

The high contracting parties, recognizing that the well being, physical, moral and intellectual, of industrial wage earners is of supreme international importance, having framed, in order to further this great end, the permanent machinery provided for in section I and associated with that of the league of nations.

They recognize that differences of climate, habits and customs, of economic opportunity and industrial tradition, make strict uniformity in the conditions of labor difficult of immediate attainment. But, holding as they do that labor should not be regarded merely as an article of commerce, they think that there are methods and principles for regulating labor conditions which all industrial communities should endeavor to apply, so far as their special circumstances will permit.

Among these methods and principles, the following seem to the high contracting parties to be of special and urgent importance:

1. The guiding principle above enunciated that labor should not be regarded merely as a commodity or article of commerce.

2. The right of association for all lawful purposes by the employed as well as by the employers.

3. The payment to the employed of a wage adequate to maintain a reasonable standard of life as this is understood in their time and country.

4. The adoption of an eight hour day or a forty-eight hour week as the standard to be aimed at where it has not already been attained.

5. The adoption of a weekly rest of at least twenty-four hours, which should include Sunday wherever practicable.

6. The abolition of child labor and the imposition of such limitations on the labor of young persons as shall permit the continuation of their education and assure their proper physical development.

7. The principle that men and women should receive equal remuneration for work of equal value.

8. The standard set by law in each country with respect to the conditions of labor should have due regard to the equitable economic treatment of all workers lawfully resident therein.

9. Each state should make provision for a system of inspection, in which women should take part, in order to insure the enforcement of the laws and regulations for the protection of the employed.

Without claiming that these methods and principles are either complete or final the high contracting parties are of opinion that they are well fitted to guide the policy of the league of nations; and that, if adopted by the industrial communities who are members of the league and safeguarded in practice by an adequate system of such inspection, they will confer lasting benefits upon the wage earners of the world.

PART XIV.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

Article 373.

Austria undertakes to recognize and to accept the conventions made or to be made by the allied and associated powers or any of them with any other power as to the traffic in arms and in spirituous liquors, and also as to the other subjects dealt with in the general acts of Berlin of Feb. 26, 1885, and of Brussels of July 2, 1890, and the conventions completing or modifying the same.

Article 374.

The high contracting parties declare and place on record that they have taken note of the treaty signed by the government of the French republic on July 17, 1918, with his serene highness the prince of Monaco defining the relations between France and the principality.

Article 375.

The high contracting parties, while they recognize the guaranties stipulated by the treaties of 1815, and especially by the act of Nov. 20, 1815, in favor of Switzerland, the said guarantees constituting international obligations for the maintenance of peace, declare nevertheless that the provisions of these treaties, conventions, declarations and other supplementary acts concerning the neutralized zone of Savoy, as laid down in paragraph 1 of article 92 of the final act of the congress of Vienna and in paragraph 2 of article 3 of the treaty of Paris of Nov. 20, 1815, are no longer consistent with present conditions. For this reason the high contracting parties take note of the agreement reached between the French government and the Swiss government for the abrogation of the stipulations relating to this zone which are and remain abrogated.

The high contracting parties also agree that the stipulations of the treaties of 1815 and of the other supplementary acts concerning the free zones of Upper Savoy and the Gex district are no longer consistent with present conditions, and that it is for France and Switzerland to come to an agreement together with a view to settling between themselves the status of these territories under such conditions as shall be considered suitable by both countries.

Annex I.

The Swiss federal council has informed the French government on May 5, 1919, that after examining the provisions of article 435 of the peace conditions presented to Germany by the allied and associated powers in a like spirit of sincere friendship it has happily reached the conclusion that it was possible to acquiesce in it under the following conditions and reservations:

(1) The neutralized zone of Haute-Savoie:

(a) It will be understood that as long as the federal chambers have not ratified the agreement come to between the two governments concerning the abrogation of the stipulations in respect of the neutralized zone of Savoy, nothing will be definitively settled, on one side or the other, in regard to this subject.

(b) The assent given by the Swiss government to the abrogation of the above mentioned stipulations presupposes, in conformity with the text adopted, the recognition of the guaranties formulated in favor of Switzerland by the treaties of 1815 and particularly by the declaration of Nov. 20, 1815.

(c) The agreement between the governments of France and Switzerland for the abrogation of the above mentioned stipulations will only be considered as valid if the treaty of peace contains this article in its present wording. In addition the parties to the treaty of peace should endeavor to obtain the assent of the signatory powers of the treaties of 1815 and of the declaration of Nov. 20, 1815, which are not signatories of the present treaty of peace.

(2) Free zone of Haute-Savoie and the district of Gex:

(a) The federal council makes the most express reservations to the interpretation to be given to the statement mentioned in the last paragraph of the above article for insertion in the treaty of peace, which provides that "the stipulations of the treaties of 1815 and other supplementary acts concerning the free zones of Haute-Savoie and the Gex district are no longer consistent with present conditions." The federal council would not wish that its acceptance of the above wording should lead to the conclusion that it would agree to the suppression of a system intended to give neighboring territory the benefit of a special regime which is appropriate to the geographical and economical situation and which has been well tested.

In the opinion of the federal council the question is not the modification of the customs system of the zones as set up by the treaties mentioned above, but only the regulation in a manner more appropriate to the economic conditions of the present day of the terms of the exchange of goods between the regions in question. The federal council has been led to make the preceding observations by the perusal of the draft convention concerning the future constitution of the zones which was annexed to the note of April 26 from the French government. While making the above reservations the federal council declares its readiness to examine in the most friendly spirit any proposals which the French government may deem it convenient to make on the subject.

(b) It is conceded that the stipulations of the treaties of 1815 and other supplementary acts relative to the free zones will remain in force until a new arrangement is come to between France and Switzerland to regulate matters in this territory.

Annex II.

The French government have addressed to the Swiss government, on May 18, 1919, the following note in reply to the communication set out in the preceding paragraph:

In a note dated May 5 the Swiss legation in Paris was good enough to inform the government of the French republic that the federal government adhered to the proposed article to be inserted in the treaty of peace between the allied and associated governments and Germany.

The French government have taken note with much pleasure of the agreement thus reached, and, at their request, the proposed article, which had been accepted by the allied and associated governments, has been inserted under No. 435 in the peace conditions presented to the German plenipotentiaries.

The Swiss government, in their note of May 5, on this subject, have expressed various views and reservations.

Concerning the observations relating to the free zones of Haute-Savoie and the Gex district, the French government have the honor to observe that the provisions of the last paragraph of article 435 are so clear that their purport cannot be misapprehended, especially where it implies that no other power but France and Switzerland will in future be interested in that question.

The French government, on their part, are anxious to protect the interests of the French territories concerned, and, with that object, having their special situation in view, they bear in mind the desirability of assuring them a suitable customs regime and determining, in a manner better suited to present conditions, the methods of exchanges between these territories and the adjacent Swiss territories, while taking into account the reciprocal interests of both regions.

It is understood that this must in no way prejudice the right of France to adjust her customs line in this region in conformity with her political frontier, as is done on the other portions of her territorial boundaries, and as was done by Switzerland long ago on her own boundaries in this region.

The French government are pleased to note on this subject in what a friendly disposition the Swiss government take this opportunity of declaring their willingness to consider any French proposal dealing with the system to be substituted for the present regime of the said free zones, which the French government intend to formulate in the same friendly spirit.

Moreover the French government have no doubt that the provisional maintenance of the regime of 1815 as to the free zones referred to in the above mentioned paragraph of the note from the Swiss legation of May 5, whose object is to provide for the passage from the present regime to the conventional regime, will cause no delay whatsoever in the establishment of the new situation which has been found necessary by the two governments. This remark applies also to the ratification by the federal chambers, dealt with in paragraph 1 (a), of the Swiss note of May 5, under the heading "Neutralized Zone of Haute-Savoie."

Article 376.

The allied and associated powers agree that where Christian religious missions were being maintained by Austrian societies or persons in territory belonging to them, or of which the government is entrusted to them in accordance with the present treaty, the property which these missions or missionary societies possessed including that of trading societies whose profits were devoted to the support of missions, shall continue to be devoted to missionary purposes. In order to insure the due execution of this undertaking the allied and associated governments will hand over such property to boards of trustees appointed by or approved by the governments and composed of persons holding the faith of the mission whose property is involved.

The allied and associated governments, while continuing to maintain full control as to the individuals by whom the missions are conducted, will safeguard the interests of such missions.

Austria, taking note of the above undertaking, agrees to accept all arrangements made or to be made by the allied or associated government concerned for carrying on the work of the said missions or trading societies and waives all claims on their behalf.

Article 377.

Without prejudice to the provisions of the present treaty, Austria undertakes not to put forward directly or indirectly against any allied or associated power signatory of the present treaty any pecuniary claim based on events which occurred at any time before the coming into force of the present treaty.

The present stipulation will bar completely and finally all claims of this nature, which will be thenceforward extinguished, whoever may be the parties in interest.

Article 378.

Austria accepts and recognizes as valid and binding all decrees and orders concerning Austro-Hungarian ships and Austrian goods and all orders relating to the payment of costs made by any prize court of any of the allied or associated powers, and undertakes not to put forward any claim rising out of such decrees or orders on behalf of any Austrian national.

The allied and associated powers reserve the right to examine in such manner as they may determine all decisions and orders of Austro-Hungarian prize courts, whether affecting the property rights of nationals of those powers or of neutral powers. Austria agrees to furnish copies of all the documents constituting the record of the cases, including the decisions and orders made, and to accept and give effect to the recommendations made after such examination of the cases.

Article 379.

The high contracting parties agree that, in the absence of a subsequent agreement to the contrary, the chairman of any commission established by the present treaty shall in the event of an equality of votes be entitled to a second vote.

Article 380.

Except where otherwise provided in the present treaty, in all cases where the treaty provides for the settlement of a question affecting particularly certain states by means of a special convention to be concluded between the states concerned, it is understood by the high contracting parties that difficulties arising in this connection shall, until Austria is admitted to membership of the league of nations, be settled by the principal allied and associated powers.

Article 381.

In the present treaty the expression "former Austrian empire" includes Bosnia and Herzegovina except where the text implies the contrary. This provision shall not prejudice the rights and obligations of Hungary in such territory.

The present treaty, in French, in English and in Italian, shall be ratified. In case of divergence the French text shall prevail, except in parts I. (Covenant of the League of Nations) and XII. (Labor), where the French and English texts shall be of equal force.

The deposit of ratifications shall be made at Paris as soon as possible.

Powers of which the seat of the government is outside Europe will be entitled merely to inform the government of the French republic through their diplomatic representative at Paris that their ratification has been given; in that case they must transmit the instrument of ratification as soon as possible.

A first proces-verbal of the deposit of ratifications will be drawn up as soon as the treaty has been ratified by Austria on the one hand, and by three of the principal allied and associated powers on the other hand.

From the date of this first proces-verbal the treaty will come into force between the high contracting parties who have ratified it. For the determination of all periods of time provided for in the present treaty this date will be the date of the coming into force of the treaty.

In all other respects the treaty will enter into force for each power at the date of the deposit of its ratification.

The French government will transmit to all the signatory powers a certified copy of the proces-verbaux of the deposit of ratifications.

In faith whereof the above named plenipotentiaries have signed the present treaty.

Done at St. Germain-en-Laye the 10th day of September 1919, in a single copy which will remain deposited in the archives of the French republic, and of which authenticated copies will be transmitted to each of the signatory powers.

AMERICAN TREATY WITH FRANCE.

On July 29 President Wilson transmitted to the senate a treaty between France and the United States with the following brief explanatory message:

"Gentlemen of the senate: I take pleasure in laying before you a treaty with the republic of France, the object of which is to secure that republic of the immediate aid of the United States of America in case of any unprovoked movement of aggression against her on the part of Germany. I earnestly hope that the treaty will meet with your cordial approval and will receive an early ratification at your hands, along with the treaty of peace with Germany.

"Now that you have had an opportunity to examine the great document I presented to you two weeks ago, it seems opportune to lay before you this treaty, which is meant to be, in effect, a part of it. It was signed on the same day with the treaty of peace and is intended as a temporary supplement to it.

"It is believed that the treaty of peace with Germany itself provides adequate protection to France against aggression from her recent enemy on the east, but the years immediately ahead of us contain many incalculable possibilities. The covenant of the league of nations provides for military action for the protection of its members only upon advice of the council of the league—advice given, it is to be presumed, only upon deliberation and acted upon by each of the governments of the member states only if its own judgment justifies such action.

"The object of the special treaty with France which I now submit to you is to provide for immediate military assistance to France by the United States in case of any unprovoked movement of aggression against her by Germany without waiting for the advice of the council of the league of nations that such action be taken.

"It is to be an arrangement not independent of the league of nations but under it. It is therefore expressly provided that this treaty shall be made the subject of consideration at the same time with the treaty of peace with Germany: that this special arrangement shall receive the approval of the council of the league; and that this special provision for the safety of France shall remain in force only until, upon the application of one of the parties to it, the council of the league, acting, if necessary, by a majority vote, shall agree that the provisions of the covenant of the league afford her sufficient protection.

"I was moved to sign this treaty by considerations which will, I hope, seem as persuasive and as irresistible to you as they seemed to me. We are bound to France by ties of friendship which we have always regarded, and shall always regard, as peculiarly sacred. She assisted us to win our freedom as a nation. It is seriously to be doubted whether we could have won it without her gallant and timely aid. We have recently had the privilege of assisting in driving enemies, who were also enemies of the world, from her soil; but that does not pay our debt to her. Nothing can pay such a debt. She now desires that we should promise to lend our great force to keep her safe against the power she has had most reason to fear. Another great nation volunteers the same promise. It is one of the fine reversals of history that that other nation should be the very power from whom France fought to set us free. A new day has dawned. Old antagonisms are forgotten. The common cause of freedom and enlightenment has created new comradeships and a new perception of what it is wise and necessary for great nations to do to free the world of intolerable fear. Two governments who wish to be members of the league of nations ask leave of the council of the league to be permitted to go to the assistance of a friend whose situation has been found to be one of peculiar peril, without awaiting the advice of the league to act.

"It is by taking such pledges as this that we prove ourselves faithful to the utmost to the high obligations of gratitude and tested friendship. Such an act as this seems to me one of the proofs that we are a people that sees the true heart of duty and prefers honor to its own separate course of peace.

ASSISTANCE TO FRANCE IN THE EVENT OF UNPROVOKED AGGRESSION BY GERMANY.

Agreement Between the United States and France, Signed at Versailles June 28, 1919.

Whereas the United States of America and the French republic are equally animated by the desire to maintain the peace of the world so happily restored by the treaty of peace signed at Versailles the 28th day of June, 1919, putting an end to the war begun by the aggression of the German empire and ended by the defeat of that power; and

Whereas the United States of America and the French republic are fully persuaded that an unprovoked movement of aggression by Germany against France would not only violate both the letter and the spirit of the treaty of Versailles, to which the United States of America and the French republic are parties, thus exposing France anew to the intolerable burdens of an unprovoked war, but that such an aggression on the part of Germany would be and is so regarded by the treaty of Versailles as a hostile act against all the powers signatory to that treaty and as calculated to disturb the peace of the world by involving, inevitably and directly, the states of Europe, and indirectly, as experience has amply and unfortunately demonstrated, the world at large; and

Whereas the United States of America and the French republic fear that the stipulations relating to the left bank of the Rhine contained in the treaty of Versailles may not at first provide adequate security and protection to France, on the one hand, and the United States of America as one of the signatories of the treaty of Versailles, on the other:

Therefore the United States of America and the French republic having decided to conclude a treaty to effect these necessary purposes, Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States of America, and Robert Lansing, secretary of state of the United States, specially authorized thereto by the president of the United States, and Georges Clemenceau, president of the council, minister of war, and Stephen Pichon, minister of foreign affairs, specially authorized thereto by Raymond Poincare, president of the French republic, have agreed upon the following articles:

Article I.

In case the following stipulations relating to the left bank of the Rhine contained in the treaty of peace with Germany signed at Versailles the 28th day of June, 1919, by the United States of America, the French republic and the British empire, among other powers—

"Art. 42. Germany is forbidden to maintain or construct any fortifications either on the left bank of the Rhine or on the right bank to the west of a line drawn 50 kilometers to the east of the Rhine.

"Art. 43. In the area defined above the maintenance and assembly of armed forces, either permanently or temporarily, and military maneuvers of any kind, as well as the upkeep of all permanent works for mobilization, are in the same way forbidden.

"Art. 44. In case Germany violates in any manner whatever the provisions of articles 42 and 43 she shall be regarded as committing a hostile act against the powers signatory of the present treaty and as calculated to disturb the peace of the world."

—may not at first provide adequate security and protection to France, the United States of America shall be bound to come immediately to her assistance in the event of any unprovoked movement of aggression against her being made by Germany.

Article II.

The present treaty, in similar terms with the treaty of even date for the same purpose concluded between Great Britain and the French republic, a copy of which treaty is annexed hereto, will only come into force when the latter is ratified.

Article III.

The present treaty must be submitted to the council of the league of nations and must be recognized by the council, acting if need be by a majority, as an engagement which is consistent with the covenant of the league. It will continue in force until on the application of one of the parties to it the council, acting if need be by a majority, agrees that the league itself affords sufficient protection.

Article IV.

The present treaty will be submitted to the senate of the United States at the same time as the treaty of Versailles is submitted to the senate for its advice and consent to ratification. It will be submitted before ratification to the French chambers of deputies for approval. The ratification thereof will be exchanged on the deposit of ratifications of the treaty of Versailles at Paris or as soon thereafter as shall be possible.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries, to wit, on the part of the United States of America, Woodrow Wilson, president, and Robert Lansing, secretary of state, of the United States; and on the part of the French republic, Georges Clemenceau, president of the council of ministers, minister of war, and Stephen Pichon, minister of foreign affairs, have signed the above articles both in the English and French languages, and they have hereunto affixed their seals.

Done in duplicate at the city of Versailles on the 28th day of June, in the year of our Lord 1919, and the one hundred and forty-third of the Independence of the United States of America.

BRITISH TREATY WITH FRANCE.

Assistance to France in the Event of Unprovoked Aggression by Germany.

Whereas there is a danger that the stipulations relating to the left bank of the Rhine contained in the treaty of peace, signed this day at Versailles, may not at first provide adequate security and protection to the French republic; and

Whereas his Britannic majesty is willing, subject to the consent of his parliament and provided that a similar obligation is entered into by the United States of America, to undertake to support the French government in the case of an unprovoked movement of aggression being made against France by Germany; and

Whereas his Britannic majesty and the president of the French republic have determined to conclude a treaty to that effect and have named as their plenipotentiaries for the purpose; that is to say:

His majesty the king of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas, emperor of India: the Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, M. P., first lord of his treasury and prime minister; the Rt. Hon. Arthur James Balfour, O. M., M. P., his secretary of state for foreign affairs.

The president of the French republic: M. Georges Clemenceau, president of the council, minister of war; M. Stephen Pichon, minister of foreign affairs; who having communicated their full powers found in good and due form have agreed as follows:

Article I.

In case the following stipulations relating to the left bank of the Rhine contained in the treaty of peace with Germany signed at Versailles the 28th day of June, 1919, by the British empire, the French republic, and the United States of America, among other powers—

"Art. 42. Germany is forbidden to maintain or construct any fortifications either on the left bank of the Rhine or on the right bank to the west of a line drawn 50 kilometers to the east of the Rhine.

"Art. 43. In the area defined above the maintenance and assembly of armed forces, either permanently or temporarily, and military maneuvers of any kind, as well as the upkeep of all permanent works for mobilization, are in the same way forbidden.

"Art. 44. In case Germany violates in any manner whatever the provisions of articles 42 and 43 she shall be regarded as committing a hostile act against the powers signatory of the present treaty and as calculated to disturb the peace of the world."

—may not at first provide adequate security and protection to France, Great Britain agrees to come immediately to her assistance in the event of any unprovoked movement of aggression against her being made by Germany.

Article II.

The present treaty, in similar terms with the treaty of even date for the same purpose concluded between the French republic and the United States of America, a copy of which treaty is annexed hereto, will only come into force when the latter is ratified.

Article III.

The present treaty must be submitted to the council of the league of nations and must be recognized by the council, acting if need be by a majority, as an engagement which is consistent with the covenant of the league; it will continue in force until, on the application of one of the parties to it, the council, acting if need be by a majority, agrees that the league itself affords sufficient protection.

Article IV.

The present treaty shall, before ratification by his majesty, be submitted to parliament for approval.

It shall, before ratification by the president of the French republic, be submitted to the French chambers for approval.

Article V.

The present treaty shall impose no obligation upon any of the dominions of the British empire unless and until it is approved by the parliament of the dominion concerned.

The present treaty shall be ratified and shall, subject to Articles II. and IV., come into force at the same time as the treaty of peace with Germany of even date comes into force for the British empire and the French republic.

In faith whereof the above named plenipotentiaries have signed the present treaty, drawn up in the English and French languages.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR CONFERENCE.

In accordance with the annex to the labor section of the peace treaty with Germany (see page 617 this volume) the government of the United States summoned the first international labor conference to hold its sessions in Washington, D. C., beginning Oct. 29, 1919. On that date the representatives of thirty-six countries assembled in the Pan-American building in the national capital and began their deliberations. These were still in progress late in November. The United States was put in a somewhat awkward position by the failure of the senate to ratify the peace treaty, but the delegates invited representatives of American labor to be present unofficially. Addresses were made by W. B. Wilson, secretary of labor, and Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and the former was elected president of the conference.

Delegates sent by German and Austrian labor bodies were present, being admitted by a vote of seventy-one to one. A French delegate was the only one voting in opposition. The matters considered at the early sessions of the conference included the eight hour day, the forty-eight hour week and unemployment.

INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF WORKING WOMEN.

An international congress of working women was held in Washington, D. C., from Oct. 28 to Nov. 6, 1919. Fifteen countries were represented by delegates. Mrs. Raymond Robins of Chicago, president of the National Women's Trade Union league, under the auspices of which the conference was held, presided. Subjects of importance to working women were considered and resolutions asking state aid for mothers, an eight hour day and forty-four hour week and a weekly rest period of at least one day and a half were adopted. It was decided to postpone the whole question of a permanent organization until 1920.

ARMISTICE DAY OBSERVED.

Nov. 11, 1919, the first anniversary of the cessation of fighting in the great war under the terms of the armistice, was generally observed throughout the United States and the allied countries in Europe. The day was not observed as a holiday but was marked by numerous meetings and by messages to the people from men who took a leading part in the war and in the peace conference. President Poincare of France sent a special message to the American people, while President Wilson from his sick room in the White House issued the following statement:

"A year ago to-day our enemies laid down their arms in accordance with an armistice which rendered them impotent to renew hostilities, and gave to the world an assured opportunity to reconstruct its shattered order and to work out in peace a new and juster set of international relations.

"The soldiers and people of the European allies had fought and endured for more than four years to uphold the barrier of civilization against the aggressions of armed force. We ourselves had been in the conflict something more than a year and a half.

"With splendid forgetfulness of mere personal concerns, we remodeled our industries, concentrated our financial resources, increased our agricultural output and assembled a great army, so that at the last our power was a decisive factor in the victory. We were able to bring the vast resources, material and moral, of a great and free people to the assistance of our associates in Europe who had suffered and sacrificed without limit in the cause for which we fought.

"Out of this victory there arose new possibilities of political freedom and economic concert. The war showed us the strength of great nations acting together for high purposes, and the victory of arms foretells the enduring conquests which can be made in peace when nations act justly, and in furtherance of the common interests of men.

"To us in America the reflections of armistice day will be filled with solemn pride in the heroism of those who died in the country's service, and with gratitude for the victory, both because of the thing from which it has freed us and because of the opportunity it has given America to show her sympathy with peace and justice in the councils of nations.

LEGION VETERANS SHOT BY I. W. W.

While armistice day was being celebrated in Centralia, Wash., Nov. 11, 1919, three members of the American legion recently returned from France were shot and killed as the procession in which they were taking part passed the Industrial Workers of the World hall. Another veteran was killed a little later. Four others were wounded. Members of the legion immediately started in pursuit of the men who had done the shooting. Britt Smith, secretary of the local branch of the I. W. W., was caught and lynched. In the evening a mob wrecked the headquarters of the communist labor party and the offices of the World, a socialist organ. It was said that the shooting was a premeditated affair and that the purpose was to get even with certain soldiers who had been active in combating the activities of the "reds" in the district. A company of state guards was sent to Centralia on the 11th and restored order.

CARNEGIE REPORT ON COST OF THE WAR.

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace made a comprehensive report Nov. 17, 1919, on the direct and indirect costs of the war. The direct cost in money, it said, amounted to $186,000,000,000 and the indirect costs to almost as much more. The capitalized value of soldier lives lost was placed at $33,551,276,280. Other items in the direct and indirect losses were these:

Property loss on land, $29,960,000,000; on water, $6,800,000,000; on production, $45,000,000,000; war relief, $1,000,000,000; loss to neutrals, $1,750,000,000; total indirect costs to nations, belligerent and neutral, $151,612,542,560.

The number of known dead in the war is placed at 9,998,771 and of the presumed dead 2,991,800—a total of 12,990,571.

The report was prepared by Ernest L. Bogart, professor of economics in the University of Illinois.

On the preceding pages of this volume will be found the chief fruits of the great peace conference held in Paris beginning formally Jan. 18, 1919, and continuing almost to the closing days of the year. The full text of the treaty of peace with Germany, including the covenant of the league of nations which caused such a worldwide discussion, is reproduced on pages 549-620; of the treaty with Poland on pages 620-624; and of the treaty of peace with Austria on pages 625-681. It now remains to tell something of the way in which these results were brought about and to recount some of the more dramatic incidents attending the negotiations.

In view of the fact that President Wilson's "fourteen points" as formulated by him in a speech before the American congress on Jan. 8, 1918, formed the basis of most of the claims laid before the peace conference and figured largely in the negotiations they are reprinted here for convenience of reference:

No Private Understandings.

"I. Open covenants of peace, openly arrived at, after which there shall be no private international understandings of any kind, but diplomacy shall proceed always frankly and in the public view.

Freedom of Seas.

"II. Absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas outside territorial waters, alike in peace and in war, except as the seas may be closed in whole or in part by international action for the enforcement of international covenants.

No Economic Barriers.

"III. The removal, so far as possible, of all economic barriers and the establishment of an equality of trade conditions among all the nations consenting to the peace and associating themselves for its maintenance.

Reduce National Armaments.

"IV. Adequate guaranties given and taken that national armaments will be reduced to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety.

Colonial Claims.

"V. A free, open minded and absolutely impartial adjustment of all colonial claims, based upon a strict observance of the principle that in determining all such questions of sovereignty the interests of the populations concerned must have equal weight with the equitable claims of the government whose title is to be determined.

Russian Territory.

"VI. The evacuation of all Russian territory and such a settlement of all questions affecting Russia as will secure the best and freest co-operation of the other nations of the world in obtaining for her an unhampered and unembarrassed opportunity for the independent determination of her own political development and national policy and assure her of a sincere welcome into the society of free nations under institutions of her own choosing, and, more than a welcome, assistance also of every kind that she may need and may herself desire. The treatment accorded Russia by her sister nations in the months to come will be the acid test of their good will, of their comprehension of her needs as distinguished from their own interests and of their intelligent and unselfish sympathy.

Restoration of Belgium.

"VII. Belgium, the whole world will agree, must be evacuated and restored, without any attempt to limit the sovereignty which she enjoys in common with all other free nations. No other single act will serve as this will serve to restore confidence among the nations in the laws which they have themselves set and determined for the government of their relations with one another. Without this healing act the whole structure and validity of international law is forever impaired.

Alsace-Lorraine to France.

"VIII. All French territory should be freed and the invaded portions restored and the wrong done to France by Prussia in 1871 in the matter of Alsace-Lorraine, which has unsettled the peace of the world for nearly fifty years, should be righted in order that peace may once more be made secure in the interest of all.

New Frontiers for Italy.

"IX. A readjustment of the frontiers of Italy should be effected along clearly recognizable lines of nationality.

Autonomy in Austria-Hungary.

"X. The peoples of Austria-Hungary, whose place among the nations we wish to see safeguarded and assured, should be accorded the freest opportunity of autonomous development.

Roumania, Serbia and Montenegro.

"XI. Roumania, Serbia and Montenegro should be evacuated; occupied territories restored; Serbia accorded free and secure access to the sea, and the relations of the several Balkan states to one another determined by friendly counsel along historically established lines of allegiance and nationality; and international guaranties of the political and economic independence and territorial integrity of the several Balkan states should be entered into.

Autonomy in Turkey.

"XII. The Turkish portions of the present Ottoman empire should be assured a secure sovereignty, but the other nationalities which are now under Turkish rule should be assured an undoubted security of life and an absolutely unmolested opportunity of autonomous development, and the Dardanelles should be permanently opened as a free passage to the ships and commerce of all nations under international guaranties.

For an Independent Poland.

"XIII. An independent Polish state should be erected which should include the territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations, which should be assured a free and secure access to the sea and whose political and economic independence and territorial integrity should be guaranteed by international covenant.

League of Nations.

"XIV. A general association of nations must be formed under specific covenants for the purpose of affording mutual guaranties of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small states alike."

PRELIMINARY MEETINGS.

Delegates to the peace conference assembled in Paris early in January, 1919 and meetings, formal and informal, took place at which the groundwork for the congress was laid. There was an exchange of views between the representatives of the leading powers at the French foreign office on Jan. 12. Methods of procedure, representation and other matters of importance were discussed. This was the first meeting of what was called the "supreme council," consisting in this instance of President Wilson and the premiers and foreign ministers of the four great powers, the United States, Great Britain, France and Italy. One of the things which had already been decided upon was that the real work of the congress was to be done at the Quai D'Orsay, or French foreign office in Paris, and not at Versailles, where, however, the actual signing of the treaty was to take place.

One of the first problems facing the peace delegates was the question of publicity of the proceedings. Newspaper correspondents asked that they be admitted to the sessions of the conference and to report them without restrictions, their contention being based on the first of President Wilson's fourteen points that "diplomacy shall proceed always frankly and in the public view." The matter was considered at a meeting of the supreme council Jan. 17 and the decision was arrived at that the difficult and delicate nature of the negotiations precluded publicity until after conclusions had been reached. "If," said the council, "premature publicity is given to the negotiations the proceedings of the peace conference would be interminably protracted and the delegates would be forced to speak not only of the business before the conference, but to concern themselves with the controversies which had been raised by the account of their proceedings outside."

With regard to the full conferences the following rule was adopted:

"Representatives of the press shall be admitted to the meetings of the full conference, but upon necessary occasions the deliberations of the conference may be held in camera."

CONFERENCE REGULATIONS.

Though the regulations governing the work of the conference were not published until July 19, the day after the first formal session of the congress, they were agreed upon before that date in the preliminary meetings. They were as follows:

1. The conference assembled to fix the conditions of peace, first in the preliminaries of peace and then in the definite treaty of peace, shall include the representatives of the belligerent allied and associated powers.

The belligerent powers with general interests, the United States of America, the British empire, France, Italy, and Japan, shall take part in all meetings and commissions.

The belligerent powers with particular interests, Belgium, Brazil, the British dominions and India, China, Cuba, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Hedjaz, Honduras, Liberia, Nicaragua, Panama, Poland, Portugal, Roumania, Serbia, Siam and the Czecho-Slovak republic, shall take part in the sittings at which questions concerning them are discussed.

The powers in a state of diplomatic rupture with the enemy powers, Bolivia, Ecuador, Peru, and Uruguay, shall take part in the sittings at which questions concerning them are discussed.

The neutral powers and states in process of formation may be heard either orally or in writing when summoned by the powers with general interests at sittings devoted especially to the examination of questions directly concerning them, but only so far as these questions are concerned.

2. The powers shall be represented by plenipotentiary delegates to the number of: Five for the United States of America, the British empire, France, Italy and Japan; three for Belgium, Brazil and Serbia; two for China, Greece, the king of Hedjaz, Poland, Portugal, Roumania, Siam and the Czecho-Slovak republic; one for Cuba, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Liberia, Nicaragua and Panama; one for Bolivia, Ecuador, Peru and Uruguay.

The British dominions and India shall be represented as follows: Two delegates each for Australia, Canada, South Africa and India, including the native states; one delegate for New Zealand.

Although the number of delegates may not exceed the figures above mentioned, each delegation has the right to avail itself of the panel system. The representation of the dominions, including Newfoundland, and of India, may be included in the representation of the British empire by the panel system.

Montenegro shall be represented by one delegate, but the rules concerning the designation of this delegate shall not be fixed until the moment when the political situation of this country shall have been cleared up.

The conditions of the representation of Russia shall be fixed by the conference at the moment when the matters concerning Russia are examined.

3. Each delegation of plenipotentiaries may be accompanied by technical delegates properly accredited and by two stenographers.

The technical delegates may be present at the sittings for the purpose of furnishing information which may be asked of them. They shall be allowed to speak for the purpose of giving any desired explanations.

4. The delegates take precedence according to the alphabetical order, in French, of the powers.

5. The conference will be declared open by the president of the French republic. The president of the council of French ministers will be invested temporarily with the chairmanship immediately after this. (M. Clemenceau was elected permanent chairman of the conference.) A committee composed of one plenipotentiary of each of the great allied or associated powers shall proceed at once to the authentication of the credentials of all the members present.

6. In the course of the first meeting the conference will proceed to appoint a permanent president and four vice-presidents chosen from the plenipotentiaries of the great powers in alphabetical order.

7. A secretariat, appointed from outside the plenipotentiaries, composed of one representative of the United States of America, one of the British empire, one of France, one of Italy and one of Japan, will be submitted to the approval of the conference by the president, who will be the controlling authority responsible for its operations.

This secretariat will be intrusted with the care of drafting the protocols of the meeting, of classifying the archives, of providing for the administration and organization of the conference, and generally of insuring the regular and punctual working of the service intrusted to it. The head of the secretariat shall have charge of and be responsible for the protocols and archives.

The archives always will be open to the members of the conference.

8. The publicity of the proceedings shall be insured by official communiques prepared by the secretariat and made public. In case of disagreement as to the drafting of these communiques, the matter shall be referred to the principal plenipotentiaries or their representatives.

9. Reserved.

10. All documents intended for inclusion in the protocols must be handed in in writing by the plenipotentiaries presenting them. No document of a proposition may be submitted save by one of the plenipotentiaries or in his name.

11. Plenipotentiaries wishing to make a proposal not connected with the question on the agenda or not arising from the discussion shall give notice of the same twenty-four hours in advance, in order to facilitate the discussions. However, exceptions can be made to this rule in the case of amendments or secondary questions, but not in the case of substantive proposals.

12. Petitions, memoranda, observations or documents forwarded to the conference by any persons other than plenipotentiaries must be received and classified by the secretariat. Such of these communications as are just political will be briefly summarized in a line, to be distributed to all the plenipotentiaries. This list will be kept up to date as analogous communications are received. All such documents will be deposited in the archives.

13. The discussion of the question to be decided will comprise a first and second reading. The first will consist of the general subject, with the object of obtaining an agreement on matters of importance. Subsequently there will be a second reading for a more detailed examination.

14. The plenipotentiaries shall have the right, subject to the agreement with the conference, to authorize their technical delegates to submit technical explanations on such points as may be deemed lawful.

If the conference thinks advisable the technical examinations of any particular question may be intrusted to a committee of technical delegates, whose duty will be to report and suggest solutions.

15. The protocols drawn up by the secretariat shall be printed and distributed in proof to the delegates in the shortest possible time. To expedite the work by the conference the communications thus made in advance shall take the place of the reading of the protocol at the beginning of each meeting. If no alteration is proposed by the plenipotentiaries the text shall be deemed approved and entered in the archives.

If any alteration is proposed its text shall be read by the president at the beginning of the following meeting. In any case the protocol must be read out in full at the request of any plenipotentiary.

16. A committee shall be formed for drafting the resolutions adopted. This committee shall concern itself only with questions which have been decided. Its sole duty shall be to draw up the text of the decision adopted and to present it for the approval of the conference.

It shall be composed of five members not forming part of the plenipotentiary delegates and composed of one representative of the United States of America, one of the British empire, one of France, one of Italy and one of Japan.

OPENING SESSION OF CONGRESS.

The first formal, public session of the peace congress was held Jan. 18 in the splendid Salle de la Paix, formerly known as the Salle d'Horloge, in the ministry of foreign affairs on the Seine across from the Place de la Concorde. It was attended by all the leading delegates and many other distinguished persons from various parts of the world. The proceedings began just after 3 o'clock in the afternoon when President Poincare of France arose and said:

"Gentlemen: France greets and thanks you for having chosen as the seat of your labors the city which for more than four years the enemy has made his principal military objective and which the valor of the allied armies has victoriously defended against unceasingly renewed offensives.

"Permit me to see in your decision the homage of all the nations that you represent toward a country which, more than any other, has endured the sufferings of war, of which entire provinces have been transformed into a vast battle field and have been systematically laid waste by the invader, and which has paid the human tribute in death.

"France has borne these enormous sacrifices although she had not the slightest responsibility for the frightful catastrophe which has overwhelmed the universe. And at the moment when the cycle of horror is ending all the powers whose delegates are assembled here may acquit themselves of any share in the crime which has resulted in so unprecedented a disaster.

"What gives you the authority to establish a peace of justice is the fact that none of the peoples of whom you are the delegates has had any part in the injustice. Humanity can place confidence in you because you are not among those who have outraged the rights of humanity.

"There is no need of further information or of special inquiries into the origin of the drama which has just shaken the world. The truth, bathed in blood, has already escaped from the imperial archives. The premeditated character of the trap is to-day clearly proved.

"In the hope of conquering first the hegemony of Europe and next the mastery of the world, the central empires, bound together by a secret plot, found the most abominable of pretexts for trying to crush Serbia and force their way to the east. At the same time they disowned the most solemn undertakings in order to crush Belgium and force their way into the heart of France.

"These are the two unforgettable outrages which opened the way to aggression. The combined efforts of Great Britain, France, and Russia were exerted against that man-made arrogance.

"If, after long vicissitudes, those who wished to reign by the sword have perished by the sword, they have only themselves to blame. They have been destroyed by their own blindness.

"What could be more significant than the shameful bargains they attempted to offer to Great Britain and France at the end of July, 1914, when to Great Britain they suggested: 'Allow us to attack France on land and we will not enter the channel,' and when they instructed their ambassador to say to France: 'We will only accept a declaration of neutrality on your part if you surrender to us Briey, Toul and Verdun'? It is in the light of these things, gentlemen, that all the conclusions you will have to draw from the war will take shape. * * *

"From the north to the south the new world arose with indignation when it saw the empires of central Europe, after having let loose the war without provocation and without excuse, carry it on with fire, pillage and the massacre of inoffensive beings.

"The intervention of the United States was something more, something greater than a great political and military event. It was a supreme judgment passed at the bar of history by the lofty conscience of a free people and their chief magistrate on the enormous responsibilities incurred in the frightful conflict which was lacerating humanity.

"It was not only to protect itself from the audacious aims of German megalomania that the United States equipped fleets and created immense armies, but also, and above all, to defend an ideal of liberty over which it saw the huge shadow of the imperial eagle encroaching farther every day. America, the daughter of Europe, crossed the ocean to rescue her mother from the humiliation of thralldom and to save civilization.

"The American people wished to put an end to the greatest scandal that has ever sullied the annals of mankind. Autocratic governments, having proposed in the secrecy of the chancelleries and the general staff a mad program of universal dominion, let loose their packs at the time fixed by their genius for intrigue and sounded the horns for the chase, ordering science (at the very time it was beginning to abolish distances, to bring men closer together and make life sweeter) to leave the bright sky toward which it was soaring and to place itself submissively at the service of violence; debasing the religious idea to the extent of making God the complacent auxiliary of their passions and the accomplice of their crimes—in short, counting as naught the traditions and wills of peoples, the lives of citizens, the honor of women and all those principles of public and private morality which we for our part have endeavored to keep unaltered throughout the war, and which neither nations nor individuals can repudiate or disregard with impunity. * * *

"The solidarity which has united us during the war and has enabled us to win military success ought to remain unimpaired during the negotiations for and after the signing of the treaty.

"It is not only the governments but free peoples who are represented here. To the test of danger they have learned to know and help one another. They want their intimacy of yesterday to assure the peace of to-morrow. Vainly would our enemies seek to divide us. If they have not yet renounced their customary maneuvers, they will soon find that they are meeting to-day, as during the hostilities, a homogeneous block which nothing will be able to disintegrate. Even before the armistice you reached that unity under the aid of the lofty moral and political truths of which President Wilson has nobly made himself the interpreter, and in the light of these truths you intend to accomplish your mission. * * *

"While introducing into the world as much harmony as possible, you will, in conformity with the fourteenth of the propositions unanimously adopted by the great allied powers, establish a general league of nations which will be the supreme guaranty against any fresh assault upon the rights of peoples.

"You do not intend this international association to be directed against anybody in the future. It will not, of a set purpose, shut out anybody, but, having been organized by the nations that have sacrificed themselves in the defense of right, it will receive from them its statutes and fundamental rules.

"It will lay down conditions concerning present or future adherence, and, as it is to have for its essential aim the prevention as far as possible of the renewals of wars, it will, above all, seek to gain respect for the peace which you will have established and will find it the less difficult to maintain in proportion as this peace will in itself imply the greater realities of justice and safer guaranties of stability.

"By establishing this new order of things you will meet the aspirations of humanity, which, after the frightful convulsions of the blood stained years, ardently wishes to feel itself protected by a union of free peoples against every possible revival of primitive savagery.

"An immortal glory will attach to the names of the nations and the men who have desired to co-operate in this grand work in faith and brotherhood, and who have taken the pains to eliminate from the future peace causes of disturbance and instability.

"This very day forty-eight years ago—on the 18th of January, 1871—the German empire was proclaimed by an army of invasion in the chateau at Versailles. It was consecrated by the theft of two French provinces. It was thus a violation from its origin, and by the fault of its founders it was born in injustice. It has ended in oblivion.

"You are assembled in order to repair the evil that has been done and to prevent a recurrence of it. You hold in your hands the future of the world. I leave you gentlemen to your grave deliberations and declare the conference of Paris open."

Wilson Names Clemenceau as Chairman.

When President Poincare had concluded his address and retired from the hall President Wilson arose and nominated Premier Clemenceau of France for permanent chairman of the conference. He said:

"Mr. Chairman: It gives me great pleasure to propose as permanent chairman of the conference M. Clemenceau, the president of the council.

"I would do this as a matter of custom. I would do this as a tribute to the French republic. But I wish to do it as something more than that. I wish to do it as a tribute to the man.

"France deserves the precedence not only because we are meeting at her capital and because she has undergone some of the most tragical suffering of the war, but also because her capital, her ancient and beautiful capital, has so often been the center of conferences of this sort, on which the fortunes of large parts of the world turned.

"It is a very delightful thought that the history of the world, which has so often centered here, will now be crowned by the achievements of this conference—because there is a sense in which this is the supreme conference in the history of mankind.

"More nations are represented here than were ever represented in such a conference before. The fortunes of all peoples are involved. A great war is ended, which seemed about to bring a universal cataclysm. The danger is passed. A victory has been won for mankind, and it is delightful that we should be able to record these great results in this place.

"But it is more delightful to honor France because we can honor her in the person of so distinguished a servant. We have all felt in our participation in the struggles of this war the fine steadfastness which characterized the leadership of the French in the hands of M. Clemenceau. We have learned to admire him and those of us who have been associated with him have acquired a genuine affection for him.

"Moreover, those of us who have been in these recent days in constant consultation with him know how warmly his purpose is set toward the goal of achievement to which all our faces are turned. He feels as we feel, as I have no doubt everybody in this room feels, that we are trusted to do a great thing, to do it in the highest spirit of friendship and accommodation, and to do it as promptly as possible in order that the hearts of men may have fear lifted from them and that they may return to those purposes of life which will bring them happiness and contentment and prosperity.

"Knowing his brotherhood of heart in these great matters, it affords me a personal pleasure to propose that M. Clemenceau shall be the permanent chairman of this conference."

Seconded by Lloyd George.

In seconding the nomination Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain said:

"I count it not merely a pleasure but a great privilege that I should be expected, on behalf of the British empire delegates, to support the motion of President Wilson. I do so for this reason which he has so eloquently given expression to: as a tribute to the man. When I was a schoolboy M. Clemenceau was a compelling and conspicuous figure in the politics of his native land and his fame had extended far beyond the bounds of France.

"Were it not for that undoubted fact, Mr. President, I should have treated as a legend the common report of your years. I have attended many conferences with M. Clemenceau, and in them all the most vigorous, the most enduring, and the most youthful figure there has been that of M. Clemenceau. He has had the youthfulness; he has had the hopefulness and the fearlessness of youth. He is indeed the 'grand young man' of France, and I am proud to stand here to propose that he should take the chair in this great conference that is to settle the peace of the world.

"I know of none better qualified, or as well qualified, to occupy this chair than M. Clemenceau. And I speak from my experience in its claim. He and I have not always agreed. We have often agreed. We have sometimes disagreed, and we have always expressed our disagreements very emphatically because we are ourselves.

"But, although there will be delays, and inevitable delays, in the signing of peace, due to the inherent difficulties of what we have to settle, I will guarantee, from my knowledge of M. Clemenceau, that there will be no waste of time. And that is important.

"The world is thirsting and hungering for peace. There are millions of people who want to get back to the world work of peace. And the fact that M. Clemenceau is in the chair will be proof that they will get there without any delays which are due to anything except the difficulties which are essential in what we have to perform. He is one of the great speakers of the world. But no one knows better than he that the best speaking is that which impels beneficent actions.

"I have another reason. During the dark days we have passed through his courage, his unfailing courtesy, his untiring energy, his inspiration have helped the allies through to triumph, and I know of no one to whom that victory is more attributable than the man who sits in this chair. In his own person, more than any living man, he represents the heroism, he represents the genius of the indomitable people of his land.

"And for these reasons I count it a privilege that I should be expected to second this motion."

Response by Clemenceau.

In accepting the nomination Premier Clemenceau said:

"You would not expect me to keep silence after what the two eminent statesmen who have just spoken have said. I cannot help expressing my great, my profound gratitude to the illustrious president of the United States, and to the prime minister of Great Britain, for the words I have just heard from their lips.

"Long ago, when I was young, as Mr. Lloyd George has recalled to you, when I was traveling in America and in England, I always heard the French reproached for an excess of courtesy which sometimes went beyond the truth.

"As I listened to the American statesman and to the English statesman, I wondered whether they had not caught in Paris our national disease of courtesy. Nevertheless, gentlemen, I must say that my election is necessarily due to the old international tradition of courtesy to the country which has the honor to receive the peace conference in its capital.

"I wish also to say that this testimony of friendship, if they will allow to me the word, on the part of President Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George in particular, has touched me deeply because I see in it a new strength for all three of us to accomplish, with the co-operation of the entire conference, the arduous work which is intrusted to us. I gather from it a new confidence in the success of our efforts.

"President Wilson has special authority to say that this is the first time in fact that the world has ever seen assembled together a delegation of all the civilized nations of the earth.

"The greater the bloody catastrophe which has devastated and ruined one of the richest parts of France, the greater and more splendid must be the reparation—not only the material reparation, the vulgar reparation, if I dare speak so, which is due all of us, but the higher and nobler reparation of the new institutions which we will try to establish, in order that nations may at length escape from the fatal embrace of ruinous wars, which destroy everything, heap up ruins, terrorize the populace and prevent them from going freely about their work for fear of enemies which may rise up from one day to the next.

"It is a great, splendid and noble ambition which has come to all of us. It is desirable that success should crown our efforts. This cannot take place unless we all have firmly fixed and clearly determined ideas on what we wish to do.

"I said in the chamber a few days ago, and I wish to repeat here, that success is not possible unless we remain firmly united. We have come together as friends; we must leave this hall as friends.

"That, gentlemen, is the first thought that comes to me. All else must be subordinated to the necessity of a closer and closer union among the nations which have taken part in this great war and to the necessity of remaining friends. For the league of nations is here. It is yourself. It is for you to make it live and to make it live we must have it really in our hearts.

"As I told President Wilson a few days ago, there is no sacrifice that I am not willing to make in order to accomplish this, and I do not doubt that you all have the same sentiment. We will make these sacrifices, but on the condition that we endeavor impartially to conciliate interests apparently contradictory on the higher plane of a greater, happier and better humanity.

"That, gentlemen, is what I had to say to you. I am touched beyond words at the evidence of good will and friendship which you show me.

"The program of this conference has been laid down by President Wilson. It is no longer the peace of a more or less vast territory, no longer the peace of continents; it is the peace of nations that is to be made. This program is sufficient in itself. There is no superfluous word. Let us try to act swiftly and well."

Beyond the making of these and other speeches no business was transacted at the opening conference, which ended at 4:40. After announcing that the league of nations would be placed at the head of the order of the day at the next full session M. Clemenceau declared the meeting adjourned.

PRESSING QUESTIONS TAKEN UP.

The delegates, a full list of whom will be found on pages 549, 550, 621, 625 and 626 of this volume, settled down to work and took up the questions that seemed most pressing. Among these were the drafting of the covenant of the league of nations, the question of the representation of Russia, international legislation on labor, responsibilities and punishments in connection with the war reparations for war damages and international regime of ports, waterways and railways. Much of this work was intrusted to committees assisted by advisers and experts. On Jan. 22 the supreme council announced that it had invited representatives of the Russian factions to meet at Princes' islands in the Sea of Marmora and arrange a settlement of their differences. This conference, it may be said, never took place, the Russian envoys in Paris, headed by Sergius Sazonoff, a former Russian foreign minister, refusing to sit with bolshevist assassins either at the place named or elsewhere. The Russian problem remained practically unsolved throughout the conference.

FRAMERS OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

On Jan. 25 the general peace council decided unanimously in favor of a league of nations, the covenant to be framed by a special committee composed of members of all the associated governments. Those for the five great powers were:

For the United States—President Wilson and Col. Edward M. House.

For Great Britain—Lord Robert Cecil and Gen. Jan Christian Smuts.

For France—Leon Bourgeois and Ferdinand Larnaude, dean of the faculty of law of the University of Paris.

For Italy—Premier Orlando and Vittorio Scialoia.

TERRITORIAL CLAIMS BEFORE CONFERENCE.

By the 3d of February the delegates of the five great powers had before them practically all of the territorial claims made by the various nations in the entente or friendly to it. The United States presented no claim of this character. Following were the desires of the other countries:

France.

France wanted, first of all, Alsace-Lorraine unconditionally and the right to discuss and ultimately to fix the French frontiers in their relation to the Rhine, which might require the creation of buffer states. One of these would be the Palatinate and another Rhenish Prussia. France desired also to annex the basin of the Saar river, which might be called reannexation.

France insisted that so far as the left bank of the Rhine farther to the north was concerned, the conference should forbid military works of any kind—barracks, bridgeheads, forts and fortresses—in that zone. The feeling was that the people inhabiting that zone should be free to decide for themselves whether they wished to join France, form an independent state or return to Germany.

The French government did not ask for a protectorate in Syria in the ordinary sense, because it considered that the population there was too advanced to make a protectorate necessary; but France, on account of her traditional interests in that country, felt that she should be called upon to exercise some sort of guardianship or guidance until Syria should be fully able to govern herself.

Great Britain.

Great Britain's delegation believed that a society of nations was desirable and obtainable and that it must be established by the peace conference. She advanced no continental purposes other than those of a permanent and just peace under the principle of self-determination and that there should be international freedom of transit by railroads and waterways, which was Great Britain's general definition of freedom of commerce in times of peace.

Great Britain would take mandatory power over the German islands south of the equator for Australia and over German Southwest Africa for the Union of South Africa. She would also have the mandate over German East Africa and some parts of Arabia and she had particular claims in this respect over Mesopotamia.

Italy.

Italy asked for the Trentino as far as the Brenner pass, including the whole of the southern Tyrol; Trieste, Istria, Fiume, Zara, Sebenico, the larger part of the Dalmatian islands, Avlona and its hinterland, a protectorate over Albania, possession of the islands in the Ægean which were taken from Turkey during the Tripolitan war and the province of Adalia if France and England should take territory in Asia Minor.

The Italian contention was that the Dalmatian islands and such parts of the Dalmatian coast as were not assigned to Italy should be neutralized. Should France and England extend their colonial possessions in Africa Italy desired to enlarge her possessions in Eritrea and Tripoli.

Roumania.

Territorial contentions in the Balkans were complicated and presented difficult problems. Roumania desired to retain possession of that portion of Russian Bessarabia given her by the central powers under the canceled treaty of Bukharest and since in her possession. Roumania also desired southern Dobrogea, as ceded to her by Bulgaria after the second Balkan war. Possession of Bessarabia and the Dobrogea commands the mouth of the Danube.

Westward Roumania wanted to annex the Hapsburg provinces of Bukowina and Transylvania and a considerable part of the rich agricultural district of Banat. It was here that the Roumanian aspirations conflicted with those of Serbia.

Serbia.

Serbia's claims in the Hapsburg monarchy to the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina were opposed by no one in the entente group. The plans for the incorporation into Jugo Slavia of the Hapsburg province of Croatia, except as to the coastal region of Fiume, were also considered as subject to the internal decision of the southern Slavs.

Jugo Slav and Italian aims were in sharp conflict in the settlement of the Adriatic coast problem, involving the future of Fiume and the Croatian seaboard along with the islands of Dalmatia and Albania.

Greece.

Greece wished Northern Epirus and Thrace, with the exception of Constantinople and the shores of the Bosporus and the Dardanelles, which Premier Venizelos wishes to place under international control. Greece asked for the vilayet of Smyrna in Asia Minor and the former Turkish islands in the eastern Mediterranean, including those known as the Dodecanesus and claimed by Italy.

Bulgaria.

Although Bulgaria capitulated without conditions and her future territories depended upon the conquerors, her government had not abandoned hope of adding extensive territories and it even hoped to receive extensions of the Bulgarian frontiers in southern Macedonia along the Ægean coast and in Thrace.

Czecho-Slovakia.

The new state of Czecho-Slovakia was carving out its territories almost entirely at the expense of the old Austria-Hungary. The old kingdom of Bohemia, Moravia and the Slovak regions of northern Hungary already had been incorporated into the proposed state, but there were certain conflicts with the Poles, Ruthenians, Roumanians and Germans as well as with the Austrians and the Magyars because the Czechs claimed that parts of German Saxony and German Silesia belonged ethnographically to the new state.

Poland.

The Poles with an inadequate army were endeavoring to establish possession of disputed regions on three sides of Russian Poland and Galicia, which constituted the nucleus of the new Polish state. The Poles desired eastern Galicia to include Lemberg, which is in the Ukraine, and the disputed province of Cholm, in Little Russia. Northeast the Poles desired to have Vilna recognized as Polish.

Belgium.

Belgium asked that her reparation for damages wrought by Germany should be the first lien upon German assets to the extent of at least 15,000,000,000 francs ($3,000,000,000) or up to a much larger sum if Germany does not return the machinery and the materials taken from Belgium.

Belgium, having reasserted her independence and thus emerged from her old state of neutrality, desired from Holland the left bank of the Scheldt and the peninsula of Maastricht, which protrudes into Belgian Limburg. Belgium also would assent to a plebiscite in Luxemburg to decide whether that country wished to join Belgium or France or retain its autonomy.

Japan.

Japan entered the peace conference, as Baron Makino, the senior delegate, said, "with no territorial ambitions in China," and that as for Tsingtau, "she will hand it back to China under the terms of the notes exchanged between China and Japan in May, 1915."

This was interpreted by Japan as permitting her to retain certain former German concessions on the Shantung peninsula. Japan, Baron Makino explained, "neither intended nor desired to interfere in Russian affairs, but was willing, if solicited, to aid Russia in restoring order."

These declarations disposed of two of the main questions in which Japan was interested except that she desired to retain the southern Pacific islands north of the equator, which formerly belonged to Germany.

China.

The Chinese delegates asked to be guaranteed against foreign imperialism or aggression and desired the gradual abolition of "consular rights" and to be allowed to impose higher duties on importations. The Chinese also asked for the return of Kiaochow.

Switzerland.

The Swiss government represented that, while Switzerland would be glad to participate in a society of nations, yet because of her mixed nationalities she could not do so if that should mean the use of her troops in policing the world by force, as, perhaps, against Italy, France or Germany. Switzerland desired an outlet to the sea by making the Rhine a neutral stream.

Scandinavia.

The territorial aspirations of the three Scandinavian powers were considered modest. Denmark wished to annex that part of northern Schleswig inhabited predominantly by Danes, but did not ask to retain the provinces of Schleswig and Holstein, taken from Denmark by Prussia in the war of 1864, or to extend her frontiers southward to the Kiel canal.

Norway had certain aspirations to Spitzbergen and her claim was subsequently granted.

A strong socialist movement in Sweden favored the union with Sweden of the Aland islands, which were regarded by the Swedes as the naval key to Stockholm.

LEAGUE COVENANT PRESENTED.

On Feb. 14, 1919, at a plenary session of the conference President Wilson presented the report of the commission on the league of nations. On arising to read the covenant he said:

"Mr. Chairman: I have the honor and assume it a very great privilege of reporting in the name of the commission constituted by this conference on the formulation of a plan for the league of nations. I am happy to say that it is a unanimous report—a unanimous report from the representatives of fourteen nations—the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Brazil, China, Czecho-Slovakia, Greece, Poland, Portugal, Roumania and Serbia."

The president then read the text of the covenant and followed it with remarks extolling the purposes of the proposed league. He was followed in a similar strain by Lord Robert Cecil, Dr. Vittorio Orlando, Leon Bourgeois, Baron Makino, George N. Barnes, Eleutherios Venizelos and Dr. V. Wellington Koo.

Immediately after this plenary session President Wilson returned to the United States to attend to business connected with the closing of the 65th congress. (See page 299.) On Feb. 19 an attempt to assassinate Premier Clemenceau caused some interruption in the work of the conference. President Wilson returned to Paris March 14 and resumed work on the treaty of peace with Germany and on a revision of the league covenant in order to meet criticisms made upon it, particularly with regard to the safeguarding of the Monroe doctrine. On April 10 the league of nations adopted a new section of the covenant specifically excepting the Monroe doctrine from the provisions of the covenant.

There were many objections to the covenant as originally drawn up and the document was entirely recast in the direction of making it clearer. In its new form it was presented at a plenary session held on April 28. (It is given in full in its revised form on pages 550-554 of this volume.) Article 21 relating to the Monroe doctrine was entirely new. President Wilson in presenting the document to the conference did not read it in detail but explained the changes. He said:

"The first paragraph of article 1 is new. In view of the insertion of the covenant in the peace treaty, specific provision as to the signatories of the treaty who would become members of the league and also as to neutral states to be invited to accede to the covenant, were obviously necessary. The paragraph also provides for the method by which a neutral state may accede to the covenant.

"The third paragraph of article 1 is new, providing for the withdrawal of any member of the league on a notice given of two years.

"The second paragraph of article 4 is new, providing for a possible increase in the council, should other powers be added to the league of nations whose present accession is not anticipated.

"The last two paragraphs of article 4 are new, providing specifically for one vote for each member of the league in the council, which was understood before, and providing also for one representative of each member of the league.

"The first paragraph of article 5 is new, expressly incorporating the provision as to the unanimity of voting, which was at first taken for granted.

"The second paragraph of article 5 has had added to it that a majority of the assembly must approve the appointment of the secretary-general.

"The first paragraph of article 7 names Geneva as the seat of the league, and is followed by a second paragraph which gives the council power to establish the seat of the league elsewhere should it subsequently deem it necessary.

"The third paragraph of article 7 is new, establishing equality of employment of men and women, that is to say, by the league.

"The second paragraph of article 13 is new, inasmuch as it undertakes to give instances of disputes which are generally suitable for submission to arbitration, instances of what have latterly been called 'justiciable' questions.

"The eighth paragraph of article 15 is new. This is the amendment regarding domestic jurisdiction, that where the council finds a question arising out of an international dispute affects matters which are clearly under the domestic jurisdiction of one or other of the parties it is to report to that effect and make no recommendation.

"The last paragraph of article 16 is new, providing for an expulsion from the league in certain extraordinary circumstances.

"Article 21 is new.

"The second paragraph of article 22 inserts the words with regard to mandatories, 'and who are willing to accept it,' thus explicitly introducing the principle that a mandate cannot be forced upon a nation unwilling to accept it.

"Article 23 is a combination of several former articles and also contains the following: A clause providing for the just treatment of aborigines; a clause looking toward a prevention of the white slave traffic and the traffic in opium, and a clause looking toward progress in international prevention and control of disease.

"Article 25 specifically mentions the Red Cross as one of the international organizations which are to connect their work with the work of the league.

"Article 26 permits the amendment of the covenant by a majority of the states composing the assembly, instead of three-fourths of the states, though it does not change the requirements in that matter with regard to the vote in the council.

"The second paragraph of article 26 is also new and was added at the request of the Brazilian delegation, in order to avoid certain constitutional difficulties. It permits any member of the league to dissent from an amendment, the effect of such dissent being withdrawal from the league.

"And the annex is added, giving the names of the signatories of the treaty, who become members, and the names of the states invited to accede to the covenant. These are all the changes, I believe, which are of moment.

"Mr. President: I take the opportunity to move the following resolutions in order to carry out the provisions of the covenant. You will notice that the covenant provides that the first secretary-general shall be chosen by this conference. It also provides that the first choice of the four member states who are to be added to the five great powers on the council is left to this conference.

"I move, therefore, that the first secretary-general of the council shall be the Hon. Sir James Eric Drummond, and, secondly, that until such time as the assembly shall have selected the first four members of the league to be represented on the council in accordance with article 4 of the covenant, representatives of Belgium, Brazil, Greece and Spain shall be members; and, third, that the powers to be represented on the council of the league of nations are requested to name representatives who shall form a committee of nine to prepare plans for the organization of the league and for the establishment of the seat of the league and to make arrangements and to prepare the agenda for the first meeting of the assembly, this committee to report both to the council and to the assembly of the league."

CONTROVERSY OVER FIUME.

The first serious clash in the deliberations of the peace conference came over Italy's claim to Fiume and other places on the Dalmatian coast of the Adriatic which were also claimed by the Jugo Slavs. The principal dispute was over Fiume itself on account of its port facilities and its importance to the Jugo Slav state as an outlet for its commerce. As early as March 21 the Italian delegation made it known that unless Fiume was awarded to Italy they would leave the conference. President Wilson took the Jugo Slav side of the controversy, Premier Lloyd George and Premier Clemenceau being inclined to favor Italy's claim on the basis of the London pact ceding part of the Dalmatian coast to Italy.

Matters were brought to a head April 23 when President Wilson issued a statement giving his reasons for opposing Italy's claim to Fiume. This statement, in part, follows:

"When Italy entered the war she entered upon the basis of a definite private understanding with Great Britain and France, now known as the pact of London. Since that time the whole face of circumstances has been altered. Many other powers, great and small, have entered the struggle with no knowledge of that private understanding.

"The Austro-Hungarian empire, then the enemy of Europe, and at whose expense the pact of London was to be kept in the event of victory, has gone to pieces and no longer exists. Not only that, but the several parts of that empire, it is agreed now by Italy and all her associates, are to be erected into independent states and associated in a league of nations, not with those who were recently our enemies, but with Italy herself and the powers that stood with Italy in the great war for liberty.

"We are to establish their liberty as well as our own. They are to be among the smaller states whose interests are henceforth to be safeguarded as scrupulously as the interests of the most powerful states.

"The war was ended, moreover, by proposing to Germany an armistice and peace which should be founded on certain clearly defined principles which set up a new order of right and justice. Upon those principles the peace with Germany has been conceived not only but formulated. Upon those principles it will be effected.

"We cannot ask the great body of powers to propose and effect peace with Austria and establish a new basis of independence and right in the states which originally constituted the Austro-Hungarian empire and in the states of the Balkan group on principles of another kind. We must apply the same principles to the settlement of Europe in those quarters that we have applied in the peace with Germany.

"It was upon the explicit avowal of those principles that the initiative for peace was taken. It is upon them that the whole structure of peace must rest.

"If those principles are to be adhered to Fiume must serve as the outlet of the commerce, not of Italy, but of the land to the north and northeast of that port—Hungary, Bohemia, Roumania and the states of the new Jugo Slav group. To assign Fiume to Italy would be to create the feeling that we have deliberately put the port upon which all those countries chiefly depend for their access to the Mediterranean in the hands of a power of which it did not form an integral part and whose sovereignty, if set up there, must inevitably seem foreign, not domestic or identified with the commercial and industrial life of the regions which the port must serve. It is for that reason, no doubt, that Fiume was not included in the pact of London, but there definitely assigned to the Croatians."

ITALIANS WITHDRAW FROM CONFERENCE.

The Italian peace delegation took offense at the statement made by President Wilson and promptly withdrew from the conference. Its action was approved by the people and government of Italy. There was much excitement for a time, but this gradually cooled down and Premier Orlando and Foreign Minister Sonnino on May 7 returned to Paris to take part in the ceremonies attending the delivery of the peace treaty to the German delegates.

TREATY PRESENTED TO GERMANS.

While the attention of the world was directed chiefly toward the framing of the league of nations covenant, work on the details of the peace treaty proper was progressing slowly but steadily and by the end of April it was so far completed that Germany was invited to send delegates to receive it. The men chosen by the Berlin government for that disagreeable task were Count Brockdorff-Rantzau, minister of foreign affairs, Dr. Theodor Melchoir, Herr Landsberg, Herr Leinert.

Herr Giesberts and Herr Schuecking. These gentlemen arrived at Versailles April 29 and presented their credentials to officials appointed to represent the peace conference. This ceremony took place in the hall of the Trianon palace and in the same place on May 7 the treaty was formally presented to the German envoys. All the leading figures in the peace conference, including President Wilson, were present on this occasion, though no addresses were made save by Premier Clemenceau and by the head of the German delegation. M. Clemenceau, as chairman of the peace congress, in addressing the enemy plenipotentiaries said, in part:

"You have before you the accredited plenipotentiaries of all the small and great powers united to fight together in the war that has been so cruelly imposed upon them. The time has come when we must settle our account. You have asked for peace. We are ready to give you peace.

"We shall present you now a book which contains our conditions. You will be given every facility to examine these conditions and the time necessary for it. Everything will be done with the courtesy that is the privilege of civilized nations."

M. Clemenceau added that no oral discussion was to take place and that any observations would have to be submitted in writing within fifteen days.

Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau remained seated as he replied in German. He began by saying:

"Gentlemen: We are deeply impressed with the sublime task which has brought us hither to give a durable peace to the world. We are under no illusion as to the extent of our defeat and the degree of our want of power. We know that the power of the German arms is broken. We know the power of the hatred which we encounter here and we have heard the passionate demand that vanquishers make us pay as the vanquished and punish those who are deserving of being punished."

The count went on to deny that Germany was alone responsible for the war. He commented on what he called the cruelty of the allies in continuing the blockade of Germany after the armistice and pleaded for a peace based on President Wilson's fourteen points.

With the reading and translating of these two addresses the ceremony ended.

MODIFICATIONS MADE IN TREATY.

Germany, as was expected, raised a violent outcry against the terms of the treaty and there was much talk of rejecting it. There was some correspondence between the German plenipotentiaries and the supreme council and the former were given an extension of seven days, or until May 29, in which to reply in full to the peace terms. The notes related mainly to the economic terms of the treaty, the disposition of the Saar basin, the responsibility for the war, the return of the German colonies and similar matters. The council remained firm and rejected the German pleas for modifications. Germany's final reply was made public June 1 and the rejoinder of the allied and associated powers on June 16. In the latter communication some concessions were made and changes in the treaty were proposed. These included:

A plebiscite for Upper Silesia, with guaranties of coal from that territory.

Frontier rectifications in West Prussia.

Omission of the third zone in the Schleswig plebiscite.

Temporary increase of the German army from 100,000 to 200,000 men.

Declaration of the intention to submit within a month of signature a list of those accused of violation of the laws and customs of war.

Offer to co-operate with a German commission on reparations and to receive suggestions for discharging the obligation.

Certain detailed modifications in the finance, economic and ports and waterways clauses, including abolition of the proposed Kiel canal commission.

Assurance of membership in the league of nations in the early future, if Germany fulfilled her obligations.

The German envoys were against accepting the treaty even as revised and advised the German cabinet to reject it. The people of Germany, however were tired of the long suspense and demanded that the treaty be signed. On June 22, after some changes in the cabinet, the national assembly at Weimar by a vote of 237 to 138 decided to sign the treaty and to do so unconditionally. Herman Mueller, who had succeeded Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau as foreign minister, Dr. Johannes Bell, minister of colonies and Herr Leinert were selected to go to Versailles and sign the treaty of peace. Mueller and Bell arrived at Versailles on the evening of June 27 and were met there by Herr Giesberts.

GERMAN PEACE TREATY SIGNED.

The German peace treaty was signed on June 28, 1919. This historic event, terminating the greatest war the world had ever known, took place in the Hall of Mirrors in the Chateau Louis XIV., at Versailles. The signing was done within a few yards of the spot in the same hall where William I. was crowned emperor of Germany on Jan. 18, 1871, and where the German empire was proclaimed. The German delegates, Mueller and Bell, were the first to attach their signatures to the document. Then came President Wilson and the other American delegates, followed in order by the plenipotentiaries of Great Britain and its colonies, France, Japan and Italy and after them came the representatives of the minor powers in alphabetical order with Belgium in the lead. The Chinese delegates refused to sign because they were not permitted to make certain reservations. Gen. Jan Christian Smuts of the Union of South Africa signed under protest on the ground that the stipulations in the treaty were too severe.

The signing began at 3:10 p. m. and ended at 3:45 p. m. At that hour cannon boomed announcing to the world that peace had at last been sealed by the chief belligerents in the war. The multitude assembled outside the hall where the signing took place cheered loudly as President Wilson, Premier Clemenceau, Premier Lloyd George and other well known figures in the peace conference emerged to take their departure. The news of the signing of the treaty was received with ringing of bells and other manifestations of joy in London and in other great cities of the entente countries, while in Berlin, Vienna and elsewhere in the former central empires the gloom was correspondingly great.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

The Chinese delegates who refused to sign the treaty were Lou Tseng-tsiang, minister for foreign affairs, and Chenting Thomas Wang, formerly minister of agriculture and commerce. They protested against the transfer of the German rights in Shantung to Japan as confirming an act of aggression, but their contention was overruled. (See Shantung section of treaty, page 574, this volume.)

While the Japanese delegates carried the day with respect to Shantung, their efforts to obtain in the covenant of the league of nations a declaration against race discrimination failed.

DISPOSITION OF GERMAN COLONIES.

The provisions in the treaty regarding Germany's former overseas possessions will be found on pages 571-573 in this volume. The following official announcement was made on May 7:

"The council of three, M. Clemenceau, President Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George, yesterday decided as to the disposition of the former German colonies as follows:

"Togoland and Kamerun—France and Great Britain shall make a joint recommendation to the league of nations as to their future.

"German East Africa—The mandate shall be held by Great Britain.

"German Southwest Africa—The mandate shall be held by the Union of South Africa.

"The German Samoan islands—The mandate shall be held by New Zealand.

"The other German Pacific possessions south of the equator, excluding the German Samoan islands and Nauru—The mandate shall be held by Australia.

"Nauru (Pleasant island)—The mandate shall be given to the British empire.

"The German Pacific islands north of the equator—The mandate shall be held by Japan."

MANY CLAIMS URGED.

In connection with the league of nations part of the German treaty many demands were made upon the peace conference by various races and nationalities who urged their claims on the basis of the right of self-determination, old and new treaties and understandings or for other reasons. Some of these were in connection with the newly created nations who came into conflict with each other over claims to coal mines, territorial boundaries, port facilities and so on. The disputes over the Teschen mines, the port of Danzig, the port of Fiume and Silesian territory were among these. In the majority of cases only temporary decisions were arrived at, final action being deferred until such a time as the league of nations might act, or until plebiscites could be taken.

Disputes also arose as to the disposition of territories formerly under the domination of the Turkish empire such as Syria, Hedjaz, Armenia and Palestine, but no conclusive action was taken.

Strong efforts were made to obtain recognition for the republic proclaimed in Ireland by the Sinn Fein party, but these failed even though urged upon the American peace delegation by influential Irishmen from the United States. The entente countries declined to be drawn into any discussion of their own internal affairs.

THE AUSTRIAN TREATY.

The conclusion of a treaty of peace with Austria, which was all that was left of the old Hapsburg empire, attracted little attention compared with that bestowed upon the German treaty. One reason was that the two documents resembled each other in their main features and another was that most of the allies were inclined to think that Austria had ceased to be a power of the first rank and that therefore the convention with her was of less importance.

On May 6 it was announced in Vienna that the delegates to represent German Austria in Paris would consist of Karl Renner, chancellor, Dr. Franz Klein, Prof. Heinrich Lammasch, Prof. von Laun, Undersecretary Flucke and Deputies Steglinger and Lodgman. The delegation arrived in St. Germain, near Paris, May 14, and on May 19 the exchange of credentials took place. On June 2 the first section of the Austrian treaty was laid before the delegates of that country in the old castle of St. Germain. The ceremonies were similar to those that had taken place at Versailles, Premier Clemenceau making an address to which Karl Renner replied. The second section was presented on July 20 without ceremony by M. Dutasta, secretary-general of the conference. On Sept. 6 the national assembly in Vienna, Austria, by a vote of 97 to 23 decided to sign the treaty and on Sept. 10 Karl Renner at St. Germain affixed his signature to the document on behalf of his country. The representatives of twenty-five powers also signed. Frank L. Polk, Henry White and Gen. Tasker H. Bliss acted on behalf of the United States. (For text of treaty and names of all the signers see pages 625-681, this volume.)

CHANGES AMONG DELEGATES.

Numerous changes among the peace delegates occurred in the course of the year and especially immediately after the signing of the treaty with Germany. President Wilson sailed for America June 29 and was followed on July 4 by Secretary of State Lansing, whose place was taken by the undersecretary of state, Frank L. Polk. Owing to a change in the ministry in Italy the old delegates of that country were replaced in June by Former Foreign Minister Tittoni, Senator Guglielmi Marconi and Senator Vittorio Scialoia.

WILSON LAYS TREATY BEFORE UNITED STATES SENATE.

On July 10, immediately after his return from Europe, President Wilson appeared before the United States senate and in laying before that body the peace treaty with Germany said:

"Gentlemen of the Senate: The treaty of peace with Germany was signed at Versailles on June 28. I avail myself of the earliest opportunity to lay the treaty before you for ratification and to inform you with regard to the work of the conference by which that treaty was formulated.

"The treaty constitutes nothing less than a world settlement. It would not be possible for me either to summarize or to construe its manifold provisions in an address which must of necessity be something less than a treatise. My services and all the information I possess will be at your disposal and at the disposal of your committee on foreign relations at any time, either informally or in session, as you may prefer; and I hope that you will not hesitate to make use of them. I shall at this time, prior to your own study of the document, attempt only a general characterization of its scope and purpose.

"In one sense, no doubt, there is no need that I should report to you what was attempted and done at Paris. You have been daily cognizant of what was going on there—of the problems with which the peace conference had to deal and of the difficulty of laying down straight lines of settlement anywhere on a field on which the old lines of international relationship, and the new alike, followed so intricate a pattern and were for the most part cut so deep by historical circumstances which dominated action where it would have been best to ignore or reverse them.

"The cross currents of politics and of interest must have been evident to you. It would be presuming in me to attempt to explain the questions which arose or the many diverse elements that entered into them. I shall attempt something less ambitious than that and more clearly suggested by my duty to report to the congress the part it seemed necessary for my colleagues and me to play as the representatives of the government of the United States.

"That part was dictated by the role America has played in the war and by the expectations that had been created in the minds of the peoples with whom we had associated ourselves in that great struggle.

"The United States entered the war upon a different footing from every other nation except our associates on this side the sea. We entered it, not because our material interests were directly threatened or because any special treaty obligations to which we were parties had been violated, but only because we saw the supremacy, and even the validity, of right everywhere put in jeopardy and free government likely to be everywhere imperiled by the intolerable aggression of a power which respected neither right nor obligation and whose very system of government flouted the rights of the citizens as against the autocratic authority of its governors.

"And in the settlement of the peace we have sought no special reparation for ourselves, but only the restoration of right and the assurance of liberty everywhere that the effects of the settlement were to be felt. We entered the war as the disinterested champions of right and we interested ourselves in the terms of the peace in no other capacity.

"The hopes of the nations allied against the central powers were at a very low ebb when our soldiers began to pour across the sea. There was everywhere amongst them, except in their stoutest spirits, a somber foreboding of disaster. The war ended in November eight months ago, but you have only to recall what was feared in midsummer last, four short months before the armistice, to realize what it was that our timely aid accomplished alike for their morale and their physical safety.

"That first, never-to-be-forgotten action at Chateau Thierry had already taken place. Our redoubtable soldiers and marines had already closed the gap the enemy had succeeded in opening for their advance upon Paris—had already turned the tide of battle back toward the frontiers of France and begun the rout that was to save Europe and the world. Thereafter the Germans were to be always forced back, back, were never to thrust successfully forward again. And yet there was no confident hope.

"Anxious men and women, leading spirits of France, attended the celebration of the Fourth of July last year in Paris out of generous courtesy—with no heart for festivity, little zest of hope. But they came away with something new at their hearts; they have themselves told us so.

"The mere sight of our men—of their vigor, of the confidence that showed itself in every movement of their stalwart figures and every turn of their swinging march, in their steady comprehending eyes and easy discipline, in the indomitable air that added spirit to everything they did—made every one who saw them that memorable day realize that something had happened that was much more than a mere incident in the fighting, something very different from the mere arrival of fresh troops.

"A great moral force had flung itself into the struggle. The fine physical force of those spirited men spoke of something more than bodily vigor.

"They carried the great ideals of a free people at their hearts and with that vision were unconquerable. Their very presence brought reassurance; their fighting made victory certain.

"They were recognized as crusaders, and as their thousands swelled to millions their strength was seen to mean salvation. And they were fit men to carry such a hope and make good the assurance it forecast. Finer men never went into battle; and their officers were worthy of them.

"This is not the occasion upon which to utter a eulogy of the armies America sent to France, but perhaps, since I am speaking of their mission, I may speak also of the pride I shared with every American who saw or dealt with them there. They were the sort of men America would wish to be represented by, the sort of men every American would wish to claim as fellow countrymen and comrades in a great cause.

"They were terrible in battle and gentle and helpful out of it, remembering the mothers and the sisters, the wives and the little children at home. They were free men under arms, not forgetting their ideals of duty in the midst of tasks of violence. I am proud to have had the privilege of being associated with them and of calling myself their leader.

"But I speak now of what they meant to the men by whose sides they fought and to the people with whom they mingled with such utter simplicity as friends who asked only to be of service. They were for all the visible embodiment of America. What they did made America and all that she stood for a living reality in the thoughts not only of the people of France but also of tens of millions of men and women throughout all the toiling nations of a world standing everywhere in peril of its freedom and of the loss of everything it held dear, in deadly fear that its bonds were never to be loosed, its hopes forever to be mocked and disappointed.

"And the compulsion of what they stood for was upon us who represented America at the peace table. It was our duty to see to it that every decision we took part in contributed, so far as we were able to influence it, to quiet the fears and realize the hopes of the peoples who had been living in that shadow, the nations that had come by our assistance to their freedom. It was our duty to do everything that it was within our power to do to make the triumph of freedom and of right a lasting triumph in the assurance of which men might everywhere live without fear.

"Old entanglements of every kind stood in the way—promises which governments had made to one another in the days when might and right were confused and the power of the victor was without restraint. Engagements which contemplated any dispositions of territory, any extensions of sovereignty that might seem to be to the interest of those who had the power to insist upon them had been entered into without thought of what the peoples concerned might wish or profit by; and these could not always be honorably brushed aside. It was not easy to graft the new order of ideas on the old and some of the fruits of the grafting may, I fear, for a time be bitter.

"But, with very few exceptions, the men who sat with us at the peace table desired as sincerely as we did to get away from the bad influences, the illegitimate purposes, the demoralizing ambitions, the international counsels and expedients out of which the sinister designs of Germany had sprung as a natural growth.

"It had been our privilege to formulate the principles which were accepted as the basis of the peace, but they had been accomplished, not because we had come in to hasten and assure the victory and insisted upon them, but because they were readily acceded to as the principles to which honorable and enlightened minds everywhere had been bred. They spoke the conscience of the world as well as the conscience of America, and I am happy to pay my tribute of respect and gratitude to the able, forward looking men with whom it was my privilege to co-operate for their unfailing spirit of co-operation, their constant effort to accommodate the interests they represented to the principles we were all agreed upon.

"The difficulties, which were many, lay in the circumstances, not often in the men. Almost without exception the men who led had caught the true and full vision of the problem of peace as an indivisible whole, a problem, not of mere adjustments of interest, but of justice and right action.

"The atmosphere in which the conference worked seemed created, not by the ambitions of strong governments but by the hopes and aspirations of small nations and of peoples hitherto under bondage to the power that victory had shattered and destroyed. Two great empires had been forced into political bankruptcy and we were the receivers. Our task was not only to make peace with the central empires but to remedy the wrongs their armies had done. The central empires had lived in open violation of many of the very rights for which the war had been fought, dominating alien peoples over whom they had no natural right to rule, enforcing not obedience but veritable bondage, exploiting those who were weak for the benefit of those who were masters and overlords only by force of arms.

"There could be no peace until the whole order of central Europe was set right. That meant that new nations were to be created—Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary itself. No part of ancient Poland had ever in any true sense become a part of Germany or of Austria or of Russia. Bohemia was alien in every thought and hope to the monarchy of which she had so long been an artificial part; and the uneasy partnership between Austria and Hungary had been one rather of interest than of kinship or sympathy.

"The Slavs whom Austria had chosen to force into her empire on the south were kept to their obedience by nothing but fear. Their hearts were with their kinsmen in the Balkans.

"These were all arrangements of power, not arrangements of natural union or association. It was the imperative task of those who would make peace and make it intelligently to establish a new order which would rest upon the free choice of peoples rather than upon the arbitrary authority of Hapsburgs or Hohenzollerns.

"More than that, great populations bound by sympathy and actual kin to Roumania were also linked against their will to the conglomerate Austro-Hungarian monarchy or to other alien sovereignties, and it was part of the task of peace to make a new Roumania as well as a new Slavic state clustering about Serbia.

"And no natural frontiers could be found to these new fields of adjustment and redemption. It was necessary to look constantly forward to other related tasks. The German colonies were to be disposed of. They had not been governed; they had been exploited, merely, without thought of the interest or even the ordinary human rights of their inhabitants.

"The Turkish empire, moreover, had fallen apart, as the Austro-Hungarian had. It had never had any real unity. It had been held together only by pitiless, inhuman force. Its peoples cried aloud for release, for succor from unspeakable distress, for all that the new day of hope seemed at last to bring within its dawn. Peoples hitherto in utter darkness were to be led out into the same light and given at last a helping hand. Undeveloped peoples and peoples ready for recognition, but not yet ready to assume the full responsibilities of statehood, were to be given adequate guaranties of friendly protection, guidance and assistance.

"And out of the execution of these great enterprises of liberty sprang opportunities to attempt what statesmen had never found the way before to do; an opportunity to throw safeguards about the rights of racial, national and religious minorities by solemn international covenant; an opportunity to limit and regulate military establishments where they were most likely to be mischievous; an opportunity to effect a complete and systematic internationalization of waterways and railways which were necessary to the free economic life of more than one nation and to clear many of the normal channels of commerce of unfair obstructions of law or of privilege, and the very welcome opportunity to secure for labor the concerted protection of definite international pledges of principle and practice.

"These were not tasks which the conference looked about to find and went out of its way to perform. They were inseparable from the settlements of peace. They were thrust upon it by circumstances which could not be overlooked. The war had created them. In all quarters of the world old established relationships had been disturbed or broken and affairs were at loose ends, needing to be mended or united again, but could not be made what they were before. They had to be set right by applying some uniform principle of justice or enlightened expediency. And they could not be adjusted by merely prescribing in a treaty what should be done.

"New states were to be set up which could not hope to live through their first period of weakness without assured support by the great nations that had consented to their creation and won for them their independence. Ill governed colonies could not be put in the hands of governments which were to act as trustees for their people, and not as their masters, if there was to be no common authority among the nations to which they were to be responsible in the execution of their trusts.

"Future international conventions with regard to the control of waterways, with regard to illicit traffic of many kinds, in arms or in deadly drugs, or with regard to the adjustment of many varying international administrative arrangements, could not be assured if the treaty were to provide no permanent common international agency, if its execution in such matters was to be left to the slow and uncertain processes of co-operation by ordinary methods of negotiation.

"If the peace conference itself was to be the end of co-operative authority and common counsel among the governments to which the world was looking to enforce justice and give pledges of an enduring settlement, regions like the Saar basin could not be put under a temporary administrative regime which did not involve a transfer of political sovereignty and which contemplated a final determination of its political connections by popular vote to be taken at a distant date; no free city like Danzig could be created which was under elaborate international guaranties to accept exceptional obligations with regard to the use of its port and exceptional relations with a state of which it was not to form a part; properly safeguarded plebiscites could not be provided for where populations were at some future date to make choice what sovereignty they would live under; no certain and uniform method of arbitration could be secured for the settlement of anticipated difficulties of final decision, with regard to many matters dealt with in the treaty itself; the long continued supervision of the task of reparation which Germany was to undertake to complete within the next generation might entirely break down; the reconsideration and revision of administrative arrangements and restrictions which the treaty prescribed, but which it was recognized might not prove of lasting advantage or entirely fair if too long enforced, would be impracticable.

"The promises governments were making to one another about the way in which labor was to be dealt with, by law not only but in fact as well, would remain a mere humane thesis, if there was to be no common tribunal of opinion and judgment to which liberal statesmen could resort for the influences which alone might secure their redemption.

"A league of free nations had become a practical necessity. Examine the treaty of peace, and you will find that everywhere throughout its manifold provisions its framers have felt obliged to turn to the league of nations as an indispensable instrumentality for the maintenance of the new order it has been their purpose to set up in the world, the world of civilized men.

"That there should be a league of nations to steady the counsels and maintain the peaceful understandings of the world, to make not treaties alone but the accepted principles of international law as well the actual rule of conduct among the governments of the world, had been one of the agreements accepted from the first as the basis of peace with the central powers.

"The statesmen of all the belligerent countries were agreed that such a league must be created to sustain the settlements that were to be effected. But at first I think there was a feeling among some of them that, while it must be attempted, the formation of such a league was perhaps a counsel of perfection which practical men, long experienced in the world of affairs, must agree to very cautiously and with many misgivings.

"It was only as the difficult work of arranging an all but universal adjustment of the world's affairs advanced from day to day, from one stage of conference to another, that it became evident to them that what they were seeking would be little more than something written upon paper, to be interpreted and applied by such methods as the chances of politics might make available, if they did not provide a means of common counsel which all were obliged to accept, a common authority whose decisions would be recognized as decisions which all must respect.

"And so the most practical, the most skeptical among them turned more and more to the league as the authority through which international action was to be secured, the authority without which, as they had come to see it, it would be difficult to give assured effect either to this treaty or to any other international understanding upon which they were to depend for the maintenance of peace.

"The fact that the covenant of the league was the first substantive part of the treaty to be worked out and agreed upon, while all else was in solution, helped to make the formulation of the rest easier.

"The conference was, after all, not to be ephemeral. The concert of nations was to continue, under a definite covenant which had been agreed upon and which all were convinced was workable. They could go forward with confidence to make arrangements intended to be permanent.

"The most practical of the conferees were at last the most ready to refer to the league of nations the superintendence of all interests which did not admit of immediate determination, of all administrative problems which were to require a continuing oversight. What had seemed a counsel of perfection had come to seem a plain counsel of necessity. The league of nations was the practical statesman's hope of success in many of the most difficult things he was attempting.

"And it had validated itself in the thought of every member of the conference as something much bigger, much greater in every way than a mere instrument for carrying out the provisions of a particular treaty. It was universally recognized that all the peoples of the world demanded of the conference that it should create such a continuing concert of free nations as would make wars of aggression and spoliation such as this that has just ended forever impossible.

"A cry had gone out from every home in every stricken land from which sons and brothers and fathers had gone forth to the great sacrifice that such a sacrifice should never again be exacted. It was manifest why it had been exacted. It had been exacted because one nation desired dominion and other nations had known no means of defense except armaments and alliances. War had lain at the heart of every arrangement of the Europe—of every arrangement of the world—that preceded the war.

"Restive peoples had been told that fleets and armies, which they toiled to sustain, meant peace; and they now knew that they had been lied to; that fleets and armies had been maintained to promote national ambitions and meant war. They knew that no old policy meant anything else but force, force—always force. And they knew that it was intolerable.

"Every true heart in the world and every enlightened judgment demanded that, at whatever cost of independent action, every government that took thought for its people or for justice or for ordered freedom should lend itself to a new purpose and utterly destroy the old order of international politics. Statesmen might see difficulties, but the people could see none and could brook no denial.

"A war in which they had been bled white to beat the terror that lay concealed in every balance of power must not end in a mere victory of arms and a new balance. The monster that had resorted to arms must be put in chains that could not be broken. The united power of free nations must put a stop to aggression and the world must be given peace.

"If there was not the will or the intelligence to accomplish that now there must be another and a final war and the world must be swept clean of every power that could renew the terror.

"The league of nations was not merely an instrument to adjust and remedy old wrongs under a new treaty of peace; it was the only hope for mankind. Again and again had the demon of war been cast out of the house of the peoples, and the house swept clean by a treaty of peace; only to prepare a time when he would enter in again with spirits worse than himself. The house must now be given a tenant who could hold it against all such.

"Convenient, indeed indispensable, as statesmen found the newly planned league of nations to be for the execution of present plans of peace and reparation, they saw it in a new aspect before their work was finished. They saw it as the main object of the peace, as the only thing that could complete it or make it worth while. They saw it as the hope of the world, and that hope they did not dare to disappoint. Shall we or any other free people hesitate to accept this great duty? Dare we reject it and break the heart of the world?

"And so the result of the conference of peace, so far as Germany is concerned, stands complete. The difficulties encountered were very many.

"Sometimes they seemed insuperable. It was impossible to accommodate the interests of so great a body of nations—interests which directly or indirectly affected almost every nation in the world—without many minor compromises.

"The treaty, as a result, is not exactly what we would have written. It is probably not what any one of the national delegations would have written. But results were worked out which on the whole bear test.

"I think that it will be found that the compromises which were accepted as inevitable nowhere cut to the heart of any principle. The work of the conference squares, as a whole, with the principles agreed upon as the basis of the peace as well as with the practical possibilities of the international situations which had to be faced and dealt with as facts.

"I shall presently have occasion to lay before you a special treaty with France, whose object is the temporary protection of France from unprovoked aggression by the power with whom this treaty of peace has been negotiated. Its terms link it with this treaty. I take the liberty, however, of reserving it for special explication on another occasion.

"The role which America was to play in the conference seemed determined, as I have said, before my colleagues and I got to Paris—determined by the universal expectations of the nations whose representatives, drawn from all quarters of the globe, we were to deal with.

"It was universally recognized that America had entered the war to promote no private or peculiar interest of her own, but only as the champion of rights which she was glad to share with free men and lovers of justice everywhere.

"We had formulated the principles upon which the settlement was to be made—the principles upon which the armistice had been agreed to and the parleys of peace undertaken—and no one doubted that our desire was to see the treaty of peace formulated along the actual lines of those principles—and desired nothing else.

"We were welcomed as disinterested friends. We were resorted to as arbiters in many a difficult matter. It was recognized that our material aid would be indispensable in the days to come, when industry and credit would have to be brought back to their normal operation and communities beaten to the ground assisted to their feet once more, and it was taken for granted, I am proud to say, that we would play the helpful friend in these things as in all others without prejudice or favor. We were generously accepted as the unaffected champions of what was right.

"It was a very responsible role to play, but I am happy to report that the fine group of Americans who helped with their expert advice in each part of the varied settlements sought in every transaction to justify the high confidence reposed in them.

"And that confidence, it seems to me, is the measure of our opportunity and of our duty in the days to come, in which the new hope of the peoples of the world is to be fulfilled or disappointed. The fact that America is the friend of the nations, whether they be rivals or associates, is no new fact. It is only the discovery of it by the rest of the world that is new.

"America may be said to have just reached her majority as a world power. It was almost exactly twenty-one years ago that the results of the war with Spain put us unexpectedly in possession of rich islands on the other side of the world and brought us into association with other governments in the control of the West Indies.

"It was regarded as a sinister and ominous thing by the statesmen of more than one European chancellery that we should have extended our power beyond the confines of our continental dominions. They were accustomed to think of new neighbors as a new menace, of rivals as watchful enemies. There were persons amongst us at home who looked with deep disapproval and avowed anxiety on such extensions of our national authority over distant islands and over peoples whom they feared we might exploit, not serve and assist.

"We have been their friends and have sought to serve them. And our dominion has been a menace to no other nation. We redeemed our honor to the utmost in our dealings with Cuba. She is weak but absolutely free; and it is her trust in us that makes her free. Weak peoples everywhere stand ready to give us any authority among them that will assure them a like friendly oversight and direction. They know that there is no ground for fear in receiving us as their mentors and guides. Our isolation was ended twenty years ago; and now fear of us is ended also, our counsel and association sought after and desired.

"There can be no question of our ceasing to be a world power. The only question is whether we can refuse the moral leadership that is offered us, whether we shall accept or reject the confidence of the world. The war and the conference of peace now sitting in Paris seem to me to have answered that question. Our participation in the war established our position among the nations and nothing but our own mistaken action can alter it.

"It was not an accident or a matter of sudden choice that we are no longer isolated and devoted to a policy which has only our own interest and advantage for its object. It was our duty to go in if we were, indeed, the champions of liberty and of right. We answered to the call of duty in a way so spirited, so utterly without thought of what we spent of blood or treasure, so effective, so worthy of the admiration of true men everywhere, so wrought out of the stuff of all that was heroic, that the whole world saw at last in the flesh, in noble action, a great ideal asserted and vindicated, by a nation they had deemed material and now found to be compact of the spiritual forces that must free men of every nation from every unworthy bondage.

"It is thus that a new role and a new responsibility have come to this great nation that we honor and which we would all wish to lift to yet higher levels of service and achievement. The stage is set, the destiny disclosed. It has come about by no plan of our conceiving, but by the hand of God, who led us into this way.

"We cannot turn back. We can only go forward, with lifted eyes and freshened spirit, to follow the vision. It was of this that we dreamed at our birth. America shall in truth show the way. The light streams upon the path ahead, and nowhere else."

The treaty was referred to the senate committee on foreign relations July 10 and there it remained under consideration until Sept. 10, when it was finally reported to the senate with thirty-eight amendments and four reservations. The long delay in formulating the report occasioned much criticism, the main point of which was that it contributed materially to the general unrest in the country.

ELIHU ROOT'S RESERVATIONS.

Opposition to the league of nations had developed even before the senate committee began its deliberations and various suggestions for its improvement were made. The most notable of these came from Elihu Root, former United States senator, who on June 21 in a letter to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, republican leader of the senate and chairman of the committee on foreign relations, proposed the following reservations:

1. Elimination of article 10 in so far as it affects the United States. This article guarantees the members of the league to maintain the territorial integrity and political independence of all the nations of the world admitted to the covenant.

2. Absolute and unqualified right of the United States to withdraw from the league on two years' notice.

3. Clear and unmistakable protection of the Monroe doctrine and the sovereignty of the United States over purely American questions.

In his letter Mr. Root, while insisting that America could be of infinitely more value to the peace of the world by keeping out of all the petty and selfish quarrels that arise than she could by binding herself to take part in them, admitted that there was in the covenant a great deal of very high value which the world ought not to lose. "The arrangements," he wrote, "to make conferences of the powers automatic when there is danger of war; provisions for joint action as of course by representatives of the nations concerned in matters affecting common interests; the agreement for delay in case of serious disputes, with opportunity to bring the public opinion of the world to bear on the disputants and to induce cool and deliberate judgment; the recognition of racial and popular rights to the freedom of local self-government; and the plan, indispensable in some form, for setting up governments in the vast regions deprived by the war of the autocratic rule which had maintained order—all these ought not to be lost if that can possibly be avoided."

THE TAFT INTERPRETATIONS.

Other important suggestions were made after the peace treaty had been placed before the senate. In correspondence with Will H. Hays, chairman of the republican national committee, William Howard Taft, former president of the United States, offered on July 20 what he called "interpretations" of the league of nations covenant. These were six in number and in effect were as follows:

1. That upon two years' notice the United States should have the right to withdraw from the league without having to prove that she had fulfilled her obligations under the covenant.

2. That colonies and dependencies cannot be represented upon the league council with the mother government or be included in the clauses where the parties to the dispute are excluded from its settlement.

3. That the operation of the council under article 10 shall be advisory only and that each member shall be left free to settle questions of war, the decision in the United States resting with congress.

4. That matters relating to immigration, the tariff and similar domestic questions shall be excluded from settlement by the league.

5. That the Monroe doctrine is to be administered solely by the United States.

6. That the United States reserves the right to withdraw from the league unconditionally at the end of ten years or to terminate the obligations under article 10.

Mr. Taft in his letters to Mr. Hays said that he was strongly in favor of ratifying the treaty as it stood, but that it seemed necessary to make some reservations or interpretations in order to secure the required two-thirds vote for the ratification of the pact.

MR. HUGHES' SUGGESTIONS.

In response to a request from Senator Frederick Hale of Maine, Charles Evans Hughes, former member of the United States Supreme court, suggested, in a letter dated July 24, the following reservations:

"1. That whenever two years' notice of withdrawal from the league of nations shall have been given, as provided in article 1 of the covenant, the power giving the notice shall cease to be a member of the league, or subject to the obligations of the covenant of the league, at the time specified in the notice, notwithstanding any claim, charge or finding of the nonfulfillment of any international obligation or of any obligation under said covenant; provided, however, that such withdrawal shall not release the power from any debt or liability theretofore incurred.

"2. That questions relating to immigration, or the imposition of duties on imports where such questions do not arise out of any international engagement, are questions of domestic policy, and these and any other questions which according to international law are solely within domestic jurisdiction are not to be submitted for the consideration or action of the league of nations or any of its agencies.

"3. That the meaning of article 21 of the covenant of the league of nations is that the United States of America does not relinquish its traditional attitude toward purely American questions, and is not required by said covenant to submit its policies regarding questions which it deems to be purely American questions to the league of nations or any of its agencies, and that the United States of America may oppose and prevent any acquisition by any non-American power by conquest, purchase or in any other manner of any territory, possession or control in the western hemisphere.

"4. That the meaning of article 10 of the covenant of the league of nations is that the members of the league are not under any obligation to act in pursuance of said article except as they may decide to act upon the advice of the council of the league. The United States of America assumes no obligation under said article to undertake any military expedition or to employ its armed forces on land or sea, unless such action is authorized by the congress of the United States of America, which has exclusive authority to declare war, or determine for the United States of America whether there is any obligation on its part under said article and the means or action by which any such obligation shall be fulfilled.

"I agree with Mr. Root that it would be desirable to eliminate article 10 with its guaranty to 'preserve against external aggression the territorial integrity' of all members of the league. I still think that article 10 is a trouble breeder and not a peacemaker."

PRESIDENT QUESTIONED BY SENATORS.

The senate committee on foreign relations called many witnesses before it to testify as to how the treaty of peace with Germany was framed and as to the reasons for the various conclusions reached, and to give their interpretations of various parts of the league of nations covenant. Little attention, in fact, was paid to anything outside the clauses relating to the league. The hearings occupied weeks and the testimony taken would fill volumes. The most distinguished witness was President Wilson, who was examined by members of the committee for three hours and a half at the white house on Aug. 19. The opinions he expressed then were the same as those which he had made known in various addresses delivered after his return from France and which he reiterated on many occasions in the course of a lengthy tour through the United States in an effort to enlighten public opinion and to combat the arguments made in and out of the senate by the opponents of the treaty. He had become convinced that unless he went directly to the people his work in France would go for nothing.

WILSON TOUR IN DEFENSE OF TREATY.

For the purpose of explaining and defending the features of the German peace treaty and especially the covenant of the league of nations, which had met with opposition in the United States senate and elsewhere, President Wilson undertook a speech making tour in September, 1919, which took him to many of the principal cities in the central and western states. He traveled by special train and was accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, Rear-Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Secretary Tumulty, a corps of stenographers and some thirty correspondents. The start of the journey was made Sept. 3 and the first address was made in Columbus, O., on the forenoon of Sept. 4.

KEYNOTE SPEECH OF TRIP.

Speaking in Memorial hall, Columbus, O., Sept. 4, President Wilson said:

"Mr. Chairman, Governor Campbell, and my fellow citizens: It is with very profound pleasure that I find myself face to face with you. I have for a long time chafed at the confinement of Washington. I have for a long time wished to fulfill the purpose with which my heart was full when I returned to our beloved country, namely, to go out and report to my fellow countrymen concerning those affairs of the world which now need to be settled.

"The only people I owe any report to are you and the other citizens of the United States and it has become increasingly necessary, apparently, that I should report to you.

"After all the various angles at which you have heard the treaty held up perhaps you would like to know what is in the treaty. I find it very difficult in reading some of the speeches that I have read to form any conception of that great document.

"It is a document unique in the history of the world for many reasons and I think I cannot do you a better service or the peace of the world a better service than by pointing out to you just what this treaty contains and what it seeks to do.

"In the first place, my fellow countrymen, it seeks to punish one of the greatest wrongs ever done in history, the wrong which Germany sought to do to the world and to civilization, and there ought to be no weak purpose with regard to the application of the punishment. She attempted an intolerable thing and she must be made to pay for the attempt.

"The terms of the treaty are severe, but they are not unjust. I can testify that the men associated with me at the peace conference in Paris had it in their hearts to do justice and not wrong, but they knew, perhaps with a more vivid sense of what had happened than we could possibly know on this side of the water, the many solemn covenants which Germany had disregarded; the long preparation she had made to overwhelm her neighbors; the utter disregard which she had shown for human rights, for the rights of women and children and those who were helpless.

"They had seen their lands devastated by an enemy that devoted itself not only to the effort of victory but to the effort of terror, seeking to terrify the people whom they fought, and I wish to testify that they exercised restraint in the terms of this treaty.

"They do not wish to overwhelm any great nation and they had no purpose in overwhelming the German people, but they did think that it ought to be burned into the consciousness of men forever that no people ought to permit its government to do what the German government did.

"In the last analysis, my fellow countrymen, as we in America would be the first to claim, a people is responsible for the acts of its government; if its government purposes things that are wrong, it ought to take measures and see to it that that purpose is not executed.

"Germany was self-governed. Her rulers had not concealed the purposes that they had in mind, but they had deceived their people as to the character of the methods they were going to use and I believe from what I can learn that there is an awakened consciousness in Germany itself of the deep iniquity of the thing that was attempted.

"When the Austrian delegates came before the peace conference, they, in so many words, spoke of the origination of the war as a crime and admitted in our presence that it was a thing intolerable to contemplate.

"They knew in their hearts that it had done them the deepest conceivable wrong; that it had put their people and the people of Germany at the judgment seat of mankind and throughout this treaty every term that was applied to Germany was meant not to humiliate Germany but to rectify the wrong that she had done.

"And if you will look even into the severe terms of reparation, for there was no indemnity—no indemnity of any sort was claimed—merely reparation, merely paying for the destruction done, merely making good the losses so far as the losses could be made good which she had unjustly inflicted, not upon the governments—for the reparation is not to go to the governments—but upon the people whose rights she had trodden upon with absolute absence of everything that even resembled pity—there is no indemnity in this treaty, but there is reparation and even in the terms of reparation a method is devised by which the reparation shall be adjusted to Germany's ability to pay it.

"I am astonished at some of the statements I see made about this treaty, and the truth is that they are made by persons who have not read the treaty or who, if they have read it, have not comprehended its meaning.

"There is a method of adjustment in the treaty by which the reparation shall not be pressed beyond the point which Germany can pay, but she will be pressed to the utmost point that she can pay, which is just, which is righteous.

"It would be intolerable if there had been anything else, for, my fellow citizens, this treaty is not meant merely to end this single war, it is meant as a notice to every government who in the future will attempt this thing that mankind will unite to inflict the same punishment.

"There is no national triumph sought to be recorded in this treaty. There is no glory sought for any particular nation.

"The thought of the statesmen collected around that table was of their people, of the sufferings that they had gone through, of the losses they had incurred, that great throbbing heart which was so depressed, so forlorn, so sad in every memory that it had had of the five tragical years, my fellow countrymen.

"Let us never forget the purpose, the high purpose, the disinterested purpose, with which America lent its strength, not for its own glory, but for the advance of mankind.

"And as I said, this treaty was not intended merely to end this war; it was intended to prevent any similar war.

"I wonder if some of the opponents of the league of nations have forgotten the promises we made our people before we went to that peace table?

"We had taken by processes of law the flower of our youth from every countryside—from every household—and we told those mothers and fathers and sisters and wives and sweethearts that we were taking these men to fight a war which would end business of that sort and if we do not do the best that human concert of action can do to end it we are of all men the most unfaithful—the most unfaithful to the loving hearts who suffered in this war; the most unfaithful to those whose heads bowed in grief, yet lifted with the feeling that the lad laid down his life for great things, among other things, in order that other lads might not have to do the same thing.

"That is what the league of nations is for, to end this war justly, and it is not merely to serve notice on governments which would contemplate the same things which Germany contemplated, that they will do it at their peril, but also concerting the combination of power which will prove to them that they will do it at their peril.

"It is idle to say the world will combine against you, because it may not, but it is persuasive to say the world is combined against you and will remain combined against any who attempt the same things that you attempted.

"The league of nations is the only thing that can prevent the recurrence of this dreadful catastrophe and redeem our promises. And the character of the league is based upon the experience of this very war.

"I did not meet a single public man who did not admit these things, that Germany would not have gone into this war if she had thought Great Britain was going into it, and that she most certainly would never have gone into this war if she had dreamed America was going into it, and they have all admitted that a notice beforehand that the greatest powers of the world would combine to prevent this sort of thing would have prevented it absolutely.

"When gentlemen tell you, therefore, that the league of nations is intended for some other purpose than this merely reply this to them:

"'If we do not do this thing we have neglected the central covenant that we made to our people.'

"Then there will be no statesman of any country who can thereafter promise his people any alleviation from the perils of war.

"The passions of this world are not dead; the rivalries of this world have not cooled; they have been rendered hotter than ever. The harness that is to unite nations is more necessary now than it ever was before and unless there is this sureness of combined action before wrong is attempted, wrong will be attempted just as soon as the most ambitious nations can recover from the financial stress of this war.

"Now, look, what else is in the treaty? This treaty is unique in the history of mankind, because the center of it is the redemption of weak nations.

"There never was a congress of nations before that considered the rights of those who could not enforce their rights. There never was a congress of nations before that did not seek to affect some balance of power brought about by means of serving the strength and interest of the strongest powers concerned, whereas this treaty builds up nations that never could have won their freedom in any other way.

"It builds them up by gift, by largess, not by obligation; builds them up because of the conviction of the men who wrote the treaty that the rights of people transcend the rights of governments; because of the conviction of the men who wrote that treaty that the fertile source of war is wrong; that the Austro-Hungarian empire, for example, was held together by military force and consisted of peoples who did not want to live together; who did not have the spirit of nationality as toward each other; who were constantly chafing at the bands that held them.

"Hungary, though a willing partner of Austria, was willing to be her partner because she could share Austria's strength for accomplishing her own ambitions and her own ambitions were to hold under the Jugo Slavic peoples that lie to the south of her.

"Bohemia, an unhappy partner, a partner by duress, flowing in all her veins the strongest national impulse that was to be found anywhere in Europe; and north of that pitiful Poland, a great nation divided up among the great powers of Europe, torn asunder—kinship disregarded, natural ties treated with contempt and an obligatory division among sovereigns imposed upon her—a part of her given to Russia, a part of her given to Austria and a part of her given to Germany and great bodies of Polish people never permitted to have the normal intercourse with their kinsmen for fear that that fine instinct of the heart should assert itself which binds families together.

"Poland could never have won her independence.

"Bohemia never could have broken away from the Austro-Hungarian combination.

"The Slavic peoples to the south running down into the great Balkan peninsula had again and again tried to assert their nationality and their independence and had as often been crushed, not by the immediate power they were fighting, but by the combined power of Europe.

"The old alliances, the old balances of power were meant to see to it that no little nation asserted its rights to the disturbance of the peace of Europe and every time an assertion of rights was attempted they were suppressed by combined influence and force and this treaty tears away all that and says these people have a right to live their own lives under the governments which they themselves choose to set up.

"That is the American principle and I was glad to fight for it and when strategic considerations were urged I said—not I alone—but it was a matter of common counsel that strategic considerations were not in our thought, that we were not now arranging for future wars, but were giving people what belonged to them.

"My fellow citizens, I do not think there is any man alive who has a more tender sympathy for the great people of Italy than I have and a very stern duty was presented to us when we had to consider some of the claims of Italy on the Adriatic, because strategically from the point of view of future wars Italy needed a military foothold on the other side of the Adriatic, but her people did not live there except in little spots.

"It was a Slavic people and I had to say to my Italian friends that everywhere else in this treaty we have given territory to the people who lived on it and I do not think that it is for the advantage of Italy—and I am sure it is not for the advantage of the world—to give Italy territory where other people live.

"I felt the force of the argument for what they wanted and it was the old argument that had always prevailed—namely, that they needed it from a military point of view—and I have no doubt that if there is no league of nations they will need it from a military point of view, but if there is a league of nations they will not need it from a military point of view.

"If there is no league of nations the military point of view will prevail in every instance and peace will be brought into contempt; but if there is a league of nations

Italy need not fear the fact that the shores on the other side of the Adriatic tower above her lower sandy shores on her side of the sea, because there will be no threatening guns there and the nations of the world will have considered not merely to see that the Slavic peoples have their rights, but that the Italian people have their rights as well.

"I would rather have everybody on my side than be armed to the teeth, and every settlement that is right, every settlement that is based upon the principles I have alluded to, is a safe settlement because the sympathy of mankind will be behind it.

"Some gentlemen have feared with regard to the league of nations that we will be obliged to do things we don't want to do. If the treaty were wrong that might be so, but if the treaty is right, we will wish to preserve right. I think I know the heart of this great people whom I for the time being have the high honor to represent better than some other men that I hear talk.

"I have been bred and am proud to have been bred in the old revolutionary stock which set this government up, when America was set up as a friend of mankind, and I know—if they do not—that America has never lost that vision or that purpose.

"But I haven't the slightest fear that arms will be necessary if the purpose is there. If I know that my adversary is armed and I am not, I do not press the controversy, and if any nation entertains selfish purposes set against the principles established in this treaty and is told by the rest of the world that it must withdraw its claims, it will not press them.

"The heart of this treaty then, my fellow citizens, is not even that it punishes Germany—that is a temporary thing—it is that it rectifies the age long wrong which characterized the history of Europe.

"There were some of us who wished that the scope of the treaty would reach some other age long wrongs. It was a big job and I don't say that we wished that it were bigger, but there were other wrongs elsewhere than in Europe and of the same kind, which no doubt ought to be righted and some day will be righted, but which we could not deal with in the treaty because we could deal only with the countries which the war had engulfed and affected.

"But so far as the scope of our treaty went, we rectified the wrongs which have been the fertile source of war in Europe.

"Have you ever reflected, my fellow countrymen, on the real source of revolutions? Men don't start revolutions in a sudden passion. Do you remember what Thomas Carlyle said about the French revolution?

"He was speaking of the so-called hundred days' terror which reigned, not only in Paris but throughout France, in the days of the French revolution; and he reminded his readers that back of that hundred days of terror lay several hundred years of agony and of wrong.

"The French people had been deeply and persistently wronged by their government, robbed, their human rights disregarded, and the slow agony of those hundreds of years had after a while gathered into a hot agony that could not be suppressed. Revolutions don't spring up over night, revolutions gather through the ages; revolutions come from the long suppression of the human spirit; revolutions come because men know that they have rights and that they are disregarded.

"And when we think of the future of the world in connection with this treaty we must remember that one of the chief efforts of those who made this treaty was to remove that anger from the heart of great peoples, great peoples who had always been suppressed and always been used, who had always been the tools in the hands of governments—generally of alien governments—not their own.

"And the makers of the treaty knew that if these wrongs were not removed there could be no peace in the world, because, after all, my fellow citizens, war comes from the seed of wrong and not from the seed of right. This treaty is an attempt to right the history of Europe—and in my humble judgment it is a measurable success.

"I say 'measurable,' my fellow citizens, because you will realize the difficulty of this. Here are two neighboring peoples. The one people has not stopped at a sharp line and the settlements of the other people, or the migrations, begun at that sharp line; they have intermingled.

"There are regions where you can't draw a national line and say there are Slavs on this side and Italians on that; there is this people there and that people there.

"It can't be done. You have to approximate the line. You have to come to it, as near to it as you can and then trust to the process of history to redistribute, it may be, the people who are on the wrong side of the line.

"And there are many such lines drawn in this treaty and to be drawn in the Austrian treaty, where perhaps there are more lines of that sort than in the German treaty.

"When we came to draw the line between the Polish people and the German people, not the line between Germany and Poland—there wasn't any Poland, strictly speaking—the line between the German people and the Polish people—there were districts like the upper part of Silesia, or rather the eastern part of Silesia, which is called 'Upper Silesia,' because it is mountainous and the other part is not. High Silesia is chiefly Polish and when we came to draw a line to represent Poland it was necessary to include High Silesia if we were really going to play fair and make Poland up of the Polish peoples wherever we found them in sufficiently close neighborhood to one another.

"But it wasn't perfectly clear that Upper—that High Silesia wanted to be part of Poland. At any rate there were Germans in High Silesia who said that it did not, and, therefore, we did there what we did in many other places; we said, 'Very well, then, we will let the people that live there decide.

" 'We will have a referendum within a certain length of time after the war, under the supervision of an international commission which will have a sufficient armed force behind it to preserve order and see that nobody interferes with the elections. We will have an absolutely free vote and High Silesia shall go either to Germany or to Poland, as the people in High Silesia prefer.'

"And that illustrates many other cases where we provided for a referendum, or a plebiscite, as they choose to call it; and we are going to leave it to the people themselves, as we should have done, what government they shall live under.

"It is none of my prerogative to allot peoples to this government and the other. It is nobody's right to do that allotting except the people themselves and I want to testify that this treaty is shot through with the American principle of the choice of the governed.

"Of course, at times it went further than we could make a practical policy of, because various peoples were keen upon getting back portions of their populations which were separated from them by many miles of territory and we couldn't spot over with little pieces of separated states.

"I even had to remind my Italian colleagues that if they were going to claim every place where there was a large Italian population we would have to cede New York to them, because there are more Italians in New York than in any Italian city.

"But I believe—I hope—that the Italians in New York city are as glad to stay there as we are to have them. I would not have you suppose that I am intimating that my Italian colleagues entered any claim for New York city.

"We, of all peoples in the world, my fellow citizens, ought to be able to understand the questions of this treaty and without anybody explaining them to us; for we are made up out of all the peoples of the world. I dare say that in this audience there are representatives of practically all the peoples dealt with in this treaty.

"You don't have to have me explain national ambitions to you—national aspirations. You have been brought up on them; you learned of them since you were children and it is those national aspirations which we sought to realize, to give an outlet to, in this great treaty.

"But we do much more than that. This treaty contains, among other things, a Magna Charta of labor—a thing unheard of until this interesting year of grace. There is a whole section of the treaty devoted to arrangements, by which the interests of those who labor with their hands all over the world—whether they be men or women or children—are all of them to be safeguarded. And next month there is to meet the first assembly under this section of the league—and let me tell you it will meet whether the treaty is ratified by that time or not.

"There is to meet an assembly which represents the interests of laboring men throughout the world; not their political interests. There is nothing political about it.

"It is the interest of men concerning the conditions of their labor, concerning the character of labor which women shall engage in, the character of labor which children shall be permitted to engage in; the hours of labor, and, incidentally, of course, the remuneration of labor.

"The labor shall be remunerated in proportion, of course, to the maintenance of the standard of living which is proper for the man who is expected to give his whole brain and intelligence and energy to a particular task.

"I hear very little said about this Magna Charta of labor which is embodied in this. It forecasts the day which ought to have come long ago, when statesmen will realize that no nation is fortunate which is not happy and that no nation can be happy whose people are not contented, contented in their industry, contented in their lives and fortunate in the circumstances of their lives.

"If I were to state what seems to me to be the central idea of this treaty it would be this: It is almost a discovery in international conventions—'That nations do not consist of their government, but consist of their people.'

"That is a rudimentary idea; it seems to go without saying to us in America, but my fellow citizens, it was never the leading idea in any other international congress that I ever heard of; that is to say, any international congress made up of the representatives of government.

"They were always thinking of national policy, of national advantages, of the rivalries of trade, of the advantages of territorial conquest.

"There is nothing of that in this treaty.

"You will notice that even the territories which are taken away from Germany, like her colonies, are not given to anybody. There is not a single act of annexation in this treaty.

"But territories inhabited by people not yet able to govern themselves, either because of economic or other circumstances, or the stage of their development, are put under the care of powers who are to accept as trustees, trustees responsible in the forum of the world at the bar of the league of nations, and the terms upon which they are to exercise their trusteeship are outlined.

"They are not to use those people by way of profit and to fight their wars for them; they are not to permit any form of slavery among them or of enforced labor. They are to see to it that there are humane conditions of labor with regard not only to the women and children, but the men, too.

"They are to establish no fortifications; they are to regulate the liquor and the opium traffic; they are to see to it, in other words that the lives of the people whose care they assume—not sovereignty over whom they assume, but whose care they assume—are kept clean and safe and holy.

"There again the principle of the treaty comes out—that the object of the arrangement is the welfare of the people who live there and not the advantages of the government.

"It goes beyond that and it seeks to gather under the common supervision of the league of nations the various instrumentalities by which the world has been trying to check the evils that were in some places debasing men, like the opium traffic, like the traffic—for it was a traffic—in men, women and children; like the traffic in other dangerous drugs; like the traffic in arms among uncivilized people, who could use arms only for their detriment; for sanitation; for the work of the Red Cross.

"Why, those clauses, my fellow citizens, draw the hearts of the world into league; draw the noble impulses of the world together and make a poem of them.

"I used to be told that this was an age in which mind was monarch; and my comment was that if that were true the mind was one of those modern monarchs that reign and do not govern, but as a matter of fact we were governed by a great representative assembly, made up of the human passions and that the best we could manage was that the high and fine passions should be in a majority, so that they could control the face of passion, so that they could check the things that were wrong, and this treaty seeks something like that.

"In drawing the humane endeavors together, it makes a mirror of the fine passions of the world, of its philanthropic passions and of its passion of pity, of this passion of human sympathy, of this passion of human friendliness and helpfulness, for there is such a passion.

"It is the passion that has lifted us along the slow road of civilization; it is the passion that has made ordered government possible; it is the passion that has made justice and established the thing in some happy part of the world.

"That is the treaty. Did you ever hear of it before? Did you ever know before what was in this treaty? Did anybody before ever tell you what the treaty was intended to do?

"I beg, my fellow citizens, that you and the rest of those Americans with whom we are happy to be associated all over this broad land, will read the treaty themselves—or if they won't take time to do that—for it is a technical document that is hard to read—that they will accept the interpretation of those who made it and know what the intentions were in the making of it.

"I hear a great deal, my fellow citizens, about the selfishness and the selfish ambitions of other governments, but I would not be doing justice to the gifted men with whom I was associated on the other side of the water if I did not testify that the purposes that I have outlined were their purposes.

"We differed as to the method very often; we had discussions as to the details, but we never had any serious discussion as to the principle. And while we all acknowledge that the principles might perhaps in details have been better, really we are all back of those principles.

"There is a concert of mind and of purpose and of policy in the world that was never in existence before. I am not saying that by way of credit to myself or to those colleagues to whom I have alluded, because what happened to us was that we got messages from our peoples; we were there under instructions, whether they were written down or not. We did not dare come home without fulfilling those instructions.

"If I could not have brought back the kind of treaty I brought back, I never would have come back, because I would have been an unfaithful servant and you would have had the right to condemn me in any way that you chose; so that I testify that this is an American treaty; not only that but it is a treaty that expresses the heart of the people —of the great peoples who were associated together in the war against Germany.

"I said at the opening of this informal address, my fellow citizens, that I had come to make a report to you. I want to add to that a little bit. I have not come to debate the treaty. It speaks for itself if you will let it. The arguments directed against it are directed against it with a radical misunderstanding of the instrument itself.

"Therefore, I am not going anywhere to debate the treaty. I am going to expound it and I am going, right here, now, to-day, to urge you in every vocal method that you can use to assert the spirit of the American people in support of it.

"Don't let men pull it down. Don't let them misrepresent it; don't let them lead this nation away from the high purposes with which this war was inaugurated and fought.

"As I came through that line of youngsters in khaki a few minutes ago I felt that I could salute it because I had done the job in the way I promised them I would do it and when this treaty is accepted men in khaki will not have to cross the seas again.

"That is the reason I believe in it. I say 'When it is accepted,' for it will be accepted. I have never entertained a moment's doubt of that and the only thing I have been impatient of has been the delay. It is not a dangerous delay except for the temper of the peoples scattered throughout the world who are waiting.

"Do you realize, my fellow citizens, that the whole world is waiting on America? The only country in the world that is trusted at this moment is the United States and they are waiting to see whether their trust is justified or not.

"That has been the ground of my impatience. I knew their trust was justified, but I begrudge the time that certain gentlemen oblige us to take in telling them so.

"We shall tell them so in a voice as authentic as any voice in history and in the years to come men will be glad to remember that they had some part in the great struggle which brought this incomparable consummation of the hopes of mankind."

WAR COULD HAVE BEEN PREVENTED.

Addressing an audience of 10,000 in the Coliseum, Indianapolis, Ind., on the evening of Sept. 4, President Wilson said in part:

"I want to recall to you for the purpose of this evening the circumstances of the war and the purposes for which our men lost their lives on the other side of the sea.

"You will remember that a prince of the house of Austria was slain by a Serbian sympathizer. Serbia was one of the small kingdoms of Europe. She had no strength which any of the great powers needed to fear.

"As we see the war now, Germany and those who conspired with her made a pretext of that accusation in order to make unconscionable demands for the weak and helpless kingdom of Serbia, not with a view of bringing about an acquiescence in those demands, but with a view to bringing about a conflict in which their purposes, quite separate from the purposes connected with these demands, could be achieved.

"Just so soon as these demands were made, other nations of Europe sent telegraphic messages to their representatives at Vienna and Berlin, urging them to ask the governments of Vienna and Berlin to enter into discussion of these matters.

"I was recalling, my fellow citizens, the circumstances which began the terrible conflict that has just been concluded.

"So soon as the unconscionable demands of Austria were made on Serbia the other governments of Europe sent telegraphic messages to Berlin and Vienna asking that the matter be brought into a conference.

"And the significant circumstance of the beginning of this war is that the Austrian and German governments did not dare to discuss the demands on Serbia or the purpose which they had in view.

"It is universally admitted on the other side of the water that if they had gone into international conference on the Austrian demands the war never would have been begun.

"There was an insistent demand from London, for example, by the British foreign minister that the cabinets of Europe should be given time to confer with the governments at Vienna and Berlin. The governments at Vienna and Berlin did not dare to admit time for discussion.

"I am recalling these circumstances, my fellow citizens, because I want to point out to you what apparently has escaped the attention of some of the critics of the league of nations that the heart of the league of nations does not lie in any of the portions which have been discussed in public debate.

"The great bulk of the provisions of that covenant contained these engagements and promises on the part of the states which undertook to become members of it:

"That in no circumstances will they go to war without first having either submitted the question to arbitration, in which case they agree to abide by the result, or having submitted the question to discussion by the council of the league of nations, in which case they will allow six months for the discussion and engage not to go to war until three months after the council has announced its opinion upon the subject under dispute.

"So that the heart of the covenant of the league is that the nations solemnly covenant not to go to war for nine months after a controversy becomes acute.

"If there had been nine days of discussion Germany would not have gone to war. If there had been nine days within which to bring to bear the opinion of the world, the judgment of mankind, upon the purposes of these governments, they never would have dared to execute those purposes.

ARTICLE X. EXPLAINED.

"You have heard a great deal about article X. of the covenant of the league of nations. Article X. speaks the conscience of the world. Article X. is the article which goes to the heart of this whole bad business, for that article says that the members of this league —and that is intended to be all the great nations of the world—engage to resist and preserve against all external aggression the territorial integrity and political independence of the nations concerned.

"That promise is necessary in order to prevent this sort of war recurring and we are absolutely discredited if we fought this war and then neglect the essential safeguard against it.

"You have heard it said, my fellow citizens, that we are robbed of some degree of our sovereign independence of choice by articles of that sort. Every man who makes a choice to respect the rights of his neighbors deprives himself of absolute sovereignty, but he does it by promising never to do wrong and I cannot, for one, see anything that robs me of any inherent right that I ought to retain when I promise that I will do right.

"We engage, in the first sentence of article X., to respect and preserve from external aggression the territorial integrity and the existing political independence, not only of the other member states, but of all states and if any member of the league disregards that promise, then what happens?

"The council of the league advises what should be done to enforce the respect for that covenant on the part of the nation attempting to violate it. And there is no compulsion upon us to take that advice—except the compulsion of our good conscience and judgment.

"So that it is perfectly evident that if, in the judgment of the people of the United States, the council adjudged this was not an occasion for the use of force, there would be no necessity on the part of the congress of the United States to vote the use of force. But there could be no advice of the council on any such subject without a unanimous vote, and the unanimous vote would include our own.

"And if we accepted the advice we would be accepting our own advice. For I need not tell you that the representatives of the government of the United States would not vote without instructions from their government at home and that what we united in advising we could be certain that our people would desire to do.

"There is in that covenant not one note of surrender of the independent judgment of the government of the United States, but an expression of it, because that independent judgment would have to join with the judgment of the rest.

"But when is that judgment going to be expressed, my fellow citizens? Only after it is evident that every other resource has failed. And I want to call your attention to the central machinery of the league of nations.

"If any member of that league, or any nation not a member, refuses to submit the question at issue either to arbitration or to discussion by the council there ensues automatically, by the engagements of this covenant, an absolute economic boycott.

"There will be no trade with that nation by any member of the league; there will be no interchange of communication by post or telegraph; there will be no travel to or from that nation; its borders will be closed; no citizen of any other state will be allowed to enter it and no one of its citizens will be allowed to leave it.

"It will be hermetically sealed by the united action of the most powerful nations of the world, and if this economic boycott bears with unequal weight, the members of the league agree to support one another and to relieve one another in any exceptional disadvantages that may arise out of it.

"And I want you to realize that this war was won not only by the armies of the world but it was won by economic means as well. Without the economic means the war would have been much longer continued. What happened was that Germany was shut off from the economic resources of the rest of the globe and she could not stand it; and a nation that is boycotted is a nation that is in sight of surrender.

"Apply this economic, peaceful, silent, deadly remedy and there will be no need for force.

"It is a terrible remedy. It does not cost a life outside the nation boycotted, but it brings a pressure upon that nation which, in my judgment, no modern nation could resist.

"I want you to notice another interesting point that has never been dilated upon in connection with the league of nations. I am now treading upon delicate ground and I must express myself with caution.

"There were a good many delegations that visited Paris waiting to be heard by the peace conference who had real causes to present and which ought to be presented to the view of the world.

"But we had to point out to them that they did not happen, unfortunately, to come within the area of settlement; that their questions were not questions which were necessarily drawn into the things that we were deciding. * * *

"I therefore want to call your attention, if you will look it up when you go home, to article XI., following article X. of the covenant of the league of nations.

"That article XI. let me say, is the favorite article in the treaty so far as I am concerned. It says that every matter which is likely to affect the peace of the world is everybody's business and that it shall be the friendly right of any nation to call attention in the league to anything that is likely to affect the peace of the world or the good understanding between nations, upon which the peace of the world depends, whether that matter immediately concerns the nation drawing attention to it or not.

"There is not an oppressed people in the world which cannot, henceforth, get a hearing at that forum. And you know, my fellow citizens, what a hearing will mean if the cause of that people is just.

"There is another thing in this covenant, which was one of a number of difficulties that we encountered at Paris. I need not tell you that at every turn in these discussions we came across some secret treaty, some understanding that had never been made public before; some understanding that embarrassed the whole settlement.

"I think it will not be improper for me to refer to one of those matters. When we came to the settlement of the Shantung question with regard to China we found that Great Britain and France were under specific treaty obligations to Japan that she should get exactly what she got in the treaty with Germany, and the most that we could do—I mean the most that the United States could do—was to urge upon the representatives of Japan the very fatal policy that was involved in such a settlement and obtain from her the promise, which she gave, that she would not take advantage of those portions of the treaty, but would return, without qualification, the sovereignty which Germany had enjoyed in Shantung province to the republic of China.

"We have had repeated assurances since then that Japan intends to fulfill those promises in absolute good faith. But my present point is that there stood at the very gate of that settlement a secret treaty between Japan and two of the great powers engaged in this war on our side.

"This war had been fought, in part, because of the refusal to observe the fidelity which is involved in a promise, in a failure to regard the fairness of treaties. And this covenant of the league of nations provides that no secret treaty shall have any validity."

OPPOSITION ILLOGICAL.

From Indianapolis President Wilson proceeded to St. Louis, Mo., where he made two addresses Sept. 5, one to business men at a luncheon and the other to an audience of 10,000 in the Coliseum. At the mass meeting the president said:

"I have sought—I think without prejudice—to understand the point of view of the men who have been opposing the treaty and the covenant of the league of nations. Many of them are men whose judgment and patriotic feeling I have been accustomed to admire and respect. And yet I must admit to you, my fellow countrymen, that it is very hard for me to believe that they have followed their line of thinking to its logical and necessary conclusion, because, when you reflect upon their position, it is either that we ought to reject this treaty altogether or that we ought to change it in such a way as will make it necessary to reopen negotiations with Germany and reconsider the settlements of the peace in many essential particulars. I think that is a reasonable and conservative statement.

"If the world is going bankrupt, if credit is going to be destroyed, if the industry of the races of the world is going to be interrupted, our market will be confined to the United States; trade will be impossible except within our own borders. If we are to save our own markets and rehabilitate our own industries we must save the financial situation of the world and rehabilitate the markets of the world.

"Germany cannot pay for this war unless her industries are revived, and the treaty of peace sets up a great commission known as the reparation commission, in which it was intended that there should be a member from the United States as well as from other countries, and the business of this commission will be, in part, to see that the industries of Germany are revived in order that Germany may pay this great debt which she owes to civilization.

"That reparation commission can determine the currents of trade, the conditions of credit, of international credit; it can determine how much Germany is going to buy, where it is going to buy, and how it is going to pay; and if we must, to save ourselves, contribute to the financial rehabilitation of the world, then, without being members of this partnership, we must put our money in the hands of those who want to get the markets that belong to us.

"That is what these gentlemen call playing a lone hand. It is, indeed, playing a lone hand; it is playing a hand that is frozen out. We must contribute the money which other nations are to use in order to rehabilitate their industry and credit, and we must make them our antagonists and rivals and not our partners. I put that proposition to any business man, young or old, in the United States, and ask him how he likes it, and whether he considers that a useful way for the United States to stand alone.

"We have got to carry this burden of reconstruction, whether we will or not, or be ruined, and the question is shall we carry it and be ruined anyhow; these gentlemen propose that at every point we shall be embarrassed by the whole financial affairs of the world being in the hands of other nations.

"The men who propose these things do not understand the selfish interests of the United States. Because here is the rest of the picture—hot rivalries, burning suspicions, jealousies, arrangements made everywhere, if possible, to shut us out because, if we won't come in as equals, we ought to be shut out.

"As it stands now, every nation trusts us. They look to us. They long that we shall undertake anything for their assistance rather than that any other nation should undertake it. And if we say we are in this world to live by ourselves and get what we can out of it by any selfish process, then the reaction will change the whole heart and attitude of the world toward this great, free, justice-loving people, and after you have changed the attitude of the world what have you produced—peace?

"Why, my fellow citizens, is there any man here, or any woman—let me say, is there any child here, who does not know that the seed of war in the modern world is industrial and commercial rivalry?

"Ladies and gentlemen, I do not say it because I am an American and my heart is full of the same pride that fills yours with regard to the power and the spirit of this great nation, but merely because it is a fact, which I think everybody would admit, outside of America as well as inside of America, the organization contemplated by the league of nations, without the United States, would merely be an alliance and not a league of nations.

"It would be an alliance in which the partnership would be between the more powerful European nations and Japan, and the other party to the world arrangement—the antagonists, the disassociative party, the party to be standing off and to be watched by the alliance—would be the United States of America.

"There can be no league of nations in the true sense without the partnership of this great people.

"This war was a commercial and industrial war. It was not a political war. Very well, then, if we must stand apart and be the hostile rivals of the rest of the world, we must do something else; we must be physically ready for anything to come. We must have a great standing army. We must see to it that every man in America is trained to arms. We must see to it that there are munitions and guns enough for an army. That means a mobilized nation. The arms are not only laid up in store but they are kept up to date so that they are ready to use to-morrow.

"And what does that mean? Reduction of taxes? No. Not only the continuation of the present taxes but the increase of the present taxes. It means something very much more serious than that. We can stand that, so far as the expense is concerned, if we care to keep up the high cost of living and enjoy the other luxuries that we have recently enjoyed.

"But, what is much more serious than that, we have got to have the sort of organization which is the only kind of organization that can handle armies of that sort. We may say what we please of the German government that has been destroyed, my fellow citizens, but it was the only sort of government that could handle an armed nation. You cannot handle an armed nation by vote. You cannot handle an armed nation if it is democratic, because democracies do not go to war that way. You have got to have concentrated, militaristic organization of government to run a nation of that sort.

"The financial leadership will be ours; the industrial supremacy will be ours; the commercial advantage will be ours, and the other countries of the world will look to us, and, shall I say, are looking to us, for leadership and direction.

"Very well, then, if I am to compete with the critics of this league and of this treaty, as a selfish American, I say I want to get in and get in as quick as I can; I want to be inside and know how the thing is run and help to run it.

"So then you have the alternative, armed isolation or peaceful partnership. Can any sane man hesitate as to the choice, and can any sane man ask a question, which is the way of peace?

"I dare say that you have heard about this article X. Well, there are twenty-five other articles in it and all of them are about something else. They discuss how soon and how quick we can get out of it (the league). Well, I am not a quitter, for one. We can get out just as soon as we want to, but we don't want to get out just as soon as we get in.

"And then they talk about the Monroe doctrine, when it expressly says that nothing in that instrument shall be construed as affecting in any way the validity of the Monroe doctries. It says so in so many words."

ESSENTIAL OBJECT OF TREATY.

In addressing the St. Louis business men at the noonday luncheon President Wilson said in part:

"I have sometimes heard gentlemen discussing the questions that are now before us with a distinction drawn between nationalism and internationalism in these matters. It is very difficult for me to follow their distinction. The present nationalist is the man who wants his nation to be the greatest nation, and the greatest nation is the nation which penetrates to the heart of its duty and mission among the nations of the world.

"One of the most interesting things that I realized after I got to the other side of the water was that the mental attitude of the French people with regard to the settlement of this war was largely determined by the fact that for nearly fifty years they had expected it. We cannot, we will not live another fifty years under the cloud of that terror.

"One of the centers of all the bad business was in Constantinople. And that was because Constantinople was the key to the weak part of Europe. That was where the pawns were; not the kings and the queens and castles and the bishops and the rest of the chess game of politics, but the little pawns.

"And every international conference that preceded the conference at Paris had been intended to complete and consummate the arrangements for that game.

"The treaty of peace with Germany is a charter and constitution of a new system for the world, and that new system is based upon an absolute reversal of the principles of the old system. The essential object of that treaty is to establish the independence and protect the integrity of the weak peoples of the world.

"There can hereafter be no secret treaties. The provision of the covenant is that every treaty or international understanding shall be registered, I believe the word is, with the general secretary of the league; that the general secretary shall publish it in full just as soon as it is possible for him to publish it; that no treaty shall be valid which is not thus registered.

"It was very embarrassing, my fellow citizens, when you thought you were approaching an ideal solution of a momentous question to find that some of your principal colleagues had given the whole thing away. And that leads me to speak just in passing of what has given a great many people unnatural distress. I mean the Shantung settlement; the settlement with regard to a portion of the province of Shantung in China.

"Great Britain and others, as everybody now knows, in order to make it more certain that Japan would come into the war and so assist to clear the Pacific of the German fleets, had promised that any rights that Germany had in China should in the case of the victory of the allies pass to Japan. There was no qualification in the promise. She was to get exactly what Germany had.

"And so the only thing that was possible was to induce Japan to promise—and I want to say in all fairness, for it wouldn't be fair if I didn't say it—that Japan did very handsomely make the promises which were requested of her—that she would retain in Shantung none of the sovereign rights which Germany had enjoyed there, but would return the sovereignty without qualification to China, and retain in Shantung province only what other nationalities had elsewhere: Economic rights with regard to development and administration of the railway and of certain mines which had become attached to the railway. That is her promise.

"And suppose that we said we wouldn't assent. England and others must assent, and if we are going to get Shantung province back for China, and those gentlemen don't want to engage in foreign wars, how are we going to get it back?

"Their idea of not getting into trouble seems to be to stand for the greatest possible number of unworkable propositions. All very well to talk about standing by China! But how are you standing by China when you withdraw from the only arrangements by which China can be assisted?

"If you are China's friend, but don't go into the council where you can act as China's friend—if you are China's friend, then put her in a position where these concessions which have been made need not be carried out; if you are China's friend, scuttle and run. That is not the kind of American I am."

PROVIDES FOR DISARMAMENT.

Arriving in Kansas City, Mo., on the morning of Sept. 6, President Wilson spoke to a gathering of 20,000 persons in Convention hall. In his address he said among other things:

"There was another thing that we needed to accomplish, that is accomplished in this document. We wanted disarmament and this document provides in the only possible way for disarmament by common agreement. Observe, my fellow citizens, that just now every great fighting nation in the world is a member of this partnership except Germany, and inasmuch as Germany has accepted a limitation of her army to 100,000 men, I don't think for the time being she may be regarded as a great fighting nation.

"And you know, my fellow citizens, that armaments mean great standing armies and great stores of war material. They do not mean burdensome taxation merely, they do not mean merely compulsory military service, which saps the economic strength of the nation, but they mean the building up of a military class. Again and again, my fellow citizens, in the conference at Paris we were face to face with this situation:

"That in dealing with a particular civil government we found that they would not dare to promise what their general staff was not willing that they should promise; and that they were dominated by the military machine which they had created, nominally for their own defense, but really—whether they willed it or not—for the provocation of war.

"And so long as you have a military class it does not make any difference what your form of government is. If you are determined to be armed to the teeth, you must obey the orders and directions of the only men who can control the great machinery of war.

"It is not merely the cost of it [armament], although that is overwhelming, but it is the spirit of it, and America has never had and I hope in the providence of God never will have that spirit.

"And there is no other way to dispense with great armaments except by the common agreement of the fighting nations of the world. And here is the agreement. They promise disarmament, and promise to agree upon a plan.

"My fellow citizens, it does not make any difference what kind of minority governs you, if it is a minority. And the thing we must see to is that no minority anywhere masters the majority. That is at the heart, my fellow citizens, of the tragical things that are happening in that great country which we long to help and can find no way that is effective to help—I mean the great realm of Russia.

"The men who are now measurably in control of the affairs of Russia represent nobody but themselves. They have again and again been challenged to call a constitutional convention. They have again and again been challenged to prove that they have some kind of mandate even from a single class of their fellow citizens. And they dared not attempt it; they have no mandate from anybody.

"There are only thirty-four of them, I am told, and there were more than thirty-four men who used to control the destinies of Europe from Wilhelmstrasse. There is a closer monopoly of power in Petrograd and Moscow than there ever was in Berlin, and the thing that is intolerable is not that the Russian people are having their way but that another group of men more cruel than the czar himself is controlling the destinies of that great people.

"And if anybody dares to defeat this great experiment, then they must gather together the counselors of the world and do something better.

"If there is a better scheme, I for one will subscribe to it; but I want to say now, as I said the other night, that it is a case of put up or shut up. Negation will not save the world. Opposition constructs nothing. Opposition is the specialty of those who are bolshevistically inclined.

"Again I assure you I am not comparing any of my respected colleagues to bolshevists, but I am merely pointing out that the bolshevistic spirit lacks every element of constructive opposition. They have destroyed everything and they have proposed nothing.

"And while there is common abhorrence for political bolshevism, I hope there will not be any such thing grow up in our country as international bolshevism, the bolshevism that destroys the constructive work of men who have conscientiously striven to cement the good feeling of the great peoples of the world.

"We have a problem ahead of us that ought to interest us in this connection. We have promised the people of the Philippine islands that we will set them free. It has been one of our perplexities how we should make them safe after we set them free. Under this arrangement they will be safe from the outset. They will become members of the league of nations and every great nation in the world will be obliged to respect and preserve against external aggression from any quarter the territorial integrity and political independence of the Philippines."

MEANING OF REVOLUTION.

In an address delivered at the Coliseum in Des Moines, Iowa, on the evening of Sept. 6, President Wilson said:

"Men look you calmly in the face in America and say they are for revolution, when that sort of revolution means government by terror, government by force, not government by vote. It is the negative of everything that is American, but it is spreading, and will spread as long as disorder continues, as long as the world is kept waiting for the answer to the question, 'What kind of peace are we going to have?'

"What kind of guaranties are there to be behind that peace, that that poison will not constantly spread, more and more rapidly spread, until it may even be that this beloved land of ours will be distracted by it? That is what is concerning me, my fellow countrymen. I know the splendid steadiness of the American people, but, my fellow citizens, the whole world needs that steadiness, and the American people are the make-weight in the fortunes of mankind.

"How long are we going to debate into which school we will throw that magnificent equipoise that belongs to us? How long shall we be kept waiting for the answer whether the world may trust us or despise us? They have looked to us for leadership; they have looked to us for example; they have built their peace upon the basis of our suggestion; that great volume that contains the treaty of peace is drawn along the specifications laid down by the American government.

"And now the world stands amazed because an authority in America hesitates whether it will indorse an American document or not.

"Do you realize, my fellow citizens, that all through the world the one central question of civilization is what shall be the conditions of labor? The profoundest unrest in Europe is due to the doubt what shall be the conditions of labor. And I need not tell you that the unrest is spreading to America.

"In the midst of the document, in the midst of the treaty of peace, is a Magna Charta, a great guaranty for labor and all labor shall have the councils of the world devoted to the discussion of its conditions and of its betterment, and labor all over the world is waiting as to whether America is going to take part in these conferences or not.

"The confidence of the men who sat at Paris was such that they put it in the document that the first meeting of the labor conference under that part of the treaty should take place in Washington upon the invitation of the president of the United States.

"I am going to issue that invitation whether we can attend the conference or not. But think of the mortification, think of standing by in Washington itself and seeing the world take counsel upon the fundamental matter of civilization without taking part. The thing is inconceivable, but it is true.

"The isolation of the United States is at an end, not because we chose to go into the politics of the world, but because of the sheer genius of this people and the growth of our power we have become a determining factor in the history of mankind and, after you have become a determining factor, you cannot remain isolated whether you want to or not.

"Isolation ended by the processes of history, not by the processes of our independent choice. And the processes of history merely fulfill the prediction of the men who founded our republic."

ABOUT RESERVATIONS.

In a speech delivered in the Auditorium at Omaha, Neb., on the morning of Sept. 8 President Wilson said:

"I did not come here this morning so much to expound upon the treaty, as to talk about these things we call reservations. A reservation is an assent with a 'but' to it. 'We agree, but.' Now, I want to call your attention to some of these buts. I will take them as far as I can in the order in which they deal with the clauses of the league itself.

"In the first article of the covenant it is provided that a nation can withdraw from the league on two years' notice, provided that, at the time of this withdrawal—that is to say, at the expiration of the two years—it has fulfilled all its international obligations and all its obligations under the covenant.

"But some of our friends are very uneasy about that. They want to sit close to the door and with their hand on the knob, and they want to say: 'We are in this thing, but we are in it with infinite timidity and we are in it only because you overpersuaded us, and wanted us to come in, but we are going to sit here and try this door every once in a while and see it isn't locked, and just as soon as we see anything we don't like we are going to scuttle.'

"Now, what is the trouble? I want you to put this to every man you know who makes this objection. What is he afraid of? Is he afraid that when the United States wishes to withdraw it will not have fulfilled its international obligations? Is he willing to bring that indictment against this beloved country?

"My fellow citizens, we never did fail to fulfill any obligations we have made. And with God to guide and help us, we never will. And I for one am not going to admit in any connection the slightest doubt that if we ever choose to withdraw we will then have fulfilled our obligations.

"I have already adverted to their difficulties under article X., and will not return to those. That difficulty is merely as I represented it just now; they don't want to go in as partners; they want to go in as late joiners, because they all admit that, in a war which imperils the just arrangements of mankind, America, the richest, freest people of the world, must take sides with the cause. We cannot live without taking sides. We devoted ourselves to justice and liberty when we were born, and we are not going to get senile and forget it.

"Are there any patriotic Americans that desire the method changed? Do you want me to ask the Germans if I may read the treaty to them expressed in the words the United States senate thinks it ought to have been written in? Do you see, the reservations come down to this, that they want to change the language of the treaty without changing its meaning, and let me say there are indications—I am not judging from official dispatches but from the newspapers—that people are not in as good a humor over in France now as they were when I was there, and it is going to be more difficult to get a new agreement from now on than it was before, and after dealing with some of those gentlemen I found that they were as ingenious as any American in attaching unexpected meaning to plain words. I don't want, therefore, having gone through the mill on the existing language, to go through it again on changed language.

"But I must not turn away from this great subject without attention to the Shantung clause, the provision with regard to the transfer of certain German rights in the province of Shantung, China, to Japan. I frankly said to my Japanese colleagues at the conference—therefore, I can without impropriety say it here—that I was very deeply dissatisfied with that part of the treaty.

"But, my fellow citizens, Japan agreed at that very time and as part of the understanding upon which these clauses were put into the treaty that she would relinquish every item of sovereignty that Germany had enjoyed to China, and she would retain what other nations have elsewhere in China, certain economic concessions with regard to the railways and the mines, which she was to operate upder a corporation and subject to the laws of China.

"As I say, I wish she could have done more, but suppose, as some have suggested, that we dissent from that clause in the treaty. You can't sign all of a treaty except one part, my fellow citizens; it is like the president's veto; he can't veto provisions of a bill; he has got either to sign the bill or veto. We can't sign the treaty with the Shantung provision out of it, and if we could, what sort of service would that be doing China?

"If I felt that I personally in any way stood in the way of this settlement, I would be glad to die that it might be consummated, because I have a vision, my fellow citizens, that if this thing should by some mishap not be accomplished, there would arise from that upon the fair name of this people a stain which never could be effaced, which would be intolerable to every lover of America, intolerable to every man who knew America and was ready with stout heart to uphold it."

PRO-GERMANISM REVIVES.

President Wilson, in a speech in the Auditorium at Sioux Falls, S. D., on the evening of Sept. 8, said:

"Germany, through the mouth of her emperor, through her writers, and through every action said: 'Here we stand ready to take care of ourselves. We will not enter into any combination. We are armed for self-defense and we know that no nation can compete with us.'

"That appears to be the American program in the eyes of some gentlemen, and I want to tell you that in the last two weeks the pro-German element has lifted its head again. It says: 'I see a chance for Germany and America to stay out and take care of themselves. Not as partners or allies, perhaps, but we Americans will play the same role as the Germans.'

"Under the old order that brought us through agony and bloody sweat; that agony where the world seemed to be caught in the throes of a crisis so great that we did not know whether civilization would survive or not. And do not believe too easily that it is safe now. There were passions let loose on the field of the world at war which have not grown quiet, and which will not for a long time. And every element of disorder is hoping that there will be no staying hand from the council of nations to hold the order of the world steady until we can make final arrangements for justice and peace.

"I sometimes think, when I wake up in the night, of the wakeful nights that anxious fathers, mothers and friends spent during the weary years of the awful war, and I hear the cry of mothers of the children, millions on the other side and thousands on this side: 'In God's name, give us security and peace!'

"America can stay out, but I want you to witness that the peace of the world cannot be established with the peace of the individual nations. America is necessary to the peace of the world; the peace and good will of the world are necessary to America, but you disappoint the world, center its suspicion upon you, make it feel that you are filled with jealousy and selfishness.

"We are not thinking of money; we are thinking of redeeming the reputation of America rather than to have all the money in the world. I am not ready to die for money, and neither are you, but you and I are ready to die for America."

TO MINNESOTA LEGISLATORS.

Reaching St. Paul, Minn., early on the morning of Sept. 9, President Wilson first addressed members of the Minnesota legislature who were in special session. In the course of his speech he said:

"Until the industrial world is put on its feet you cannot finally handle the question of the cost of living, because the cost of living, in the last analysis, depends upon the thing we are always talking about but do not know how to manage, the law of supply and demand.

"We have got to see that our own production and our own methods of finance and our own commerce are quickened in every way possible; and then we, sitting in legislatures like this and in the congress of the United States, have to see to it, if you will permit a vulgar expression, that no one monkeys with the machinery.

"I understand that one of the excellent suggestions that were mentioned by your governor is that you look into the cold storage. There are other kinds of storage besides cold storage. There are other ways of covering the reserve stock of goods. You can manage by a contract that isn't put on paper to see that goods are doled out so as to bring the highest prices.

"We might as well sit up straight and look facts in the face, gentlemen. The laboring men of the world are not satisfied with their relations with their employers.

"Of course I do not mean to say that there is universal dissatisfaction, because there are many instances of satisfaction, but I am now speaking of the general relations between capital and labor. Everywhere there is dissatisfaction, much more on the other side of the water than on this side.

"One point I wish to make is that the world is looking to America to set the standards with regard to the conditions of labor or the relations between capital and labor, and it is looking to us because we have been more progressve in those matters.

"We have got to have a constructive program with regard to labor and a method by which we will relieve the strain of what you can call the cost of living.

"I am not dogmatic about this matter. I can't presume that I know how it should be done. I know the principle upon which it should be done. The principle is that the interest of capital and the interest of labor are not different, but are the same.

"You can't any longer regard labor as a commodity. You have got to regard it as a means of association, and when that is done the production of the world is going to go forward by leaps and bounds.

"Why is it that labor organizations seriously limit the amount of work they have in hand to do? It is because they are driving hard bargains. They don't feel that they are your partners at all.

"And so long as labor and capital are antagonistic production is going to be at its minimum. Just so soon as they are sympathetic and co-operative it is going to abound, and that will be one of the means of bringing down the cost of living.

"America, though we do not like to admit it, has been very provincial in regard to the world's business. When we had to engage in banking transactions outside of the United States we generally did it through English banks or more often through German bankers; and here all of a sudden we are called upon to handle the bulk of international exchange. We have to learn it and we have to learn it fast.

"We have got to have American instrumentalities in every part of the world. If you want to trade you have to have somebody to trade with.

"All the world problem and the great difficulty just now is getting our minds adjusted to the world. Some of the difficulties that are being encountered about the treaty of the league of nations are not so much prejudice, but the thing which is so common and inconvenient—just downright ignorance.

"Ignorance, I mean, of the state of the world and America's relation to the state of the world. We have got to play our part, and we have got to play it either as board of directors or as outside spectators. We can play it inside or on the curb, and you know how inconvenient it is to play it on the curb.

"The facts are marching upon us, and God is marching with them. You cannot resist them and you must either welcome them or else subsequently and regretfully surrender."

In an address in the Kenwood armory, Minneapolis, on the afternoon of the 9th the president said:

"Blood has been spilled in rivers and nations have been destroyed and they made up their minds that rather than have this happen again if the governments cannot get together they will destroy the governments.

"But, in the meantime, look at the things that are happening. There isn't a day goes by that my heart isn't heavy to think of the things the people in Russia are doing.

"They are without form, and without order, and the danger is to the world. We must absolutely look to it that in this country that form of government of a minority of men shall not be set up here and elsewhere.

"We have either got to be provincials or statesmen. We have either got to be ostriches or eagles. The ostrich is being overdone all around. I see gentlemen bury their heads in something and think that nobody sees that they have submerged their thinking apparatus.

"That is what I mean by being an ostrich.

"Now, what I mean by being an eagle—I needn't describe it. I mean leaving the mists lying close to the ground, getting upon strong wings into those spaces where you can see all the affairs of mankind, all the affairs of America, seeing how the world appears."

MEDIATORS OF MANKIND.

Returning to St. Paul in the evening President Wilson spoke in the Auditorium. Among other things he said:

"We are the predestined mediators of mankind.

"Really, then, when I hear gentlemen saying we must keep out of this thing and take care of ourselves, I ask where did we come from? Is there nobody else in the world that we care for?

"Is that what America is with her mixture of blood? Why, my fellow citizens, that is a fundamental misconception of what it is to be an American. These gentlemen who try to keep us out are doing a harm which they do not realize.

"I want to testify to you here to-night, my fellow countrymen, because I have the means of information, that since it has seemed to be uncertain whether we are going to play this part of leadership in the world, the old intrigues have started up in the country again.

"That hyphen which looked to us like a snake, the hyphen between German and American, has reared its ugly head again. You hear the hiss of its purpose, and what is that purpose?

"It is to keep America out of the concert of nations in order that America and Germany, being out of that concert, may some time in their mistaken dream unite to dominate the world, or at any rate the one to assist the other in holding the nations of the world off while its ambitions are realized.

"There is no conjecture about this, my fellow citizens. We know the former purposes of German intrigue in this country, and they are being revived. Why?

"We haven't reduced very materially the number of German people. Germany remains the great power of central Europe. She has more than 60,000,000 people now. She had nearly 70,000,000 before Poland and other provinces were taken away. She has now more than 60,000,000 people.

"You cannot change the temper and expectations of a people by a five year war, particularly by five years of war in which they are not yet conscious of the wrong they did, or the wrong way in which they did it, and they are expecting the time of the revival of their power and along with the revival of their power go their extraordinary capacity, their unparalleled education, their great capacity in commerce, finance and manufacture."

TEN POINTS OF COVENANT.

While riding through North Dakota on Sept. 10 President Wilson framed a statement of what he considered the ten essential points of the league of nations covenant. These were:

The destruction of autocratic power as an instrument of international control by admitting only self-governing nations to the league.
The substitution of publicity, discussion, and arbitration for war, using the boycott rather than arms.
Placing the peace of the world under constant international oversight in recognition of the principle that the peace of the world is the legitimate immediate interest of every state.
Disarmament.
The liberation of oppressed peoples.
The discontinuance of annexation and the substitution of trusteeship, with responsibility to the opinion of mankind.
The invalidation of all secret treaties.
The protection of all dependent peoples.
High standards of labor under international sanction.
The international co-ordination of humane reform and regulation.

MORE ABOUT ARTICLE 10.

Speaking in the Auditorium at Bismarck, N. D., on Sept. 10, President Wilson said:

"Under article 10, every member of the league undertakes to respect and preserve the territorial integrity—to protect and preserve against external aggressions and sustain the political independence of the other members of the league. So far so good.

"The second sentence provides that in case of necessity the council shall take such steps as are necessary to carry out the obligations of that conference—that is to say, what force is necessary there. Now, the council cannot give that advice without a unanimous vote. It can't give the advice without the affirmative vote of the United States unless the United States is a party to the controversy in question.

"Let us see what that means. Do you think that the United States is likely to seize somebody else's territory? Do you think that the United States is likely to disregard the first sentence of the article? And if she is not likely to begin an aggression of that sort, who is likely to begin it against her?

"Is Mexico going to invade us and appropriate Texas? Is Canada going to come down with her 9,000,000 or 10,000,000 and overwhelm the 100,000,000 in the United States? Who is going to grab our territory? And above all things else, who is going to propose, who is going to entertain the idea after the rest of the world has said no?

"But suppose that somebody does attempt to grab our territory or we do attempt to grab somebody else's territory, then the war is ours anyhow, so what difference does it make what advice the council gives?

"So that unless it is our war we can't be dragged into a war without our own consent. If that is not an open and shut security, I don't know of any. And yet that is article 10."

CHAOS IN RUSSIA.

In the course of a speech in the fair grounds auditorium at Billings, Mont., on the morning of Sept. 11 President Wilson in referring to the situation in Russia said:

"Everybody who has mixed with the Russian people tells me they are among the most lovable people of the world, people who easily trust you and accept you to be trustworthy as they are, and yet this people are delivered into the hands of an intolerable tyranny. It came out of one tyranny to get into a worse.

"A little group of some thirty or forty men are the masters of that people at present. They chose themselves. They maintain their power by the sword.

"Have you seen these symptoms of chaos spread to other countries? If you had been across the sea with me you would know the dread in the mind of every thoughtful man in Europe is that that distemper will spread to their country. That poison is running through the veins of the world. There are disciples of Lenin in our own midst."

POLICE STRIKES CONDEMNED.

The striking features of President Wilson's speech to a great assemblage in the Auditorium at Helena, Mont., on the evening of Sept. 11 were his incidental references to the Boston police strike and the race riots in various places. Concerning the former he said:

"I want to say this, that a strike of the policemen of a great city, leaving that city at the mercy of an army of thugs, is a crime against civilization.

"In my judgment, the obligation of a policeman is as sacred and direct as the obligation of a soldier. He is a public servant, not a private employe, and the whole honor and safety of the community are in his hands.

"He has no right to prefer any private advantage to the public safety.

"I hope that that lesson will be burned in so that it will never again be forgotten, because the pride of America is that it can exercise self-control.

"That is what a self-governing nation is; not merely a nation that elects people to do its job for it, but a nation that can keep its head, concert its purposes and find out how those purposes can be executed."

ASHAMED OF RACE RIOTS.

Sounding a warning to radical agitators, the president said:

"Radicals plotting to destroy this government will themselves be destroyed.

"America is the place where you cannot kill your government by killing the men who conduct it. The only way you can kill government in America is by making the men and women of America forget how to govern, and nobody can do that. They sometimes find the team a little difficult to drive, but they sooner or later whip it into the harness.

"I hope you won't think it inappropriate if I stop here to express my shame as an American citizen at the race riots that have occurred at some places in this country, where men have forgotten humanity and justice and orderly society and have run amuck. That constitutes a man not only the enemy of society but his own enemy and the enemy of justice."

POWER NOT TAKEN FROM CONGRESS.

On Sept. 12 President Wilson made two addresses, the first in the forenoon at Cœur d'Alene, Idaho, and the second in the evening at Spokane, Wash. In the Idaho meeting the president again referred to the desire of the pro-Germans to have the United States keep out of the league of nations. "Evidence abounds," he said, "that pro-German propaganda started coincident with the opposition to the adoption of the treaty." In his speech at Spokane President Wilson said:

"There is one part of the covenant, where it speaks of arbitration, and where it provides that any member state failing to keep these covenants—these particular covenants—shall be regarded as having committed an act of war against the other members. The way it originally read was 'Shall thereby ipso facto be deemed at war with the other nations,' and I said, 'No, I cannot agree to that. That provision would put the United States at war without the consent of the congress of the United States. And I have no right to consent to a provision which would deprive the congress of the United States of its free choice, whether it makes war or not.'

"At every point in the covenant where it was necessary to do so I insisted upon language which would leave the congress of the United States free.

"I leave the verdict with you and I beg, my fellow citizens, my republican fellow citizens, that you will not allow yourselves for one moment, as I do not allow myself for one moment, as God knows my conscience, to think of 1920 when thinking about the redemption of the world.

"My present point is to dissociate the league of nations from the present speaker. I did not originate it, it is not my handiwork; it has originated out of the consciences and thought of men who wanted justice and peace for generations.

"I admit the distinguished history of the republican party. I do admit that it has been the creator of great constructive policies, and I should be very sorry to see it lose the prestige which it has earned. I should be very sorry to have any man feel that there was any embarrassment in supporting a great world policy because he belonged to a great constructive party and that party an American party; a party of that people which has done the most advanced thinking in the world and that people which, God helping it, will lead and save the world."

COST OF THE WAR.

On the morning of Sept. 13 the president made two addresses in Tacoma, Wash., one to 30,000 persons in the Tacoma stadium and the other to 5,000 persons in the Tacoma armory. In the afternoon he reviewed the Pacific fleet in Elliott bay and in the evening after a public dinner at the Hippodrome spoke at the Arena. The speeches were in the main along the lines of those delivered in other places. In his speech in the Tacoma armory he spoke of the cost of the war in lives and money.

"In order to let you remember what the big thing cost," he said, "just let me read to you a few figures. If I did not have them on official authority I would deem them incredible. Here is what the war cost those who were engaged against Germany:

"Great Britain and her dominions, $38,000,000,000; France, $26,000,000,000; the United States, $22,000,000,000; Russia, $18,000,000,000; Italy, $13,000,000,000, and the total, including Belgium, Japan and other smaller countries, $123,000,000,000.

"It cost the central powers, Germany, $39,000,000,000; Austria-Hungary, $21,000,000,000; Turkey and Bulgaria, $3,000,000,000, a total of $63,000,000,000, a grand total of direct war cost of $186,000,000,000, an incredible sum to save civilization.

"Now the question is, Are we going to keep safe? The expenditures of the United States were at the rate of $1,000,000 an hour for two years—$1,000,000 an hour, including the night time, for two years.

"Battle deaths—and this is the cost that touches our hearts—were Russia, 1,700,000; Germany, 1,600,000; France, 1,385,000; Great Britain, 900,000; Austria, 800,000; Italy, 364,000; the United States, 50,300; total for all belligerents of 7,450,200 men dead on the field of battle.

"The total wounded for the United States army was 230,000, including those, of course, who were killed.

"The total of all battle deaths in all wars of the world from the year 1793 to 1914 were something under six millions. So that in all the wars of the world for more than one hundred years fewer men died than have been killed on the field of battle in the last five years. These are terrible facts and we ought never to forget them."

NEW WORLD PARTNERSHIP.

After a day of rest in Seattle President Wilson continued on his journey to Portland, Ore., where he made two addresses Sept. 15, one to several hundred business men at a luncheon and the other to a large gathering at the Auditorium. At the luncheon he said:

"If you are going to put into the world this germ, I shall call it, of American enterprise and American faith and American vision, then you must be the principal partners in the new partnership which the world is forming. I take leave to say, without intending the least disrespect to anybody, that consciously or unconsciously a man who opposes that proposition either has no imagination or no knowledge or is a quitter. America has put her hand to this great enterprise already in the men she sent overseas, and their part was the negative part merely."

REPLIES TO LABOR COUNCIL.

Sept. 16 and the night of Sept. 16 were spent by the president in traveling to San Francisco. In the course of the journey he prepared a statement containing his replies to a series of questions propounded to him by the San Francisco labor council. The statement follows:

1. Under the covenant does the nation obligate itself to assist any member of the league in putting down a rebellion of its subjects or conquered peoples?

Answer—It does not.

2. Under the covenant, can this nation independently recognize a government whose people seek to achieve, or have achieved, their independence from a member of the league?

Answer—The independent action of the government of the United States in a matter of this kind is in no way limited or affected by the covenant of the league of nations.

3. Under the covenant are only those subject nations or peoples that are mentioned in the peace treaty entitled to the right of self-determination, or does the league possess the right to accord a similar privilege to other subject nations or peoples?

Answer—It was not possible for the peace conference to act with regard to the self-determination of any territories except those which had belonged to the defeated empires, but in the covenant of the league of nations it has set up for the first time, in article 11, a forum to which all claims of self-determination which are likely to disturb the peace of the world or the good understanding between nations upon which the peace of the world depends can be brought.

4. Why was the case of Ireland not heard at the peace conference? And what is your position on the subject of self-determination for Ireland?

Answer—The case of Ireland was not heard at the peace conference because the peace conference had no jurisdiction over any question of that sort which did not affect territories which belonged to the defeated empires. My position on the subject of self-determination for Ireland is expressed in article 11 of the covenant, in which I may say I was particularly interested, because it seemed to me necessary for the peace and freedom of the world that a forum should be created to which all peoples could bring any matter which was likely to affect the peace and freedom of the world.

EXPLANATORY REPLIES.

In San Francisco President Wilson made two speeches on the 17th, one at noonday and the other in the evening, in the civic auditorium. The ground covered was practically the same as in his previous addresses, article 10 and the Shantung question receiving particular attention. On the 18th he spoke at a luncheon given by San Francisco business organizations and in the evening he addressed a large gathering in Oakland. Previous to the first meeting he issued a statement giving a list of questions asked by a San Francisco league of nations organization and his replies. Following is the statement:

1. Will you state the underlying consideration which dictated an awarding of six votes to the British empire in the assembly, and is it true that Great Britain will outvote us in the league of nations and thereby control the league actions?

Answer—The consideration which led to assigning six votes to self-governing portions of the British empire was that they have in effect in all but foreign policies become autonomous self-governing states, their policy in all but foreign affairs being independent of the control of the British government and in many respects dissimilar from it. But it is not true that the British empire can outvote us in the league of nations and therefore control the action of the league, because in every matter except admission of new members in the league, no action can be taken without the concurrence of a unanimous vote of the representatives of the states which are members of the council, so that in all matters of action the affirmative vote of the United States is necessary and equivalent to the united vote of the representatives of the several parts of the British empire. The united votes of the several parts of the British empire cannot offset or overcome the vote of the United States.

2. Is it true that under the league of nations foreign countries can order the sending of American troops to foreign countries?

Answer—It is not. The right of congress to determine such matters is in no wise impaired.

3. What effect will the league of nations have in either forwarding or hindering the final restoration of Shantung to China? What effect will the league of nations have in preventing further spoliation of China and the abrogation of all such special privileges now enjoyed in China by foreign countries?

Answer—The league of nations will have a powerful effect in forwarding the final restoration of Shantung to China, and no other instrumentality or action can be substituted which could bring that result about. The authority of the league will, under article 10, be constantly directed toward safeguarding the territorial integrity and political independence of China. It will, therefore, absolutely prevent the further spoliation of China, promote the restoration to China of the several privileges now long enjoyed by foreign countries, and assure China of the completion of the process by which Shantung will presently be returned to it in full sovereignty. In the past there has been no tribunal which could be resorted to for any of these purposes.

4. Is there anything in the league of nations covenant or the peace treaty which directly or indirectly in any manner imposes on the United States any obligation, moral or otherwise, of the slightest character to support England in any way in case of revolt in Ireland?

Answer—There is not. The only guaranty contained in the covenant is against external aggression, and those who framed the covenant were scrupulously careful in no way to interfere with what they regarded as the sacred rights of self-determination.

5. What effect, if any, will the league of nations covenant have in either hindering or furthering the cause of Irish freedom?

Answer—It was not possible for the peace conference to act with regard to the self-determination of any territories except those which had belonged to the defeated empires, but in the covenant of the league of nations it has set up for the first time in article 11 a forum to which all claims of self-determination which are likely to disturb the peace of the world or the good understanding between nations upon which the peace of the world depends can be brought.

FREEDOM OF THE SEAS.

On Sept. 19 President Wilson made two addresses in San Diego, Cal., one in the afternoon to 50,000 persons in an open air stadium and one at a dinner in the evening. In the latter speech he told why it was not considered necessary to define the freedom of the seas at the Paris peace conference, declaring that one of the reasons why America went to war was for the freedom of the seas and under the league of nations it became unnecessary to define the term. It was accepted, he said, that the doctrine was for the protection of neutrals while other nations were at war.

Los Angeles, Cal., was reached on the 20th and here as elsewhere the president was enthusiastically received. In a speech to an assemblage of 7,000 persons in the Auditorium he said: "The league of nations must and will become the bulwark of a war weary world for all time. This was a people's war and this treaty establishes a people's peace."

In Sacramento, Cal., where the special train stopped for half an hour on the afternoon of Sept. 22, the president spoke briefly to a gathering of 12,000 persons near the railroad station. "Without this treaty of peace," he said, "without the covenant of the league of nations which it contains, we simply sink back into that slough of despond in which mankind was before this war began."

On the evening of the 22d the president spoke in Reno, Nev., and on the 23d in Ogden and Salt Lake City, Utah. In the latter city he spoke to 12,000 persons gathered in the Mormon tabernacle. Here he announced that he could say, without any hesitation, that the overwhelming majority of the people wanted the league of nations. "I think it is the judgment of the people," he said, "that neither the covenant nor the treaty should be amended."

In Cheyenne, Wyo., where President Wilson spoke on the 24th, he warned the reservationist senators in Washington and their supporters that the adoption of the reservations to article 10 meant that he, as the executive of the United States, would have to regard it as a rejection of the entire treaty and that it meant the negotiation of a separate peace with Germany. Speaking of the British six votes to the one of America he reiterated the explanation that the league could not take any action without America's affirmative vote. He said further that he was ready to maintain the position that it was just to give the British empire these votes and that he was willing that the British commonwealths should all have speaking parts in the league. The New Zealanders, Australians and Canadians, he said, were our natural partners and would takes sides with us oftener than with England in league matters.

President Wilson spoke in Denver, Col., on the morning of the 25th and in Pueblo, Col., in the evening. In both addresses he argued against reservations to the treaty, asserting that they meant asking special exemption or privileges for the United States. He said in Denver, where he spoke to 15,000 persons in the Auditorium: "I challenge the opponents of this treaty to show cause where there should be any hesitation in ratifying it. I do understand delays. I do not understand covert processes of opposition. It is time that we know where we shall stand, for observe, my fellow citizens, the negotiation of treaties rests with the executive of the United States. When the senate has acted it will be for me to determine whether its action constitutes an adoption or rejection, and I beg the gentlemen who are responsible for the action of the United States senate to make it perfectly clear whether it is an adoption or a rejection."

According to the schedule the president was to have made addresses at Wichita, Kas., and Oklahoma City, Okla., on the 26th, at Little Rock, Ark., and Memphis, Tenn., on the 27th and at Louisville, Ky., on the 28th, but illness resulting from physical exhaustion compelled him to abandon his tour at Wichita and proceed directly to Washington, where he arrived Sept. 28.

SENATE MAJORITY REPORT.

As already noted, the senate committee on foreign relations reported the treaty back to the senate Sept. 10 with a large number of amendments and four reservations. There were in fact three reports—one by the majority, one by the minority and one by Senator Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota. The majority report, after a long explanation of the delay in taking action and an expression of resentment at the demand for speed, declared:

"In reporting the treaty to the senate for action the committee proposes certain amendments to the text of the treaty and certain reservations to be attached to the resolution of ratification and made a part of that resolution when it is offered.

"In regard to the amendments generally it should be stated at the outset that nothing is more groundless than the sedulously cultivated and constantly expressed fear that textual amendments would require a summoning of the peace conference and thereby cause great delay. There will be no necessity of summoning the peace conference, because it is in session now in Paris, with delegates fully representing all the signatory nations, as it has been for six months, and it seems likely to be in session for six months more. Textual amendments, if made by the senate, can be considered in Paris at once, and the conference would be at least as usefully employed in that consideration as it now is in dividing and sharing southeastern Europe and Asia Minor, in handing the Greeks of Thrace over to our enemy, Bulgaria, and in trying to force upon the United States the control of Armenia, Anatolia and Constantinople through the medium of a large American army. Still more unimportant is the bugbear which has been put forward of the enormous difficulties which will be incurred in securing the adhesion of Germany. No great amount of time need be consumed in bringing German representatives to Paris. The journey is within the power of a moderate amount of human endurance, and it is also to be remembered that Germany is not a member of the league and need not be consulted in regard to the terms of the covenant. When Germany enters the league she will take it as she finds it.

Amendments.

"The first amendment offered by the committee relates to the league. It is proposed so to amend the text as to secure for the United States a vote in the assembly of the league equal to that of any other power. Great Britain now has under the name of the British empire one vote in the council of the league. She has four additional votes in the assembly of the league for her self-governing dominions and colonies, which are most properly members of the league and signatories to the treaty. She also has the vote of India, which is neither a self-governing dominion nor a colony but merely a part of the empire and which apparently was simply put in as a signatory and member of the league by the peace conference because Great Britain desired it. Great Britain also will control the votes of the kingdom of Hedjaz and of Persia. With these last two, of course, we have nothing to do. But if Great Britain has six votes in the league assembly no reason has occurred to the committee and no argument has been made to show why the United States should not have an equal number. If other countries like the present arrangement, that is not our affair; but the committee failed to see why the United States should have but one vote in the assembly of the league when the British empire has six.

"Amendments 39 to 44, inclusive, transfer to China the German lease and rights, if they exist, in the Chinese province of Shantung, which are given by the treaty to Japan. The majority of the committee were not willing to have their votes recorded at any stage in the proceedings in favor of the consummation of what they consider a great wrong. They cannot assent to taking the property of a faithful ally and handing it over to another ally in fulfillment of a bargain made by other powers in a secret treaty. It is a record which they are not willing to present to their fellow citizens or leave behind them for the contemplation of their children.

"Amendment No. 2 is simply to provide that where a member of the league has self-governing dominions and colonies which are also members of the league the exclusion of the disputants under the league rules shall cover the aggregate vote of the member of the league and its self-governing dominions and parts of empire combined if any one of them is involved in the controversy.

"The remaining amendments, with a single exception, may be treated as one, for the purpose of all alike is to relieve the United States from having representatives on the commissions established by the league which deal with questions in which the United States has and can have no interest and in which the United States has evidently been inserted by design. The exception is amendment No. 45, which provides that the United States shall have a member of the reparation commission, but that such commissioner of the United States cannot, except in the case of shipping, where the interests of the United States are directly involved, deal with or vote upon any other questions before that commission except under instructions from the government of the United States.

Reservations.

"The committee proposes four reservations to be made a part of the resolution of ratification when it is offered. The committee reserves, of course, the right to offer other reservations if it shall so determine. The four reservations now presented are as follows:

"'1. The United States reserves to itself the unconditional right to withdraw from the league of nations upon the notice provided in article 1 of said treaty of peace with Germany.'

"The provision in the league covenant for withdrawal declares that any member may withdraw provided it has fulfilled all its international obligations and all its obligations under the covenant. There has been much dispute as to who would decide if the question of the fulfillment of obligations was raised, and it is very generally thought that this question would be settled by the council of the league of nations. The best that can be said about it is that the question of decision is clouded with doubt. On such a point as this there must be no doubt. The United States, which has never broken an international obligation, cannot permit all its existing treaties to be reviewed and its conduct and honor questioned by other nations. The same may be said in regard to the fulfillment of the obligations to the league. It must be made perfectly clear that the United States alone is to determine as to the fulfillment of its obligations, and its right of withdrawal must therefore be unconditional, as provided in the reservation.

"'2. The United States declines to assume, under the provisions of article 10 or under any other article, any obligation to preserve the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country, or to interfere in controversies between other nations, members of the league or not, or to employ the military or naval forces of the United States in such controversies, or to adopt economic measures for the protection of any other country, whether a member of the league or not, against external aggression or for the purpose of coercing any other country, or for the purpose of intervention in the internal conflicts or other controversies which may arise in any other country, and no mandate shall be accepted by the United States under article 22, Part I., of the treaty of peace with Germany, except by action of the congress of the United States.'

"This reservation is intended to meet the most vital objection to the league covenant as it stands. Under no circumstances must there be any legal or moral obligation upon the United States to enter into war or to send its army and navy abroad or without the unfettered action of congress to impose economic boycotts on other countries. Under the constitution of the United States the congress alone has the power to declare war, and all bills to raise revenue or affecting the revenue in any way must originate in the house of representatives, be passed by the senate, and receive the signature of the president. These constitutional rights of congress must not be impaired by any agreements such as are presented in this treaty, nor can any opportunity of charging the United States with bad faith be permitted. No American soldiers or sailors must be sent to fight in other lands at the bidding of the league of nations. American lives must not be sacrificed except by the will and command of the American people acting through their constitutional representatives in congress.

"This reservation also covers the subject of mandates. According to the provisions of the covenant of the league, the acceptance of a mandate by any member is voluntary, but as to who shall have authority to refuse or to accept a mandate for any country the covenant of the league is silent. The decision as to accepting a mandate must rest exclusively within the control of the congress of the United States as the reservation provides and must not be delegated, even by inference, to any personal agent or to any delegate or commissioner.

"'3. The United States reserves to itself exclusively the right to decide what questions are within its domestic jurisdiction and declares that all domestic and political questions relating to its affairs, including immigration, coastwise traffic, the tariff, commerce and all other domestic questions, are solely within the jurisdiction of the United States and are not under this treaty submitted in any way either to arbitration or to the consideration of the council or of the assembly of the league of nations, or to the decision or recommendation of any other power.'

"This reservation speaks for itself. It is not necessary to follow out here all tortuous windings which to those who have followed them through the labyrinth disclose the fact that the league under certain conditions will have power to pass upon and decide questions of immigration and tariff, as well as the others mentioned in the reservation. It is believed by the committee that this reservation relieves the United States from any dangers or any obligations in this direction.

"The fourth and last reservation is as follows:

"'4. The United States declines to submit for arbitration or inquiry by the assembly or the council of the league of nations provided for in said treaty of peace any questions which in the judgment of the United States depend upon or relate to its long-established policy, commonly known as the Monroe doctrine; said doctrine is to be interpreted by the United States alone, and is hereby declared to be wholly outside the jurisdiction of said league of nations and entirely unaffected by any provision contained in the said treaty of peace with Germany.'

"The purpose of this reservation is clear. It is intended to preserve the Monroe doctrine from any interference or interpretation by foreign powers. As the Monroe doctrine has protected the United States, so, it is believed by the committee, will this reservation protect the Monroe doctrine from the destruction with which it is threatened by article 21 in the covenant of the league, and leave it, where it has always been, within the sole and complete control of the United States.

"This covenant of the league of nations is an alliance and not a league, as is amply shown by the provisions of the treaty with Germany which vests all essential power in five great nations. Those same nations, the principal allied and associated powers, also dominate the league through the council.

"The committee believe that the league as it stands will breed wars instead of securing peace. They also believe that the covenant of the league demands sacrifices of American independence and sovereignty which would in no way promote the world's peace but which are fraught with the gravest dangers to the future safety and well-being of the United States."

The report concluded with some additional arguments along the same line. It was signed by Henry Cabot Lodge, William E. Borah, Frank B. Brandegee, Albert B. Fall, Philander C. Knox, Warren G. Harding, Hiram Johnson, Harry S. New and George H. Moses, all republicans.

SENATE MINORITY REPORT.

The minority report of the committee was presented to the senate Sept. 11 by Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, the ranking minority member and chief spokesman for the treaty. The report was as follows:

"The undersigned members of the foreign relations committee unite in urging the early ratification of the pending treaty of peace without amendments and without reservations.

"We deplore the long and unnecessary delay to which the treaty has been subjected while locked up in the committee, whose majority decisions and recommendations were from the start a foregone conclusion. They could have been made in July as well as in September and would have been the same.

"The industrial world is in ferment, the financial world in doubt, and commerce halts while this great delay in the peace settlement has been caused by the majority of a committee known to be out of harmony with the majority of the senate and the majority of the people. This is government by obstruction as well as by a minority.

"Our export trade already shows the undeniable effects of delay and doubt in treaty ratification and peace settlement. For the first seven months following the armistice our exports averaged almost seven hundred millions per month, but in July they fell to $570,000,000. Europe undoubtedly wants our products, but can only take them in full quantity if our financial institutions provide the credit to bridge over the period necessary to restore European industry to productiveness. This private credit cannot and will not be furnished as long as the peace settlement is in doubt. Public credit has heretofore carried this great balance of trade. Since the armistice was signed our government has advanced to European governments nearly $2,500,000,000, which was almost enough to cover the balance of trade during the eight months' period.

"Our government, however, has about reached the end of its authority given by congress and will advance but little more. From now on, if we are to keep our commerce with Europe, private enterprise must furnish the credit to cover the trade balance till European industries get started and are able to pay us with their goods. Peace settlement delays and doubts paralyze this revival. If uncertainty continues, depression is inevitable.

"The claim by the majority of this committee on page 3 of its report that we have exported over $11,000,000 worth of goods to Germany since the armistice and without a peace settlement is no doubt true. To other countries during the same period we exported over $5,000,000,000 worth. What was exported to Germany as stated by the majority report was practically nothing. It is only 14 cents' worth of American products for each person in Germany in seven months, or 2 cents per person per month, yet the majority report boasts of it as evidence of trade revival, in spite of treaty delay. The same statesmen gravely assure us that their figures prove that it is a mere delusion to say we cannot trade with Germany till a peace settlement is made. Two cents per month per capita is hardly trading with Germany.

"Referring to the action of the majority of the committee, we unite in opposing and condemning the recommendations both as to textual amendments and as to proposed reservations. As far as the proposed textual amendments are concerned, we see no reason to discuss their character at length. In our opinion they have no merit, but whether they be good, bad or indifferent their adoption by the senate can have no possible effect except to defeat the participation of the United States in the treaty. None of them could by any possibility be accepted even by the great nations associated with the United States in the war, and none of them could by any possibility be dictated to Germany. To adopt any one of them, therefore, is equivalent to rejecting the treaty.

"The suggestion on page 4 of the majority report that the peace conference is still in session in Paris and could consider any textual amendments to the treaty made by the senate, and that German representatives could be brought to Paris for that purpose, indicates a total misconception of the situation. The peace conference has acted finally upon this treaty. Great Britain has ratified it, France is about to do so, and with the action of one other power it will in all human probability be in actual operation even before the senate of the United States reaches a decision. Moreover, the peace conference possesses no further power to 'bring German representatives to Paris.' The power of compulsion has been exhausted. Germany was told where to sign and when to sign and when to ratify, and Germany has closed the chapter by signing and by ratifying. Germany cannot be compelled to do anything more or different with regard to this treaty by being confronted with an amended treaty, whether once a month, day or week. There must be finality to ultimata in a treaty by compulsion. If an amended treaty is not signed by Germany, then it is in none of its parts binding on her.

"To adopt an amendment or to reject the treaty means that the United States will sacrifice all of the concessions secured from Germany by a dictated peace. While these concessions are not so large as those which other nations associated with us secure in reparations, they are nevertheless of tremendous importance and could only be secured under a dictated peace. Among the concessions which the United States would sacrifice by the adoption of any amendment or the rejection of the treaty may be included the following:

"First. Germany's acknowledgement of responsibility for the war and her promise to make restitution for damages resulting from it.

"Second. Germany's promise to us in the treaty that she will not impose higher or other customs duties or charges on our goods than those charged to the most favored nation and will not prohibit or restrict or discriminate against imports directly or indirectly from our country.

"Third. Germany's promise to us in the treaty that she will make no discrimination in German ports on shipping bearing our flag and that our shipping in German ports will be given as favorable treatment as German ships receive.

"Fourth That for six months after the treaty goes into effect no customs duty will be levied against imports from the United States except the lowest duties that were in force for the first six months of 1914.

"Fifth. Germany's agreement with us that the United States shall have the privilege of reviving such of the treaties with Germany as were in existence prior to the war as we may alone desire.

"Sixth. Germany's promise to us to restore the property of our citizens seized in Germany or to compensate the owners.

"Seventh. Germany's very important agreement validating all acts by the United States and by the alien property custodian by which we seized and proceeded to liquidate $800,000,000 worth of property in the United States belonging to German citizens.

"Eighth. Germany's agreement that the proceeds of the sale of these properties may be used to compensate our citizens in Germany if Germany fails to do so, or to pay debts which Germany or Germans owe to American citizens, or to pay American prewar claims against Germany for property destroyed and lives taken similar to the losses because of the destruction of the Lusitania.

"Ninth. Germany's agreement that she will compensate her own citizens for property, patents and other things belonging to them in the United States seized during the war by our government.

"Tenth. Germany's agreement that no claim can be made against the United States in respect to the use or sale during the war by our government, or by persons acting for our government, of any rights in industrial, literary or artistic property, including patents.

"Eleventh. Germany's agreement that the United States shall retain over 500,000 tons of German shipping seized in American ports, which much more than compensate us for shipping lost during the war.

"Twelfth. We would lose our membership on the reparations commission, which will be the most powerful international body ever created and which will have enormous control over the trade and commerce of Germany with the rest of the world for years to come. It not only supervises the use of German economic resources and the payment of reparations, but it can restrict or expand Germany's imports and distribute much of her desirable exports, including dyes. In no way can the United States assure itself against discrimination in German imports and financial policies unless we have a member upon this great reparations commission.

"These are some, but by no means all, of the valuable concessions which the United States would inevitably sacrifice by failing to ratify the treaty. This failure would be just as complete if we adopt an amendment to it as if we rejected the treaty absolutely. In either event, we would find ourselves at the end of the war, it is true, but without any peace or terms of peace with Germany. We would have abandoned our disgusted associates and we would be reduced to the necessity of seeking a negotiated peace with an angry Germany on such terms as she would be willing to accord.

"We are, therefore, without any qualification against amendments.

"We are aware that the claim has been set up that one of the proposed amendments which relates only to the league of nations does not require the assent of Germany. This is based on the fact that Germany is not yet a member of the league of nations and may not be for several years. The answer is, however, that the league covenant is a part of the treaty, and the league which is mentioned in many places in the treaty has much to do with German affairs, even though Germany is not a member. Germany, in agreeing to the treaty, has assented to the provisions of the covenant, and one of the provisions is that it can only be amended by the action of the league, which has not yet started, ratified by all the members of the council, which has not yet organized, as well as by a majority of the members of the assembly. It is obvious, therefore, if it is to be amended in any other way, Germany's assent will be just as necessary as to any other article of the treaty.

Reservations.

"The reservations proposed by the majority of this committee are of such a character as at once to betray their authorship. They are the work of senators organized for the purpose of destroying the league and, if possible, defeating this treaty. Their phraseology is such as to make this purpose plain. They are in no sense interpretative reservations to be used to make clear language in the treaty that might be considered doubtful, but they are so framed as to receive the support of senators who desire the defeat of the treaty. While masquerading in the guise of reservations they are in fact alterations of the treaty. They have all the vices of amendments and the additional vice of pretending to be what they are not. Presented as parts of the resolution to ratify the treaty, they would in fact, if adopted, result in its defeat. All of them apply to the league of nations section of the treaty. Those who oppose the league of nations realize that it is invincible on a square fight and they hope to destroy it by this indirection.

"The league of nations has stood the test of worldwide criticism and unlimited attack. It stands to-day as the only hope for world peace. After all the assaults of many months its purposes and provisions stand out clearly defined, unaffected by criticism and unyielding to attack.

The League of Nations.

"The league of nations proposes to organize the nations of the world for peace whereas they have always heretofore been organized for war. It proposes to establish the rule of international justice in place of force. It proposes to make a war of conquest impossible by uniting all nations against the offender.

"It is the first international arrangement ever made by which small and weak nations are given the organized strength of the world for protection.

"It is a covenant between many nations by which each agrees not to do certain things which in the past have produced wars and to do many things which have been found to preserve the peace.

"It is a working plan for the gradual reduction of armament by all members simultaneously in proper proportion and by agreement.

"It sets up arbitration as a friendly method of adjusting disputes and inquiry when arbitration is not agreed to. In both cases it provides a cooling-off period of nine months during which the differences may be adjusted.

"It preserves the territorial integrity and political independence of each member and leaves to each the exercise of its sovereign rights as a nation.

"It will save the world from wars and preparation for wars. It will reduce armies and navies and taxes.

"It will help to remove the discontent with government in all countries by making government beneficent and devoting its revenues to constructive rather than to destructive purposes.

"It is the only plan proposed to redeem the world from war, pestilence and famine. The only one by which a stricken world can be redeemed from the disasters of the late war and the dangers of impending international chaos. Those who dally and delay as they seek with microscopes to find some petty flaw in its structure have nothing themselves to propose. They have appealed to every prejudice and resorted to every desperate method of attack to destroy this great international effort to establish peace, but they suggest nothing in its place.

"They denounce the public demand for energetic action as 'clamor.' They rail at the president, who with the representatives of many other nations has devoted months of hard work to a great constructive effort to settle the terms and reorganize the world for peace. Finally, unable to stem the tide of public demand for the league of nations, they resort to so-called reservations in the hope that they can destroy by indirection what they have found unassailable by direct attack.

"We renew our recommendation that the work of the peace conference be confirmed, the will of the people fulfilled, and the peace of the world advanced by the ratification of this treaty—'the best hope of the world'—even if like all human instrumentalities it be not divinely perfect in every detail."

The minority report was signed by Gilbert M. Hitchcock, John Sharp Williams, Claude A. Swanson, Atlee Pomerene, Marcus A. Smith and Key Pittman, all democrats.

THE McCUMBER REPORT.

The report submitted by Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota on Sept. 15 was in the nature of a severe arraignment of the majority report, which he characterized as betraying a selfish, immoral and dishonorable attitude.

SENATE DEBATE.

The debate on the peace treaty, or rather on the league of nations covenant, was long and at times acrimonious. The opponents and advocates of the league were not divided strictly on party lines but generally speaking the republicans were against it and the democrats were for it, though with the exception of certain irreconcilables in both parties the sentiment of the majority of the senators seemed to be in favor of ratification with certain reservations or interpretations. The irreconcilables included such men as Hiram W. Johnson of California, William E. Borah of Idaho, Lawrence Y. Sherman of Illinois, republicans, and James A. Reed of Missouri, democrat. Among those who favored the ratification of the treaty with "mild reservations" were Arthur Capper of Kansas, Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, Frank B. Kellogg and Knute Nelson of Minnesota, Irvine L. Lenroot of Wisconsin and Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED.

The first test of strength came on the thirty-five textual amendments to the treaty offered by Senator Fall, republican, of New Mexico. On Oct. 2 these were defeated by decisive majorities, seventeen republicans voting against them. On Oct. 16 the Lodge amendments changing the Shantung provisions of the treaty were defeated by a vote of 35 for to 55 against. Some of the senators voting against it announced that they were in favor of reservations in regard to the Shantung matter but would not vote for any amendment because that would involve sending the treaty back to the signatory powers. Fourteen republicans voted against the amendments. They were Senators Colt, Cummins, Hale, Kellogg, Kenyon, Keyes, Lenroot, McCumber, McNary, Nelson, Smoot, Spencer, Sterling and Townsend.

On Oct. 22 and 23 the foreign relations committee reported fifteen revised reservations, including preamble. The text of each of these will be given as it came before the senate to be voted upon.

The senate on Oct. 27 by a vote of 40 to 38 defeated an amendment offered by Senator Johnson of California to give the United States as many votes in the league as Britain and her dominions possessed. Other amendments of a similar nature were defeated on the 29th. On Nov. 4 Senator Lodge made a motion to strike out all reference to the Shantung settlement in the peace treaty. The motion was defeated by a vote of 41 to 26. Nov. 5 Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin offered a motion to strike out the labor sections from the treaty. The motion was defeated 47 to 34.

PREAMBLE ADOPTED.

On Nov. 7 the first of the committee reservations came up for action. This was the preamble, reading as follows:

"The reservations and understandings adopted by the senate are to be made a part and a condition of the resolution of ratification, which ratification is not to take effect or bind the United States until the said reservations and understandings adopted by the senate have been accepted by an exchange of notes as a part and a condition of said resolution of ratification by at least three of the four principal allied and associated powers, to wit, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan."

The preamble was adopted by a vote of 48 to 40. Three democrats, Gore, Reed and Walsh (Mass.) voted with forty-five republicans for the preamble. McCumber was the only republican to vote against it.

RESERVATIONS ADOPTED.

On Nov. 8 the second reservation proposed by the committee was adopted by a vote of 50 yeas to 35 nays. The reservation reads:

"2. The United States so understands and construes article 1 that in case of notice of withdrawal from the league of nations, as provided in said article, the United States shall be the sole judge as to whether all its international obligations and all its obligations under the said covenant have been fulfilled, and notice of withdrawal by the United States may be given by a concurrent resolution of the congress of the United States."

On Nov. 13 the third committee reservation was agreed to by a vote of 46 yeas to 33 nays. The text follows:

"3. The United States assumes no obligation to preserve the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country or to interfere in controversies between nations—whether members of the league or not—under the provisions of article 10, or to employ the military or naval forces of the United States under any article of the treaty for any purpose, unless in any particular case the congress, which, under the constitution, has the sole power to declare war or authorize the employment of the military or naval forces of the United States, shall by act or joint resolution so provide."

Reservation No. 4 offered by the committee was adopted Nov. 15 without a roll call. The reservation reads:

"4. No mandate shall be accepted by the United States under article 22, Part I., or any other provision of the treaty of peace with Germany, except by action of the congress of the United States."

Reservation No. 5 was adopted the same day by a vote of 59 to 36. The reservation as amended by the inclusion of the words "and all questions affecting the present boundaries of the United States and its insular or other possessions," was as follows:

"5. The United States reserves to itself exclusively the right to decide what questions are within its domestic jurisdiction and declares that all domestic and political questions relating wholly or in part to its internal affairs, including immigration, labor, coastwise traffic, the tariff, commerce, the suppression of traffic in women and children and in opium and other dangerous drugs, and all other domestic questions, and all questions affecting the present boundaries of the United States and its insular or other possessions, are solely within the jurisdiction of the United States and are not under this treaty to be submitted in any way either to arbitration or to the consideration of the council or of the assembly of the league of nations, or any agency thereof, or to the decision or recommendation of any other power."

Committee reservation No. 6 was adopted on the same day by a vote of 55 to 34. It follows:

"6. The United States will not submit to arbitration or to inquiry by the assembly or by the council of the league of nations, provided for in said treaty of peace, any questions which in the judgment of the United States depend upon or relate to its long-established policy, commonly known as the Monroe doctrine; said doctrine is to be interpreted by the United States alone and is hereby declared to be wholly outside the jurisdiction of said league of nations and entirely unaffected by any provision contained in the said treaty of peace with Germany."

Committee reservation No. 7 was agreed to the same day by a vote of 53 to 41. It follows:

"7. The United States withholds its assent to articles 156, 157 and 158, and reserves full liberty of action with respect to any controversy which may arise under said articles between the republic of China and the empire of Japan."

Committee reservation No. 8 was agreed to on the same day by a vote of yeas 54, nays 40. It follows:

"8. The congress of the United States will provide by law for the appointment of the representatives of the United States in the assembly and the council of the league of nations, and may in its discretion provide for the participation of the United States in any commission, committee, tribunal, court, council or conference, or in the selection of any members thereof and for the appointment of members of said commissions, committees, tribunals, courts, councils or conferences, or any other representatives under the treaty of peace, or in carrying out its provisions, and until such participation and appointment have been so provided for and the powers and duties of such representatives have been defined by law, no person shall represent the United States under either said league of nations or the treaty of peace with Germany or be authorized to perform any act for or on behalf of the United States thereunder, and no citizen of the United States shall be selected or appointed as a member of said commissions, committees, tribunals, courts, councils or conferences except with the approval of the senate of the United States."

Committee reservation No. 9 was adopted the same day by a vote of yeas 54, nays 40. The reservation was:

"9. The United States understands that the reparations commission will regulate or interfere with exports from the United States to Germany, or from Germany to the United States, only when the United States by act or joint resolution of congress approves such regulation or interference."

Committee reservation No. 10 was agreed to the same day by a vote of yeas 56, nays 39. The reservation was:

"10. The United States shall not be obligated to contribute to any expenses of the league of nations, or of the secretariat, or of any commission, or committee, or conference, or other agency organized under the league of nations or under the treaty or for the purpose of carrying out the treaty provisions, unless and until an appropriation of funds available for such expenses shall have been made by the congress of the United States."

Reservation No. 11 submitted by the committee was agreed to the same day by a vote of 56 to 39. It was:

"11. If the United States shall at any time adopt any plan for the limitation of armaments proposed by the council of the league of nations under the provisions of article 8, it reserves the right to increase such armaments without the consent of the council whenever the United States is threatened with invasion or engaged in war."

Committee reservation No. 12 was adopted the same day by a vote of 53 to 41. The reservation was:

"12. The United States reserves the right to permit, in its discretion, the nationals of a covenant-breaking state, as defined in article 16 of the covenant of the league of nations, residing within the United States or in countries other than that violating said article 16, to continue their commercial, financial and personal relations with the nationals of the United States."

Committee reservation No. 13 was adopted the same day by a vote of 52 yeas to 41 nays. It follows:

"13. Nothing in articles 296, 297, or in any of the annexes thereto, or in any other article, section or annex of the treaty of peace with Germany, shall, as against citizens of the United States, be taken to mean any confirmation, ratification or approval of any act otherwise illegal or in contravention of the rights of citizens of the United States."

On Nov. 17 committee reservation No. 14 was rejected by a vote of 29 to 64. The proposed reservation reads:

"14. The United States declines to accept, as trustee or in her own right, any interest in or any responsibility for the government or disposition of the overseas possessions of Germany, her rights and titles to which Germany renounces to the principal allied and associated powers under articles 119 to 127, inclusive."

Committee reservation No. 15 was rejected the same day by a vote of 56 to 36. The proposed reservation reads:

"15. The United States reserves to itself exclusively the right to decide what questions affect its honor or its vital interests and declares that such questions are not under this treaty to be submitted in any way either to arbitration or to the consideration of the council or of the assembly of the league of nations or any agency thereof or to the decision or recommendation of any other power."

In the course of the debate on the foregoing reservations many amendments were rejected.

On Nov. 18 the following reservation offered by Senator McCumber was adopted by a vote of 54 to 35:

"The United States withholds its assent to Part XIII, comprising articles 387 to 427, inclusive, of the said treaty of peace, and excepts and reserves the same from the act of ratification, and the United States declines to participate in any way in the said general conference, or to participate in the election of the governing body of the international labor office constituted by said articles, and declines in any way to contribute or be bound to contribute to the expenditures of said general conference or international labor office."

The following reservation offered by Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin was also adopted the same day by a vote of 55 yeas to 38 nays:

"The United States assumes no obligation to be bound by any election, decision, report or finding of the council or assembly in which any member of the league and its self-governing dominions, colonies or parts of empire in the aggregate have cast more than one vote, and assumes no obligation to be bound by any decision, report or finding of the council or assembly arising out of any dispute between the United States and any member of the league if such member or any self-governing dominion, colony, empire or part of empire united with it politically has voted."

TREATY RATIFICATION DEFEATED.

On Nov. 19 Senator Lodge moved the ratification of the treaty subject to the reservations and understandings adopted by the senate. Before a vote was taken the following letter from President Wilson to Senator Hitchcock was read:

"The White House, Washington, 18 November, 1919.—My Dear Senator: You were good enough to bring me word that the democratic senators supporting the treaty expected to hold a conference before the final vote on the Lodge resolution of ratification and that they would be glad to receive a word of counsel from me.

"I should hesitate to offer it in any detail, but I assume that the senators only desire my judgment upon the all-important question of the final vote on the resolution containing the many reservations by Senator Lodge. On that I cannot hesitate for, in my opinion, the resolution in that form does not provide for ratification but rather for the nullification of the treaty. I sincerely hope that the friends and supporters of the treaty will vote against the Lodge resolution of ratification.

"I understand that the door will probably then be open for a genuine resolution of ratification.

"I trust that all true friends of the treaty will refuse to support the Lodge resolution.

"Cordially and sincerely yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

The Lodge resolution of ratification was defeated by the following vote:

A motion to reconsider was adopted by a vote of 63 yeas to 30 nays and the treaty was declared by the vice-president to be in committee of the whole. After the decision of the chair had been reversed by the senate and considerable debate had taken place another vote was taken on the Lodge resolution to ratify the treaty with reservations. It was again rejected by a vote of 51 nays to 41 yeas.

Senator Underwood then offered a resolution ratifying the treaty of peace with Germany unconditionally. The resolution was defeated by a vote of 38 yeas to 53 nays as follows:

TO DECLARE WAR ENDED.

Senator Lodge offered the following concurrent resolution, which was referred to the committee on foreign relations:

"Whereas by resolution of congress adopted April 6, 1917, and by reason of acts committed by the then German government, a state of war was declared to exist between that government and the United States; and

"Whereas the said acts of the German government have long since ceased; and

"Whereas by an armistice signed Nov. 11, 1918, hostilities between Germany and the allied and associated powers were terminated; and

"Whereas by the terms of the treaty of Versailles Germany is to be at peace with all the nations engaged in war against her whenever three governments, designated therein, have ratified said treaty: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring), That the said state of war between Germany and the United States is hereby declared to be at an end."

The senate adjourned on Nov. 19 to meet in regular session on Dec. 1.

BULGARIAN TREATY OF PEACE.

The treaty of peace between the allied and associated states and Bulgaria was signed in the Salle des Fetes at Neuilly, a suburb of Paris, France, Nov. 27, 1919. The ceremonies were similar to those at the signing of the German and Austrian treaties, but less impressive owing to the absence of most of the leading men of the peace conference, Premier Clemenceau being the only notable exception. He opened and closed the proceedings with a few words. On behalf of Bulgaria the treaty was signed by M. Stamboulisky, the premier of the Balkan state. Messrs. Polk, White and Bliss signed for the United States.

The treaty with Bulgaria follows the lines of those in the German and Austrian treaties, including the league of nations. It contains the league of nations, labor, aerial navigation, prisoners of war and graves provisions. Regarding the remaking of the Bulgarian frontiers, the important changes are to the south, where Bulgaria cedes western Thrace to the principal allied and associated powers and agrees to accept whatever disposition of this territory the powers ultimately decide, but it is stipulated that in any event Bulgaria's western frontiers shall be modified slightly in four places to Serbia's advantage.

The Bulgarians are required to recognize the independence of the Serb, Croat and Slovene state, and provisions are made to change the nationality of the inhabitants of the territory formerly Bulgarian and transferred to other states. Provisions are made for protection of the minorities of race, language, nationality and religion.

Within three months the Bulgarians are required to demobilize the army and substitute volunteer enlistments. The Bulgarian army is reduced to 20,000 men, exclusively for the maintenance of order and frontier control.

Bulgaria is required to pay as reparations 2,250,000,000 francs ($450,000,000) in gold within thirty-seven years. Bulgaria renounces the benefits of the Bukharest and Brest-Litovsk treaties and agrees to surrender the moneys and securities received according to those treaties.

NO TREATY WITH TURKEY.

While Turkish representatives visited Paris and the peace conference sent missions to Turkey, no steps appear to have been taken to negotiate a formal peace treaty with the Ottoman empire. It was the understanding toward the close of 1919 that the league of nations might arrange a war settlement with Turkey or that the negotiations would be conducted through ordinary diplomatic channels.

TREATY RATIFIED BY OTHER COUNTRIES.

The treaty of peace with Germany was ratified by the British house of commons July 21, King George affixing his signature to the act of ratification Oct. 10. All the British dominions accepted the treaty, Canada ratifying it Sept. 4 and 11; Australia, Sept. 19-Oct. 1; New Zealand, Sept. 2, and Union of South Africa, Sept. 10 and 12.

The French chamber of deputies ratified the treaty Oct. 2 by a vote of 372 to 53; the senate by unanimous vote Oct. 11, and President Poincare signed the ratification act Oct. 14.

Italy ratified the treaty by royal decree Oct. 7.

Japan's imperial council ratified the treaty Oct. 12 and its action was approved by the emperor Oct. 30.

Belgium ratified the treaty Aug. 8 and 26. Poland ratified it July 21.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

The provisional organization of the league of nations was completed in Paris, France, May 5, 1919. It came into official existence Oct. 13 when the secretariat was formally notified that France, Great Britain and Italy had ratified the German peace treaty. The failure of the United States senate to ratify caused delay in setting the machinery of the league in motion, but it was said that the other powers would go ahead without the United States. Up to Dec. 1 a number of nations outside the big powers had announced their adherence to the league. Among them were Chile and Spain.

On Oct. 14 Leon Bourgeois was appointed as the French representative on the council of the league.

REVOLUTIONS IN HUNGARY.

Hungary was proclaimed an independent republic Nov. 16, 1918, and Count Michael Karolyi was made provisional president. A provisional national assembly was created at the same time. Difficulties with the entente and Roumania over boundary questions arose and the Karolyi cabinet resigned, giving way on March 22, 1919, to a bolshevist cabinet in which Bela Kun, the "people's commissioner for foreign affairs," was the ruling spirit, though Alexander Garbai was the premier. A soviet government on the Russian model was established. It was not a success and the city of Budapest, the capital, was the scene of many riots, killings, executions and counter-revolutions. On July 17 Bela Kun was forced to resign and was succeeded by Tibor Szamuely and other radical leaders. Then the Roumanians came and on Aug. 4 occupied the city with an army of 30,000 men. It was said that they killed many civilians and did a great deal of pillaging.

On Aug. 7 the peace cabinet in Paris was advised that a newly formed Hungarian cabinet headed by Julius Peidl had been overthrown and that Archduke Joseph had established a ministry in Budapest. It was suspected that this was the first step toward the restoration of the monarchical system, but this was denied. The allies, however, decided that it would not be wise to back up Archduke Joseph and at their request he resigned Aug. 22. Premier Stephen Friedrich continued in office as the head of the temporary government until he was succeeded on Nov. 22 by Karl Huszar as minister-president.

The Roumanians after being repeatedly requested to do so evacuated Budapest and Hungary the second week in November.

THE BALTIC PROVINCES IN 1919.

The states bordering on the eastern and southern shores of the Baltic sea, the Gulf of Riga and the Gulf of Finland and known generally as the Baltic provinces had a difficult time in 1919. They were attacked on the one side by the troops of Gen. von der Goltz, who refused to obey either the orders of the authorities in Berlin or of the supreme council in Paris, and on the other side by the soviet armies of Russia. In addition one of them, Esthonia, was made the base of Gen. Yudenitch's ill fated expedition against Petrograd and its neutrality was imperiled constantly. The main concern of the provinces was to retain their independence as republics and at the same time to establish such relations with the greater powers, Russia included, as would enable them to exist economically. Their armies were small and poorly supplied with food, clothing and munitions of war, yet up to Dec. 1, 1919, they had managed to defend themselves. The Germans at that time had been defeated, Gen. Yudenitch had failed in his enterprise and the bolsheviki were apparently anxious to make peace. Conferences were held at Dorpat in November, ostensibly to arrange for the exchange of prisoners, but mainly for the purpose of inaugurating peace negotiations.

Antanas Smetonas was elected president of the Lithuanian republic on April 4, 1919, and took the oath before the tarbya or parliament.

LUXEMBURG REMAINS A DUCHY.

By means of a plebiscite taken Sept. 28, 1919, the people of the little independent duchy of Luxemburg decided in favor of retaining Grand Duchess Charlotte as their ruler and of economic union with France. The voters had the choice of retaining the duchess, selecting another of the same family, substituting another dynasty, or establishing a republic. The vote was about two to one in favor of Charlotte.

VICTORY PARADES IN PARIS AND LONDON.

The allied victory in the war with Germany and her associates was celebrated with magnificent military parades in Paris and London in July, 1919, soon after the German peace treaty had been signed and accepted by the defeated power. The celebration in Paris occurred on July 14, the national holiday or Bastille day, while in London it took place on July 19. There were many other celebrations, but these were by far the most notable. In the French capital picked units from each of the allied armies marched under the Arc de Triomphe down the Champs-Elysees to the Place de la Concorde. The place of honor in the line was given to 1,000 wounded, who in civilian clothing and marching as best they could passed under the arch and before the reviewing stand where President Poincare stood. They represented all the provinces of France.

Marshal Joffre, the victor of the Marne, followed the wounded, riding alone. Behind him came Marshal Foch, commander-in-chief of the allied forces in the final victorious campaign. Both the military leaders were greeted with storms of applause. Gen. John J. Pershing, with a number of other American officers including Maj.-Gen. H. G. Harbord, Maj.-Gen. Henry T. Allen and Maj.-Gen. John L. Hines, came next at the head of some 1,500 picked American soldiers forming a composite battalion from regiments of the American army of occupation. The first two companies in line were separated from the second by a detachment of men carrying forty regimental flags. Last in the American section came 150 marines. The Americans marched with wonderful precision and with their officers were greeted with a sea of waving handkerchiefs, flags and deafening applause.

The great parade, which was witnessed by an immense throng of people all along the line of march, came to an end in the Place de la Republique, where the troops dispersed after passing before the French marshals, Foch and Joffre. The day was one long to be remembered in the annals of the French capital, the scene of so many stirring events in the world's history.

VICTORY DAY IN LONDON.

No less remarkable than the victory parade in Paris was that in London on Saturday, June 19. People began to assemble along the line of march the night before and when the march began both sides of the route were so packed with humanity that in places the troops had difficulty in getting through. Nineteen thousand soldiers, all selected from the most famous combat divisions of the British and allied armies, took part in the parade, which was more than six miles in length. It began at Albert Gate and passing through Sloan Square crossed the Thames on the Vauxhall bridge. The line of march there lay through one of the poorer districts of the city until Westminster bridge was reached, where the river was recrossed. Thence it proceeded to Whitehall and Pall Mall to Hyde Park, where the marchers dispersed. Along the whole route all the buildings were decorated with countless flags and masses of bunting. The weather was fine and there was no element lacking to make the day even more memorable than that on which Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee was celebrated in 1897.

Troops of the allied and associated countries were arranged in alphabetical order and because of this American soldiers came first in the line. There were three battalions of thirty-three officers and 1,100 men. Gen. John J. Pershing rode at their head with a color bearer carrying his personal flag. After the Americans came French, Italian, Belgian, Japanese, Polish, Roumanian, Portuguese, Serbian, Siamese and Czecho-Slovak troops, the smaller nations being represented by fifty men each.

Behind the allied section came Vice-Admirals Beatty and Keyes and other officers of the British grand fleet with a naval contingent of 4,000 men. After them came 1,000 men from the mercantile marine and 500 women from various war services. Next in line came Field Marshal Haig and his staff at the head of 5,000 British troops of every branch of the service, including detachments from all the dominions.

The parade was reviewed by King George from a stand erected before the Queen Victoria memorial. With him were Queen Mary, Queen Alexandra, the prince of Wales, the Princess Mary, Premier Lloyd George and many others. Gen. Pershing and Marshal Foch joined the royal party on the reviewing stand when they had finished their part in the parade and the king chatted with each in turn.

Each of the noted commanders in the line of march was greeted with wild enthusiasm and Pershing, Foch, Beatty and Haig received ovations as they were recognized. Gen. Pershing, who arrived in England on July 15, was the recipient of many honors at the hands of King George and others and with Field Marshal Haig, Admiral Beatty and a number of other distinguished soldiers was entertained at luncheon by the king and queen in Buckingham palace on the day of the parade.

Describing the appearance of the Americans and their leader in the parade Douglas Newton wrote in Lloyd's Sunday News:

"Then Gen. Pershing came—a big, thick man with a thrusting chin, all smiles as the crowd let him have it, but steady and soldierly, as his hand went up to salute the king. He did not carry a sword as the other leaders did, but his flag bearer by him dipped the red flag on which were set the stars of his rank as general of the American forces. Behind him rode the cavalry, taut and stocky and very purposeful in their steel helmets.

"There was a band with white instruments grinding out 'Over There,' and then in a brilliant and quickening flutter came the massed flags of America. The Stars and Stripes were fluttering in the wind like things of flame, and with them were the soberer tones of the American regimental flags. They passed up Constitution Hill, a bunch of flapping, leaping fire, marked strongly against the ever-fluttering play of hats and handkerchiefs and arms and flags that gave the massed people the sense of an unceasing dancing movement. Behind the flags were masses of marching Americans, hefty and springy, flowers in their rifle barrels and with a fine heroic air in their grim steel helmets. Those helmets were a happy touch."

Neither in the Paris nor the London victory parades were the dead in the war forgotten. In each city a cenotaph was erected and as the soldiers marched by they saluted the memorials to their fallen comrades.

PROHIBITION VOTE IN OHIO.

Ohio voters at the election of Nov. 4, 1919, voted on several prohibition or liquor propositions with the following official result:

Ratification of the federal prohibition amendment—Yes, 499,888; no, 500,430.

Two and three-fourths per cent beer—Yes, 474,903; no, 504,570.

Repeal of state prohibition—Yes, 454,933; no, 496,782.

RUSSIA UNDER SOVIET RULE.

Russia in 1919 continued under the domination of the soviet or bolshevist government of Lenin, Trotzky and Tchitcherin, though encircled by enemies on all sides and blockaded by the allies. The Moscow reds were assailed from the direction of Archangel by allied troops, from the west by a force of volunteers under Gen. Yudenitch, from the south and southeast by Cossacks and others commanded by Gen. Denikin and from the east by the troops under Admiral Kolchak. At times it looked as though the proletariat dictatorship would collapse, but lack of cohesion and unity of action among its opponents enabled it to escape defeat and by the end of November it seemed stronger than at any previous time.

Polish troops in the early part of the year won several victories over the bolsheviki at Vilna and other points. They succeeded in keeping the reds out of the Polish republic.

On the Archangel front in March there were 34,765 allied troops opposed to the bolsheviki. Of this number 4,920 were Americans and 13,100 British. There were also some French, Italians and Serbians and anti-red Russians. The fighting was severe at times but conditions were unfavorable to the allies and early in the year it was decided to withdraw the troops from that region. This was done gradually in the course of the summer.

On the Siberian front in March there were 7,500 American troops; 1,600 British; 4,000 Canadian; 7,600 French; 2,000 Italians; 4,000 Serbians; 12,000 Poles; 4,000 Roumanians; 27,000 Japanese and 55,000 Czecho-Slovaks. There were also a number of American engineers and Red Cross units. The Americans were chiefly engaged in guarding mines, railroad stations and lines and doing other work of similar character. They were attacked a number of times by bolshevik detachments and acquitted themselves well. The headquarters of the Kolchak government were at Omsk until that city was finally captured by the bolsheviki in November. The fortunes of war varied here as on the other fronts and it would be useless to follow them in detail. The allies were divided in policy and did little more than to give the antibolsheviki their financial and moral support.

Gen. Yudenitch in October got within sight of Petrograd, but then the bolsheviki brought up re-enforcements and drove him back. This ended the campaign on this front. In November the reds had regained all the territory they had lost, and Gen. Yudenitch's troops were scattered.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH KOLCHAK.

On May 24, 1919, the leading representatives of the allied and associated powers sent the following dispatch to Admiral Kolchak, head of the all-Russian government at Omsk:

"The allied and associated powers feel that the time has come when it is necessary for them once more to make clear the policy they propose to pursue in regard to Russia.

"It has always been a cardinal axiom of the allied and associated powers to avoid interference in the internal affairs of Russia. Their original intervention was made for the sole purpose of assisting those elements in Russia which wanted to continue the struggle against German autocracy and to free their country from German rule and in order to rescue the Czecho-Slovaks from the danger of annihilation at the hands of the bolshevik forces.

"Since the signature of the armistice on Nov. 11, 1918, they have kept forces in various parts of Russia. Munitions and supplies have been sent to assist those associated with them at a very considerable cost. No sooner, however, did the peace conference assemble than they endeavored to bring peace and order to Russia by inviting representatives of all the warring governments within Russia to meet them in the hope that they might be able to arrange a permanent solution of the Russian problem.

"This proposal and a later offer to relieve the distress among the suffering millions of Russia broke down through the refusal of the soviet government to accept the fundamental conditions of suspending hostilities while negotiations for the work of relief were proceeding.

"Some of the allied and associated governments are now being pressed to withdraw their troops and to incur no further expense in Russia, on the ground that continued intervention shows no prospect of producing an early settlement. They are prepared, however, to continue their assistance on the lines laid down below, provided they are satisfied that it will really help the Russian people to liberty, self-government and peace.

"The allied and associated governments now wish to declare formally that the object of their policy is to restore peace within Russia by enabling the Russian people to resume control of their own affairs through the instrumentality of a freely elected constituent assembly, and to restore peace along its frontiers by arranging for the settlement of disputes in regard to the boundaries of the Russian state and its relations with its neighbors through the peaceful arbitration of the league of nations.

"They are convinced by their experiences of the last twelve months that it is not possible to attain these ends by dealing with the soviet government of Moscow. They are, therefore, disposed to assist the government of Admiral Kolchak and his associates with munitions, supplies and food to establish themselves as the government of all Russia, provided they receive from them definite guaranties that their policy has the same object in view as the allied and associated powers.

"With this object they would ask Admiral Kolchak and his associates whether they will agree to the following as the conditions upon which they would accept continued assistance from the allied and associated powers:

"In the first place, that, as soon as they reach Moscow, they will summon a constituent assembly elected by a free, secret and democratic franchise, as the supreme legislature for Russia, to which the government of Russia must be responsible, or, if at that time order is not sufficiently restored, they will summon the constituent assembly, elected in 1917, to sit until such time as new elections are possible.

"Second, that throughout the areas which they at present control they will permit free elections in the normal course for all local and legally constituted assemblies, such as municipalities, zemstvos, etc.

"Third, that they will countenance no attempt to revise the special privilege of any class or order in Russia.

"The allied and associated powers have noted with satisfaction the solemn declaration made by Admiral Kolchak and his associates that they have no intention of restoring the former land system. They feel that the principles to be followed in the solution of this and other internal questions must be left to the free decision of the Russian constituent assembly, but they wish to be assured that those whom they are prepared to assist stand for the civil and religious liberty of all Russian citizens and will make no attempt to reintroduce the regime which the revolution has destroyed.

"Fourth, that the independence of Finland and Poland be recognized and that in the event of the frontiers and other relations between Russia and these countries not being settled by agreement they will be referred to the arbitration of the league of nations.

"Fifth, that if a solution of the relations between Esthonia, Letvia, Lithuania and the Caucasian and Transcaspian territories and Russia is not speedily reached by agreement, the settlement will be made in consultation and co-operation with the league of nations and that until such settlement is made the government of Russia agrees to recognize these territories as autonomous and to confirm the relations which may exist between their de facto governments and the allied and associated governments.

"Sixth, that the right of the peace conference to determine the future of the Roumanian part of Bessarabia be recognized.

"Seventh, that as soon as a government for Russia has been constituted on a democratic basis, Russia should join the league of nations and co-operate with the other members in the limitation of armaments and of military organizations throughout the world.

"Finally, that they abide by the declaration made by Admiral Kolchak on Nov. 27, 1918, in regard to Russia's national debt.

"The allied and associated powers will be glad to learn as soon as possible whether the government of Admiral Kolchak and his associates is prepared to accept these conditions and also whether in the event of acceptance they will undertake to form a single government and army command as soon as the military situation makes it possible.

Kolchak Agrees to Policy.

On June 5 the following reply from Admiral Kolchak was received in Paris:

"The government over which I preside has been happy to learn that the policy of the allied and associated powers in regard to Russia is in perfect accordance with the task which the Russian government itself has undertaken, that government being anxious above all things to re-establish peace in the country and to assure to the Russian people the right to decide their own destiny in freedom by means of a constituent assembly. I appreciate highly the interest shown by the powers as regards the national movement and consider their wish to make certain that the political conditions with which we are inspired are legitimate. I am therefore ready to confirm once more my previous declarations which I have always regarded as irrevocable.

"1. On Nov. 18, 1918, I assumed power and I shall not retain that power one day longer than required by the interest of the country. My first thought at the moment when the bolsheviki are definitely crushed will be to fix the date for the elections of the constituent assembly. A commission now is at work on an act in preparation for them on the basis of universal suffrage. Considering myself as responsible for that constituent assembly, I shall hand over to it all my powers in order that it may freely determine the system of government. I have, moreover, taken the oath to do this before the supreme Russian tribunal, the guardian of legality.

"All my efforts are aimed at concluding the civil war as soon as possible by crushing bolshevism in order to put the Russian people in a position to express their free will. Any prolongation of this struggle would only postpone that moment. The government, however, does not consider itself authorized to substitute for the inalienable right of free and legal elections the mere re-establishment of the assembly of 1917, which was elected under a regime of bolshevist violence and a majority of whose members now are in the ranks of the soviet.

"It is to the legally elected constituent assembly alone, which my government will do its utmost to convoke properly, that there will belong the sovereign rights of deciding the problems of the Russian state both in the internal and external affairs of the country.

"2. We gladly consent to discuss at once with the powers all international questions, and in doing so shall aim at the free and peaceful development of the peoples, the limitation of armaments and the measures calculated to prevent new wars, of which the league of nations is the highest expression.

"The Russian government thinks, however, that it should recall the fact that the final sanction of the decisions which may be taken in the name of Russia will belong to the constituent assembly. Russia cannot now and cannot in the future ever be anything but a democratic state where all questions involving modifications of the territorial frontiers and of external relations must be ratified by a representative body which is the national expression of the people's sovereignty.

"3. Considering the creation of a unified Polish state to be one of the chief of the normal and just consequences of the world war, the government thinks itself justified in confirming the independence of Poland, proclaimed by the provisional Russian government of 1917, all the pledges and decrees of which we have accepted. The final solution of the question of delimiting the frontiers between Russia and Poland must, however, in conformity with the principles set forth above, be postponed until the meeting of the constituent assembly. We are disposed at once to recognize the de facto government of Finland, but the final solution of the Finnish institution must belong to the constituent assembly.

"4. We are fully disposed at once to prepare for the solution of the questions concerning the fate of the national groups in Esthonia, Letvia, Lithuania and of the Caucasian and Transcaspian countries, and we have every reason to believe that a prompt settlement will be made, seeing that the government is assuring as from the present time the autonomy of the various nationalities. It goes without saying that the limits and conditions of these autonomous institutions will be settled separately as regards each.

"Even in the case that difficulties should arise in regard to the solution of these various institutions, the government is ready to have recourse to the collaboration and good offices of the league of nations with a view to arriving at a satisfactory settlement.

"5. The above principle, implying the satisfaction of agreements by the constituent assembly, should obviously be applied to the question of Bessarabia.

"6. The Russian government once more repeats its declaration of Nov. 27, 1918, by which it accepted the burden of the national debt of Russia.

"7. As regards the question of internal politics, which can only interest the powers in so far as they reflect the political tendencies of the Russian government, I make a point of repeating that there cannot be a return to the regime which existed in Russia before February, 1917. The provisional solution which my government has adopted in regard to the agrarian question aims at satisfying the interests of the great mass of the population and is inspired by the conviction that Russia can only be flourishing and strong when the millions of Russian peasants receive all guaranties for the possession of the land.

"Similarly as regards the regime to be applied to the liberated territories, the government, far from placing obstacles in the way of the free election of local assemblies, municipalities and zemstvos, regards the activities of these bodies and also the development of the people in self-government as necessary conditions for the reconstruction of the country, and is already actually giving them its support by all the means at its disposal.

"8. Having set ourselves the task of re-establishing order and justice and of insuring individual security to the population, which is tired of trials and exactions, the government affirms the equality before the law of all citizens without any special privilege. [An omission here.] All shall receive without distinction of origin or of religion the protection of the state and of the law.

"The government whose head I am is concentrating all the forces and all the resources at its disposal in order to accomplish the task which it has set itself. At this decisive hour I speak in the name of all national Russia. I am confident that, bolshevism once crushed, satisfactory solutions will be found for all questions which equally concern all those populations whose existence is bound up with that of Russia.

"KOLCHAK."

Kolchak Reply Acceptable.

To Admiral Kolchak's letter the peace conference representatives sent the following answer June 12:

"The allied and associated powers wish to acknowledge the receipt of Admiral Kolchak's reply to their note of May 26. They welcome the terms of that reply, which seem to them to be in substantial agreement with the propositions they had made, and to contain satisfactory assurances for the freedom, self-government and peace of the Russian people and their neighbors. They are, therefore, willing to extend to Admiral Kolchak and his associates the support set forth in their original letter."

PLAN TO FEED STARVING RUSSIA.

On April 17, 1919, the following correspondence between Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, head of the commission to feed Russia, and President Wilson and Premiers Clemenceau, Lloyd George and Orlando on the food situation in Russia was made public. Dr. Nansen in a letter to the council of four wrote:

"The present food situation in Russia, where hundreds of thousands of people are dying monthly from sheer starvation and disease, is one of the problems now uppermost in all men's minds. As it appears that no solution of this food question has so far been reached in any delegation, I would like to make a suggestion from a neutral point of view for the benefit of this gigantic misery, on purely humanitarian grounds.

"It would appear to me possible to organize a purely humanitarian committee for the provisioning of Russia, the foodstuffs and medical supplies to be paid for, perhaps to some considerable extent, by Russia itself, the justice of distribution to be guaranteed by a committee. The general makeup of the committee would be composed of Norwegian, Swedish and possibly Dutch, Danish and Swiss nationalities.

"It does not appear that the existing authorities in Russia would refuse the intervention of such a committee of a wholly nonpolitical order, devoted solely to the humanitarian service of saving life.

"If thus organized upon the lines of the Belgian relief committee, it would raise no question of political recognition or negotiations between the allies with the existing authorities in Russia.

"I recognize keenly the large political issues involved, and I would be glad to know under what conditions such an enterprise would be approved and whether such a committee could look for real support in finance and shipping and food and medical supplies from your governments."

The following reply was sent by President Wilson and the premiers:

"The misery and suffering in Russia described in your letter of April 3 appeal to the sympathies of all peoples. It is shocking to humanity that millions of men and women and children lack the food and nourishment which make life endurable.

"The governments, the peoples whom we represent, would be glad to co-operate, without thought of political, military or financial advantage, in any proposal which would relieve this situation in Russia. It seems to us that such a committee as you propose would offer a practical means of acquiring the beneficent results you have in view and could not, either in its conception or its operation, be considered as having any other aim than the humanitarian purpose of saving life.

"There are great difficulties to be overcome, political difficulties, owing to the existing situation in Russia, and difficulties of supply and of transport; but if the existing local governments of Russia are as willing as the governments and peoples whom we represent to see succor and relief given to the stricken people of Russia, no political obstacle will remain.

"There will remain, however, the difficulties of supply, finance and transport, which we have mentioned, and also the problem of distribution in Russia itself. The problem of supply we can ourselves hope to solve in connection with the advance and co-operation of such a committee as you propose. The problem of finance would seem to us to fall upon the Russian authorities.

"The problem of transport of supplies to Russia we can hope to meet with the assistance of your own and neutral governments, whose interests should be as great as our own, and whose losses have been less.

"The problems of transport in Russia and of distribution can be solved only by the people of Russia themselves, with the assistance, advice and supervision of your commission. Subject to such supervision, the problem of distribution should be solely under the control of the people of Russia themselves. The people in each locality should be given, as under the regime of the Belgian relief commission, the fullest opportunity to advise your commission upon the methods and the personnel by which their community is to be relieved.

"In no other circumstance could it be believed that the purpose of this relief was humanitarian and not political. Under no other conditions could it be certain that the hungry would be fed.

"That such a course would involve the cessation of hostilities within definite lines in the territory of Russia is obvious. And the cessation of hostilities would necessarily involve a complete suspension of the transfer of troops and military material of all sorts to and within Russia's territory.

"Indeed, relief to Russia which did not mean a return to a state of peace would be futile and would be impossible to consider.

"Under such conditions as we have outlined we believe that your plan could be successfully carried into effect, and we should be prepared to give it our full support.

"E. ORLANDO.
"D. LLOYD GEORGE.
"WOODROW WILSON.
"G. CLEMENCEAU."

Conditions remained such that the plan could not be carried out and the noncombatants in Russia continued to suffer from the lack of food, clothing and other necessaries, most of the available supplies going to the red army. At the time this record closed soviet Russia was still being blockaded by the allies.

GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO AND FIUME.

Early in 1919 Italy was stirred to fever heat over the question of taking possession of the eastern coast of the Adriatic. On Jan. 16 the warrior-poet, Lieut.-Col. Gabriele d'Annunzio, issued a manifesto filling six columns in the newspapers demanding the inclusion of the whole of Dalmatia in the kingdom of Italy. He was especially severe in his denunciation of Sig. Bissolati and others who took an opposite view of the matter and wound up his article with:

"No bones, no scraps, no rags, no bartering, no frauds! Enough! Enough! Overturn the counters! Smash the false balances! If it becomes necessary we will confront the new conspiracy with a bomb in either hand and a knife between the teeth!"

Following this outburst there was a controversy over the use of Fiume as a port through which to send food to the Jugo Slavs, but no change in the situation occurred immediately. Some disorder took place there and also at Spalato, the Jugo Slavs claiming that the trouble was fomented by Italians. On May 24 the people in Rome observed the anniversary of Italy's entry into the war quietly, the government discouraging demonstrations on account of the feeling against the attitude of the allies toward the Adriatic claims. D'Annunzio was to have delivered an address, but was ordered not to do so by the government. On the following day when he was ordered to return to his camp he replied by resigning his rank as lieutenant-colonel in the army. This, as a volunteer, he had the right to do.

In June the Orlando cabinet fell and was succeeded by one headed by Sig. Nitti, who took the Bissolati side of the Fiume question and was consequently opposed by D'Annunzio. International forces at this time occupied Fiume and the French troops there, who sympathized with the Jugo Slavs, came into conflict on several occasions with the Italians. On July 2 a row occurred in which twenty-three French soldiers were wounded. Gen. Graziole, in command of the international force, tried to maintain order, but many anti-Italian manifestations occurred. On July 11 three allied warships—one American, one British and one French—were ordered to Fiume harbor.

On Sept. 14 it became known that Gabriele d'Annunzio with forty motor lorries loaded with volunteers had proceeded from Roncha, on the old Italian frontier, to Fiume and taken possession of the city after a protest by Gen. Pittaluga, then in command of the troops in the town. There he remained in spite of some opposition by the Nitti government and up to Dec. 1, 1919, had not been induced to give up the enterprise. He had the sympathy of the army with him and also that of Italians generally except the socialists. These won a notable victory in the November elections and D'Annunzio's position was not made any the more secure thereby.

DISTURBANCES IN EGYPT.

Soon after the close of the war in Europe the nationalists in Egypt began an agitation for the virtual independence of that country. They objected to the protectorate established by the British on Dec. 18, 1914, and demanded complete autonomy for Egypt, leaving to Great Britain only the right of supervision over the public debt and the Suez canal. They wanted to send representatives to Paris and London to present their side of the controversy. No agreement could be reached between the nationalists and the British authorities and early in March, 1919, disturbances began in various parts of the country between mobs and the troops. By the 21st of the month disorders had spread through the whole valley of the Nile. In Cairo and other places there were collisions in which several lives were lost. Official reports up to March 26 showed that 2,000 houses had been sacked, that a number of British soldiers had been killed and that various railway stations had been burned. In Cairo alone sixty-nine natives had been killed.

Field Marshal Viscount E. H. H. Allenby, the conqueror of the Turks in Palestine, was sent to Egypt in the hope that he might restore order. In spite of his efforts the rioting and bloodshed continued, especially in Cairo and Alexandria, where on April 9 and 10 thirty-eight persons were killed and 100 wounded. Allenby was made British high commissioner for Egypt Oct. 17. Things were then a little less disturbed, but the whole question as to British Egyptian policy still remained an open one.

On Nov. 18 eleven natives were killed and sixty wounded by British troops, who opened fire on a crowd besieging the police station in the course of a demonstration.

MONARCHIST REVOLT IN PORTUGAL.

In January, 1919, the monarchists in northern Portugal began a revolt which for a time threatened to sweep the republican government out of power. The southern part of the country, however, was loyal and by the 1st of February the uprising had been crushed completely. Before they were suppressed the royalists had captured Oporto and established their headquarters there. Most of the fighting occurred in the provinces of Minho and Trazos-Montes. There was some trouble in Lisbon but the monarchists in the capital were easily overcome on Jan. 25. The navy remained loyal to the republic. It was reported at various times that ex-King Manuel was near Oporto, but it appeared that he had not left his residence in England.

URUGUAY UNDER A COMMISSION.

When Dr. Baltasar Brum was inaugurated as president on March 1, 1919, at Montevideo, Uruguay was placed in control of a commission form of government. The commission consists of the president, elected directly by the people, and nine men appointed by the two houses of congress. In addition the president has a cabinet of nine members, of whom he names three and the commission six.

DEVELOPMENTS IN GERMANY IN 1919.

The main event in Germany in 1919, aside from signing a humiliating treaty of peace with the victorious allies, was the election of a national assembly and the framing and adoption of a new constitution. This important work was completed July 31 when the fundamental law was adopted by the decisive vote of 262 to 75. The formal promulgation took place Aug. 13.

DIGEST OF CONSTITUTION.

The new German constitution is divided into two main parts—"the composition and the ties of the empire" and "the basic rights and basic duties of Germans." The first part consists of seven sections and the second of five.

The subdivisions of the first part are: The empire and individual states, the reichstag, the imperial president, imperial government, imperial council, imperial legislation and imperial administration of justice.

Those of the second part are: Individual community of life, religion and religious societies, education and schools, and economic life.

This second main part provides that all Germans shall be equal before the law and that men and women shall have basically the same rights and duties. Preferential rights and drawbacks of birth and position are removed and titles of nobility are considered as only the part of a person's name.

No more titles will be conferred, and will be given only when they describe a person's occupation. No tokens of honor may be given out by the government and no German may accept a title or order of a foreign state.

The concluding part of the constitution bears the title: "Transition Relations."

The preamble to the constitution begins as follows:

"The German people, united in its branches and inspired by the will to renew and strengthen its empire in freedom and justice, to further inner and outer peace and social advance, has voted this constitution."

Is a Republican State.

Section 1 declares that the German empire is a republican state, sovereignty being based on the people.

It describes the territorial limits of the empire, establishes the imperial colors as being black, red and gold, and states that the generally recognized rules of international law will be held as binding on the empire.

The empire will have exclusive rights governing foreign affairs, colonies, citizenship, immigration, defense, coinage, customs, posts, telegraphs and long distance telephones, repopulation, motherhood, children, youth, health, labor insurance, protection to laborers and employes, confiscation, care of wounded soldiers and their relatives, socialization of national resources, economic undertakings, manufacture, distribution, price fixing, economic production, trade weights and measures, the issuance of paper money, food, luxury, articles of industry, mines, insurance, the mercantile marine, control of lake and coast fisheries, railroads, automobile traffic, transportation by land, water and air, road construction and theaters.

Individual states will have legislative rights, but the imperial law will supersede those of individual states.

Each state must have a liberal constitution, with a legislature elected by general, equal and secret ballot by all Germans, men and women.

The constitution lays down rules for altering the empire territorially, providing that plebiscites shall be held in districts affected.

Reichstag and President.

The reichstag supersedes the temporary national assembly. It will be elected for a term of four years. The president will be chosen by the entire German people instead of by the assembly and will hold office for a term of seven years. He will represent the empire under international law, will make treaties and accredit diplomats. Declaration of war or peace must be proclaimed by the imperial reichstag, and treaties with foreign states must be accepted by the reichstag.

The president as commander of the chief defense forces of the empire can employ armed forces for quelling disturbances or may send them against states which do not fulfill their duties, but in doing so must notify the reichstag, which is given the power of veto.

The president's orders must be countersigned by a chancellor or the imperial minister whose department is affected. He has the right to pardon criminals, but the granting of amnesty must be voted by the reichstag.

The chancellor will occupy a position analogous to that of vice-president. He and the rest of the ministry will be appointed by the president. The chancellor will determine the empire's foreign policy, bear responsibility for the cabinet, and in the case of a tie vote in the ministry will have the deciding ballot.

The reichstag is given the right to impeach the president, chancellor and ministers. Charges upon which impeachment proceedings are based must bear the names of 100 members of the reichstag before the case can be brought before the court.

The Imperial Council.

The imperial council will be composed of representatives of the individual states, which will have at least one vote apiece. The votes of the larger states will be based on population, being fixed on the number of millions of inhabitants within their borders. No state can have more than two-fifths of the total number of votes in the council.

Half of Prussia's votes must come from provincial administrations. Imperial legislation cannot be introduced in the reichstag without the consent of the council unless the government ventures to introduce bills which the reichstag knows to be disapproved by the council.

Laws may be submitted by plebiscites if the president desires. A majority vote will nullify the law. The constitution can be altered by a quorum of two-thirds of the reichstag voting for the alteration by a two-thirds majority.

The imperial administration is placed in control of treaties by individual states with foreign countries, territorial changes and defense of the realm. German merchant vessels will constitute a unified mercantile marine. The new German frontier comprises custom zones, the income from which will be administered by the empire.

Provision is made for a budget system, and the reichstag cannot raise the amount of the budget without reaching an agreement with the council.

Imperial postal and telegraphic rates will be determined by the council, and the railroad systems will be taken over by the empire and states. Private roads must be given over to the empire on demand, and the empire can confiscate railroads not yet taken over.

In case the defense of the country requires the step, it is given the power to take over the administration of all water routes.

Life Tenure for Judges.

Judges of the ordinary civil courts will be chosen for life and cannot be removed except by judicial decision. Military courts are abolished save in wartime and on board warships, and state courts, which will try those accused of political crimes, will be created by imperial law.

Every citizen of an individual state is a citizen of the empire. Every German will have equal rights anywhere within the empire and may live where he pleases. He will have the right to own real estate and purchase food in any state.

Every German permitted to emigrate will have the privilege of being protected in foreign countries, and no German may be delivered up to a foreign country for prosecution and punishment.

Foreign speaking Germans may not be prevented from developing the free use of their mother tongue. In instruction and legal affairs the freedom of the individual is invulnerable. The German's house will be his castle.

Postal, telegraph and telephone secrecy is guaranteed. Every German has the right to express his opinions by written or spoken word, print or picture. There will be no censorship save for moving pictures, for which regulations will be made to suppress objectionable films for the protection of youth.

Under the heading "community of life" the constitution declares that marriage constitutes the basis of family life and the salvation of the nations and it is therefore under the special protection of the constitution on the basis of equality of the sexes.

It is pointed out that it is the duty of the state to keep pure and healthy the family life and families with several children have the right to necessary care.

Motherhood, it is declared, has a prior claim to the protection of the state.

Illegitimate children shall be placed under the same bodily, spiritual and social conditions as legitimate ones, and youth must be protected from moral, spiritual or physical neglect.

A long list of the rights of German citizens comes next. The list includes the right to hold gatherings, to belong to societies and organizations or social, political and religious groups. It is declared that petty officials appointed for life may not be discharged unless complaints against them are first submitted to them.

Church and Schools.

Under religion, the constitution declares that all citizens of Germany shall enjoy complete freedom of belief and conscience. No state church exists and religion plays no part in citizenship.

It is provided that there must be universal attendance at school for a period of eight years and that pupils must attend advanced schools until 18. It will not be necessary to pay tuition and state aid will be given needy pupils and their families. Private schools can be run only with government permission.

All schools, it is provided, must make an effort to educate their students in the spirit of the German people and in the spirit of reconciliation with the peoples of the world. Instruction in constitutional government and manual labor is obligatory in all schools.

When the constitution was promulgated Aug. 13 President Friedrich Ebert appointed Premier Gustav Bauer imperial chancellor and issued a decree requiring all public officials and defense forces to take the oath under the new basic law.

LIEBKNECHT REVOLT.

At the close of 1918 the German soldiers' and workmen's councils, then in power, transferred the legislative and executive power to the "people's commissioners" headed by Friedrich Ebert until a national assembly could be elected. There was much disorder, caused chiefly by the so-called Spartacans led by Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxembourg, whose aim was to overthrow the majority socialist government and "establish the power of the revolutionary proletariat." Pitched battles occurred in the streets of Berlin between these elements and the government forces commanded by Gustav Noske, and many lives were lost. The fighting was especially severe during the second week in January, 1919, when the "reds" were in possession of certain points in the central part of the capital. The government forces finally prevailed and established order after summarily executing large numbers of the rebels. There was some disorder in other cities, but it was easily suppressed.

On Jan. 15 Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxembourg were captured at the Hotel Eden. The former was shot and killed by his guards because he made an attempt to escape as he was being taken to the Moabit prison. Rosa Luxembourg about the same time was beaten to death by an infuriated mob. That was the story sent out by the authorities. The fact of the death of the two agitators was confirmed, but doubt remained as to the exact manner in which their lives were taken.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY.

Election of members to the national assembly took place Jan. 19 and resulted in a victory for the government. The independent socialists, Spartacans and other radicals and the imperialists were badly beaten. The majority socialists won 164 seats, the Christian people's party 88, the democrats 77 and the German national party 34.

Weimar was chosen as the place of meeting for the national assembly and there it began its sessions on Feb. 6 with Eduard David as temporary president. The unruly elements in various parts of the government kept Gustav Noske and his army busy, but the assembly went on with its work undisturbed. A provisional constitution was adopted empowering the assembly to adopt a permanent constitution, to elect a national president by a majority vote and to create a "committee of state," or quasi second chamber. On Feb. 11 Friedrich Ebert was elected president of the German republic, receiving 277 votes out of 379 in the assembly. A new cabinet was chosen with Philip Scheidemann as chancellor. Konstantin Fehrenbach was chosen permanent president of the assembly.

In February and March the life of the republic was threatened by uprisings of various kinds and in various places, especially in Bavaria, but through it all President Ebert and Commander Noske remained unshaken. The reds tried to foment rebellion by means of strikes in all the larger cities, but without success. In Berlin in the course of the first week in March 1,000 persons were killed or wounded in street fighting. Gustav Noske issued an order that all persons caught in armed opposition to the government should be executed without trial. The order was obeyed. The second week in March saw more street fighting. On the afternoon of March 14, 220 men were lined up in the Moabit prison and shot to death with machine guns. In Halle fifty-five persons were killed and 170 wounded in riots, while 280 persons were arrested for pillaging, the stolen property being valued at $4,500,000. In Frankfort-on-the-Main several hundred persons were killed in rioting on April 1.

The arrival of American food ships in the latter part of March and in April relieved the food shortage to some extent, but rioting did not cease. In the latter part of June there were serious disorders in Hamburg and Berlin.

Friedrich Ebert took the oath as imperial president in the national theater in Weimar Aug. 31.

Hugo Haase, leader of the independent socialist party, was shot by an insane Austrian named Johann Voas on Oct. 8 and died from his wounds Nov. 7.

EVENTS IN BAVARIA.

Munich, capital of Bavaria, was the scene of much political turmoil and bloodshed in 1919. On Feb. 21 Kurt Eisner, the premier, was shot and killed while on his way to the landtag by Count Arco Valley, a former officer of the Prussian guards. On the same day Herr Auer, minister of the interior, was assassinated in the landtag. Deputy Osel was killed at the same time and two other Bavarian officials were wounded. Eisner was a socialist of the radical type and had been opposed to the Ebert government. In April the communists obtained control of Munich in spite of the efforts of the Bavarian prime minister, Herr Hoffmann, and established a soviet government under the leadership of Max Levien. The peasants of Bavaria remained loyal to Hoffmann, who transferred the seat of government from Munich to Nuremberg, whence he directed a military campaign against the Munich reds, who were turned out of power May 1. Before going the communist leader took revenge by killing a number of hostages, including Prince Albert of Thurn and Taxis, Prince von Wrede, Privy Councilor Albert Doederlein, Prof. Franz Stuck and others.

On May 3 Her. Eglihofer, commander of the red army, was shot and killed after being tried by court-martial. Others implicated in the killing of the hostages were executed with less formality, some being beaten to death by mobs. Max Levien made his escape. Fritz Seidl and five others were tried, found guilty and executed Sept. 19.

FREE STATE OF SAXONY.

The new chamber of deputies of the "free state of Saxony" met Feb. 25 and elected Julius Frassdorf, a majority socialist, as president. Dr. Diestel, a German democrat, was elected first vice-president, and Deputy Lipinsky, independent socialist, second vice-president.

THE RHINE REPUBLIC.

The "Rhine Republic" was proclaimed at Wiesbaden and other Rhine cities June 1, with Dr. Hans A. Dorten at its head. It was reported at the time that the French commander in the region aided in the movement, which was not regarded seriously.

AMERICAN TROOPS IN BERLIN.

American soldiers in uniform were seen on the streets of Berlin at various times in the early spring and summer of 1919. They were there in connection with several American missions having business in the city. Owing to the hostility shown by the people they remained most of the time in the hotels where they were quartered.

THE FORMER KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE.

Holland continued to be a haven of refuge for the former emperor and crown prince of Germany. William II. remained at Amerongen as the guest of Count von Bentinck, though he purchased a new home at Doorn into which he intended to move at the close of the year. The allies and especially Britain insisted that he would be tried before some international court for his part in the war, but the delay in ratifying the treaty of peace with Germany prevented any definite steps from being taken up to Dec. 1, 1919.

Former Crown Prince Frederick William remained at Wieringen, Holland.

SINN FEIN ACTIVITY IN IRELAND.

In the British general elections in December, 1918, the Sinn Fein party in Ireland were the winners in seventy-three parliamentary constituencies, but the men chosen refused to go to Westminster. They claimed that the election was an act of self-determination and that their choice was an Irish parliament in an Irish republic. On Dec. 28, 1918, it was announced that the Irish republic had come into existence and that an independent delegation to the peace conference in Paris would be sent.

On Jan. 21, 1919, twenty-five Sinn Fein members of parliament assembled in Dublin and constituted themselves into the "Dail Eireann," or "Irish parliament." They elected Charles Burgess speaker and appointed Count Horace Plunkett, Arthur Griffiths and Prof. Edward de Valera a committee to present the claims of Ireland at the peace conference. Both De Valera and Griffiths were in prison at the time, but the former escaped Feb. 3 and later in the year came to the United States to plead the cause of the republic, of which he was elected temporary president at a private session of the parliament in Dublin April 5. A declaration of independence was issued at the meeting on Jan. 21.

De Valera visited Chicago July 12-13 and spoke at the Cubs' ball park to a gathering of 25,000 persons. He made several tours of the country gathering funds and making friends for his republic.

The British government did not, of course, recognize the republic but so long as it did not try to assume real powers and functions did not interfere with it. The authorities, however, applied the provisions of the defense of the realm act to such things as drilling, selling bonds of the republic and the like. The Sinn Feiners were credited with numerous killings of policemen in Ireland and raids on military barracks for the securing of arms and ammunition, and consequently public gatherings, fairs and the like were prohibited.

Steps were taken in November, 1919, by the British cabinet, through a committee appointed for that purpose, to present a new home rule plan for Ireland.

JAPANESE-KOREAN CONFLICT.

Korea, chafing under the rule of Japan, began early in 1919 a movement for self-determination or independence. It spread quickly and the Japanese determined to suppress it with severity. Demonstrations took place in Seoul and in the provinces and led to clashes with the military, resulting in the killing of 351 persons and the wounding of 734, a few Japanese figuring in the casualties. American missionaries, it was claimed, were beaten and insulted and other serious charges were made against the Japanese local authorities. These disturbances occurred in the latter part of March and the first part of April.

Measures were taken by the Japanese government to introduce a more humane form of government in Korea. An imperial rescript issued in Tokyo Aug. 19 provided for a certain amount of self-government or home rule and the military government was succeeded by a civil one. The reforms announced did not satisfy the Koreans, who resumed their demonstrations in September, without, however, causing any serious disturbances.

DECORATIONS AWARDED TO CHICAGO SOLDIERS.

In the following list of medals, crosses and other decorations awarded to soldiers living in Chicago or its vicinity there are doubtless many omissions, although both the reports made from day to day by the war department and those made later by the commanding officers of certain Chicago units have been used. Many Chicagoans served with the British and the French and the honors won by them have not been recorded except in a few instances.

The following abbreviations have been used to indicate the various kinds of decorations bestowed:

A. C. of A. M.—Aero Club of America Medal.
C. de G. (Fr.)—Croix de Guerre (French).
C. de G. (Bel.)—Croix de Guerre (Belgian).
C. L. of H.—Commander Legion of Honor, France.
C. M. of H.—Congressional Medal of Honor, United States.
C. of St. G.—Cross of St. George, England.
D. C. M.—Distinguished Conduct Medal, British.
D. F. C.—Distinguished Flying Cross, British.
D. M.—Decoration Militaire, Belgium.
D. S. C.—Distinguished Service Cross, American.
D. S. M.—Distinguished Service Medal, American.
D. S. O.—Distinguished Service Order, British.
I. W. C.—Italian War Cross.
L. of H.—Legion of Honor, France.
M. C.—Military Cross, British.
M. M. (Br.)—Military Medal, British.
M. M. (Fr.)—Medaille Militaire, French.
O. of L.—Order of Leopold, Belgium.

SOME EXCEPTIONAL HONORS.

The congressional medal of honor, the highest military decoration of the United States and awarded only for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty," was given on the recommendation of Gen. Pershing to the following Chicago soldiers:

Corporal Jake Allex, company H, 131st infantry, 4350 South Ashland avenue, Chicago, former stockyards policeman, took command of his platoon when the commander was wounded and, pushing forward on a machine gun nest, bayoneted five Germans, and when the bayonet broke used the butt of his rifle, capturing the remainder of the crew.

First Sergeant Johannes S. Anderson, 4854 West Ferdinand street, Chicago, company B, 132d infantry, silenced and captured a machine gun nest unaided and brought back twenty-three prisoners.

Private John J. Kelly, 6149 Kimball avenue, Chicago, 78th company, 6th regiment, marine corps, ran 100 yards through the American barrage to attack a machine gun nest, killing the gunner and one of the crew and returning through the barrage with eight prisoners.

Private Berger Lohman, 1838 North Spaulding avenue, Chicago, company H, 132d infantry, captured single handed a machine gun blocking the advance of his company and turned it on the retreating enemy.

Corporal Thomas A. Pope, company E, 131st infantry, 6945 Overhill avenue, Chicago. Rushed machine gun single handed, bayoneted several of the crew, and, standing astride the gun, kept the remainder of the enemy detachment at bay until the arrival of re-enforcements which killed or captured the rest of the enemy.

Foreman Citation.

With the award of the distinguished service medal to Col. Milton J. Foreman, commanding the 122d field artillery, came the following citation:

"Commanding the 122d field artillery, he gave proof of eminent technical attainments and assiduous zeal. Though handicapped by many adverse conditions, due to difficult terrain and determined hostile resistance, he kept his batteries in close support of the infantry and thereby rendered services of inestimable value during the St. Mihiel offensive and the advance to the Meuse in the last phase of the Meuse-Argonne offensive."

Sanborn Citation.

In awarding the distinguished service medal to Col. Joseph B. Sanborn, Gen. Pershing gave him the following citation:

Order No. 2830. The commander in chief, in the name of the president, has awarded a distinguished service medal to you for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services as set forth below:

"Col. Joseph B. Sanborn, U. S. A., commander of the 131st infantry, during all of its campaigns against the enemy displayed military leadership of a high order. His unremitting zeal and practical skill were largely responsible for the success of his regiment in combat."

Dawes Citation.

Marshal Foch of France in bestowing upon Brig.-Gen. Charles G. Dawes the war cross cited him as follows in official orders of the day:

"During the course of operations in 1918 Gen. Dawes obtained a complete union of supplies between the American and French armies. By his breadth of spirit and his constant effort to put upon a common basis the resources of the two armies, he permitted to be realized under the best possible conditions a community of effort which resulted in the victory over the Germans."

THE REPUBLIC OF POLAND.

The Polish republic which came into existence with the disruption of the Austro-Hungarian empire in November, 1918, made rapid progress in 1919 toward stability in the face of many obstacles, such as lack of food supplies for the people, lack of coal and raw materials for the factories and lack of money. It had to keep a large army in the field fighting the Russian bolsheviki, the Ukrainians and the Germans. Yet it met all situations bravely and conditions gradually improved, though they were still difficult toward the close of the year.

In January, 1919, Ignace Jan Paderewski, the noted pianist and patriot, formed a ministry under the chieftaincy of Gen. Joseph Pilsudski with himself as premier and minister of foreign affairs. On Jan. 29 Secretary of State Lansing, who was in Paris as a member of the American peace delegation, made public the following message which he had sent to Premier Paderewski:

"The president of the United States directs me to extend to you as secretary of foreign affairs of the provisional Polish government his sincere wishes for your success in the high office which you have assumed, and his earnest hope that the government of which you are a part will bring prosperity to the republic of Poland. It is my privilege to extend to you at this time my personal greetings and officially to assure you that it will be a source of gratification to enter into official relations with you at the earliest opportunity to render to your country such aid as is possible at this time as it enters upon a new cycle of independent life, which will be in due accord with that spirit of friendliness which has in the past animated the American people in their relations with your countrymen."

Poland's first constitutional assembly began its work in the Marius institute in Warsaw, Feb. 9, and on the 22d of the same month Gen. Pilsudski was made chief of state to execute the decisions of the diet. In the course of the year Premier Paderewski worked unceasingly for the success of the republic, vigorously defending its rights before the peace conference in Paris, securing help for the starving and trying to frame legislation for the future welfare of his country. In this he was assisted by many other Polish patriots not only in the reconstituted Poland but in the United States and elsewhere.

THE 132D INFANTRY (OLD 2D I. N. G.)

The 132d infantry, commanded by Col. Abel Davis, saw a great deal of fighting in France and many decorations were awarded to the officers and men for valor in action. The names of most of these will be found in the list as reported by the war department. Five congressional medals of honor were awarded to the regiment, four of them for bravery in the battle of the Bois des Forges. These were Capt. George H. Mallon, company E; First Sergeant Sydney G. Gumpertz, company E; Private Berger Lohman, company H, and Sergeant Willis Sandin, company H. The 132d regiment lost eleven commissioned officers and 263 enlisted men in the war, most of them being killed in action or dying from wounds.

The high points in the regiment's history are:

May 24, 1918—Arrived at Brest, France, disembarking two days later and arriving by train at British training area around Oisemont June 1.
June 10—Hiked to Gamaches training area.
July 4—Participated in Australian attack at Vaire woods and Hamel.
Aug. 6—Participated in capture of Albert.
Aug. 24—Moved to American area, regimental headquarters at Resson.
Sept. 6—Attached to French 2d army, headquarters at Bois Brule.
Sept. 9—Part of American 3d army corps, relieving French 408th infantry regiment in Mort Homme sector.
Sept. 26—Pivot of American 1st army attack north of Verdun, making five kilometer (three mile) advance through Bois des Forges. Relieved Oct. 4.
Oct. 6—Third battalion attached to American 4th division, taking part in capture of Bois de Foret. Relieved Oct. 14.

Oct. 8—Crossed Meuse as part of French 17th corps, attacking in Consenvoye, Bois de Consenvoye, Bois de Chaume and Plat Chene. Relieved Oct. 10.
Oct. 26—Took place of American 316th regiment in Troyon area. Relieved Nov. 6.
Nov. 11—Cessation of hostilities; regiment occupying outpost positions.

[By E. R. T.]

The 108th ammunition train, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Walter J. Fisher, was organized from the old 7th Illinois infantry in October, 1917, at Camp Logan, Texas. Coming to France the early part of 1918 it trained at Vuillafans, department of the Doubs. Left its training area for the Toul sector Aug. 24 and operated in that portion of the line directly behind Montsec up to and including the first two days of the big American offensive on the St. Mihiel salient. Left this front Sept. 14, moving to new station at Brabant-en-Argonne. Upon arrival there it immediately began the task of furnishing ammunition to the batteries of the 58th field artillery brigade, with which organization this regiment served throughout all its operations. Through a very trying campaign, beginning Sept. 26, the opening date of the great Meuse-Argonne offensive, and working through to the termination of hostilities on Nov. 11, the regiment, under extremely trying conditions, lack of motor transportation, very poor roads and violent enemy shell fire, succeeded at all times in keeping more than the necessary supply of ammunition on hand for the batteries of the three artillery regiments of the brigade. In these operations the regiment lost twelve men killed in action, thirty-nine wounded, and nineteen died of wounds or other causes.

ILLINOIS MEN IN THE WAR.

Illinois furnished 308,240 men for the United States army and navy in the war with Germany. The state furnished 256,181 men for the federal army and navy during the civil war. Of this number probably 50,000 were re-enlistments, making the net number furnished in the civil war approximately 206,000 men, or 102,000 less than the state furnished in the war with Germany.

WIDTH OF TIRES REQUIRED IN CHICAGO.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TO CONGRESS (DEC. 2, 1919).

Owing to illness President Wilson was unable to appear before congress in person and the following message was therefore read to each house separately at noon on Dec. 2, 1919:

"To the Senate and House of Representatives:

"I sincerely regret that I cannot be present at the opening of this session of the congress. I am thus prevented from presenting in as direct a way as I could wish the many questions that are pressing for solution at this time. Happily, I have had the advantage of the advice of the heads of the several executive departments who have kept in close touch with affairs in their detail and whose thoughtful recommendations I earnestly second.

"In the matter of the railroads and the readjustment of their affairs growing out of federal control, I shall take the liberty at a later day of addressing you.

"I hope that congress will bring to a conclusion at this session legislation looking to the establishment of a budget system. That there should be one single authority responsible for the making of all appropriations and that appropriations should be made not independently of each other but with reference to one single comprehensive plan of expenditure properly related to the nation's income there can be no doubt. I believe the burden of preparing the budget must, in the nature of the case, if the work is to be properly done and responsibility concentrated instead of divided, rest upon the executive.

"The budget so prepared should be submitted to and approved or amended by a single committee of each house of congress, and no single appropriation should be made by the congress, except such as may have been included in the budget prepared by the executive or added by the particular committee of congress charged with the budget legislation.

"Another and not less important aspect of the problem is the ascertainment of the economy and efficiency with which the moneys appropriated are expended. Under existing law the only audit is for the purpose of ascertaining whether expenditures have been lawfully made within the appropriations. No one is authorized or equipped to ascertain whether the money has been spent wisely, economically and effectively.

"The auditors should be highly trained officials with permanent tenure in the treasury department, free of obligations to or motives of consideration for this or any subsequent administration and authorized and empowered to examine into and make report upon the methods employed and the results obtained by the executive departments of the government. Their reports should be made to the congress and to the secretary of the treasury.

TAXATION QUESTION.

"I trust that the congress will give its immediate consideration to the problem of future taxation. Simplification of the income and profits taxes has become an immediate necessity. These taxes performed indispensable service during the war. They must, however, be simplified, not only to save the taxpayer inconvenience and expense, but in order that his liability may be made certain and definite.

"With reference to the details of the revenue law, the secretary of the treasury and the commissioner of internal revenue will lay before you for your consideration certain amendments necessary or desirable in connection with the administration of the law—recommendations which have my approval and support.

"It is of the utmost importance that in dealing with this matter the present law should not be disturbed so far as regards taxes for the calendar year 1920, payable in the calendar year 1921. The congress might well consider whether the higher rates of income and profits taxes can in peace times be effectively productive of revenue and whether they may not, on the contrary, be destructive of business activity and productive of waste and inefficiency.

"There is a point at which in peace times high rates of income and profits taxes discourage energy, remove the incentive to new enterprise, encourage extravagant expenditures and produce industrial stagnation with consequent unemployment and other attendant evils.

"The problem is not an easy one. A fundamental change has taken place with reference to the position of America in the world's affairs. The prejudice and passions engendered by decades of controversy between two schools of political and economic thought—the one believers in protection of American industries, the other believers in tariff for revenue only—must be subordinated to the single consideration of the public interest in the light of utterly changed conditions.

"Before the war America was heavily the debtor of the rest of the world and the interest payments she had to make to foreign countries on American securities held abroad, the expenditures of American travelers abroad and the ocean freight charges she had to pay to others, about balanced the value of her prewar favorable balance of trade. During the war America's exports have been greatly stimulated, and increased prices have increased their value. On the other hand she has purchased a large proportion of the American securities previously held abroad, has loaned some $9,000,000,000 to foreign governments and has built her own ships.

"Our favorable balance of trade has thus been greatly increased and Europe has been deprived of the means of meeting it heretofore existing. Europe can have only three ways of meeting the favorable balance of trade in peace times: By imports into this country of gold or of goods, or by establishing new credits. Europe is in no position at the present time to ship gold to us nor could we contemplate large further imports of gold into this country without concern.

TIME FOR WORLD LOANS PASSED.

"The time has nearly passed for international governmental loans and it will take time to develop in this country a market for foreign securities. Anything, therefore, which would tend to prevent foreign countries from settling for our exports by shipments of goods into this country could only have the effect of preventing them from paying for our exports and therefore of preventing the exports from being made.

"The productivity of the country, greatly stimulated by the war, must find an outlet by exports to foreign countries and any measures taken to prevent imports will inevitably curtail exports, force curtailment of production, load the banking machinery of the country with credits to carry unsold products and produce industrial stagnation and unemployment.

"If we want to sell we must be prepared to buy. Whatever, therefore, may have been our views during the period of growth of American business concerning tariff legislation, we must now adjust our own economic life to a changed condition growing out of the fact that American business is full grown and that America is the greatest capitalist in the world.

"No policy of isolation will satisfy the growing needs and opportunities of America. The provincial standards and policies of the past, which have held American business as if in a strait-jacket, must yield and give way to the needs and exigencies of the new day in which we live, a day full of hope and promise for American business, if we will but take advantage of the opportunities that are ours for the asking.

"The recent war has ended our isolation and thrown upon us a great duty and responsibility. The United States must share the expanding world market. The United States desires for itself only equal opportunity with the other nations of the world, and that through the process of friendly co-operation and fair competition the legitimate interests of the nations concerned may be successfully and equitably adjusted.

"There are other matters of importance, upon which I urged action at the last session of congress, which are still pressing for solution. I am sure it is not necessary for me again to remind you that there is one immediate and very practicable question resulting from the war which we should meet in the most liberal spirit. It is a matter of recognition and relief to our soldiers. I can do no better than to quote from my last message urging this very action:

AID FOR RETURNING SOLDIERS.

"'We must see to it that our returning soldiers are assisted in every practicable way to find the places for which they are fitted in the daily work of the country. This can be done by developing and maintaining upon an adequate scale the admirable organization created by the department of labor for placing men seeking work; and it can also be done, in at least one very great field, by creating new opportunities for individual enterprise.

"'The secretary of the interior has pointed out the way by which returning soldiers may be helped to find and take up land in the hitherto undeveloped regions of the country which the federal government has already prepared or can readily prepare for cultivation and also on many of the cut-over or neglected areas which lie within the limits of the older states; and I once more take the liberty of recommending very urgently that his plans shall receive the immediate and substantial support of the congress.'

"In the matter of tariff legislation I beg to call your attention to the statements contained in my last message urging legislation with reference to the establishment of the chemical and dyestuffs industry in America:

"'Among the industries to which special consideration should be given is that of the manufacture of dyestuffs and related chemicals. Our complete dependence upon German supplies before the war made the interruption of trade a cause of exceptional economic disturbance. The close relation between the manufacture of dyestuffs, on the one hand, and of explosives and poisonous gases, on the other, moveover, has given the industry an exceptional significance and value.

"'Although the United States will gladly and unhesitatingly join in the program of international disarmament, it will, nevertheless, be a policy of obvious prudence to make certain of the successful maintenance of many strong and well equipped chemical plants. The German chemical industry, with which we will be brought into competition, was and may well be again a thoroughly knit monopoly capable of exercising a competition of a peculiarly insidious and dangerous kind.'

"During the war the farmer performed a vital and willing service to the nation. By materially increasing the production of his land, he supplied America and the allies with the increased amounts of food necessary to keep their immense armies in the field. He indispensably helped to win the war. But there is now scarcely less need of increasing the production in food and the necessaries of life. I ask the congress to consider means of encouraging effort along these lines.

"The importance of doing everything possible to promote production along economical lines, to improve marketing, and to make rural life more attractive and healthful, is obvious. I would urge approval of the plans already proposed to the congress by the secretary of agriculture, to secure the essential facts required for the proper study of this question, through the proposed enlarged programs for farm management studies and crop estimates.

NEED OF GOOD ROADS.

"I would urge, also, the continuance of federal participation in the building of good roads, under the terms of existing law and under the direction of present agencies; the need of further action on the part of the states and the federal government to preserve and develop our forest resources, especially through the practice of better forestry methods on private holdings and the extension of the publicly owned forests; better support for country schools and the more definite direction of their courses of study along lines related to rural problems; and fuller provision for sanitation in rural districts and the building up of needed hospital and medical facilities in these localities.

"Perhaps the way might be cleared for many of these desirable reforms by a fresh, comprehensive survey made of rural conditions by a conference composed of representatives of the farmers and of the agricultural agencies responsible for leadership.

POLITICAL UNREST.

"I would call your attention to the widespread condition of political restlessness in our body politic. The causes of this unrest, while various and complicated, are superficial rather than deep seated. Broadly, they arise from or are connected with the failure on the part of our government to arrive speedily at a just and permanent peace permitting return to normal conditions, from the transfusion of radical theories from seething European centers pending such delay, from heartless profiteering resulting in the increase of the cost of living, and, lastly, from the machinations of passionate and malevolent agitators. With the return to normal conditions, this unrest will rapidly disappear. In the meantime it does much evil.

"It seems to me that in dealing with this situation congress should not be impatient or drastic, but should seek, rather, to remove the causes. It should endeavor to bring our country back speedily to a peace basis, with ameliorated living conditions under the minimum of restrictions upon personal liberty that is consistent with our reconstruction problems. And it should arm the federal government with power to deal in its criminal courts with those persons who by violent methods would abrogate our time tested institutions.

"With the free expression of opinion and with the advocacy of orderly political change, however fundamental, there must be no interference, but toward passion and malevolence tending to incite crime and insurrection under guise of political evolution there should be no leniency. Legislation to this end has been recommended by the attorney-general and should be enacted. In this direct connection I would call your attention to my recommendations on Aug. 8, pointing out legislative measures which would be effective in controlling and bringing down the present cost of living, which contributes so largely to this unrest.

"On only one of these recommendations has the congress acted. If the government's campaign is to be effective it is necessary that the other steps suggested should be acted on at once.

SHOULD EXTEND FOOD CONTROL.

"I renew and strongly urge the necessity of the extension of the present food control act as to the period of time in which it shall remain in operation. The attorney-general has submitted a bill providing for an extension of this act for a period of six months. As it now stands it is limited in operation to the period of the war and becomes inoperative upon the formal proclamation of peace. It is imperative that it should be extended at once. The department of justice has built up extensive machinery for the purpose of enforcing its provisions, all of which must be abandoned upon the conclusion of peace unless the provisions of this act are extended.

"During this period the congress will have an opportunity to make similar permanent provisions and regulations with regard to all goods destined for interstate commerce and to exclude them from interstate shipment if the requirements of the law are not complied with. Some such regulation is imperatively necessary. The abuses that have grown up in the manipulation of prices by the withholding of foodstuffs and other necessaries of life cannot otherwise be effectively prevented. There can be no doubt of either the necessity or the legitimacy of such measures.

"As I pointed out in my last message, publicity can accomplish a great deal in this campaign. The aims of the government must be clearly brought to the attention of the consuming public, civic organizations and state officials who are in a position to lend their assistance to our efforts. You have made available funds with which to carry on this campaign, but there is no provision in the law authorizing their expenditure for the purpose of making the public fully informed about the efforts of the government. Specific recommendation has been made by the attorney-general in this regard. I would strongly urge upon you its immediate adoption, as it constitutes one of the preliminary steps to this campaign.

COLD STORAGE LAW URGED.

"I also renew my recommendation that the congress pass a law regulating cold storage as it is regulated, for example, by the laws of the state of New Jersey, which limit the time during which goods may be kept in storage, prescribe the method of disposing of them if kept beyond the permitted period and require that goods released from storage shall in all cases bear the date of their receipt. It would materially add to the serviceability of the law, for the purpose we now have in view, if it were also prescribed that all goods released from storage for interstate shipment should have plainly marked upon each package the selling or market price at which they went into storage. By this means the purchaser would always be able to learn what profits stood between him and the producer or the wholesale dealer.

"I would also renew my recommendation that all goods destined for interstate commerce should in every case where their form or package makes it possible be plainly marked with the price at which they left the hands of the producer.

"We should formulate a law requiring a federal license of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce and embodying in the license or in the conditions under which it is to be issued specific regulations designed to secure competitive selling and prevent unconscionable profits in the method of marketing. Such a law would afford a welcome opportunity to effect other much needed reforms in the business of interstate shipment and in the method of corporations which are engaged in it; but for the moment I confine my recommendations to the object immediately in hand, which is to lower the cost of living.

LABOR AND CAPITAL.

"No one who has observed the march of events in the last year can fail to note the absolute need of a definite program to bring about an improvement in the conditions of labor. There can be no settled conditions leading to increased production and a reduction in the cost of living if labor and capital are to be antagonists instead of partners.

"Sound thinking and an honest desire to serve the interests of the whole nation, as distinguished from the interests of a class, must be applied to the solution of this great and pressing problem. The failure of other nations to consider this matter in a vigorous way has produced bitterness and jealousies and antagonisms, the food of radicalism. The only way to keep men from agitating against grievances is to remove the grievances. An unwillingness even to discuss these matters produces only dissatisfaction and gives comfort to the extreme elements in our country, which endeavor to stir up disturbances in order to provoke governments to embark upon a course of retaliation and repression. The seed of revolution is repression.

"The remedy for these things must not be negative in character. It must be constructive. It must comprehend the general interest. The real antidote for the unrest which manifests itself is not suppression but a deep consideration of the wrongs that beset our national life and the application of a remedy.

"Congress has already shown its willingness to deal with these industrial wrongs by establishing the eight hour day as the standard in every field of labor. It has sought to find a way to prevent child labor. It has served the whole country by leading the way in developing the means of preserving and safeguarding lives and health in dangerous industries. It must now help in the difficult task of finding a method that will bring about a genuine democratization of industry, based upon the full recognition of the right of those who work, in whatever rank, to participate in some organic way in every decision which directly affects their welfare.

"It is with this purpose in mind that I called a conference to meet in Washington on Dec. 1, to consider these problems in all their broad aspects, with the idea of bringing about a better understanding between these two interests.

"The great unrest throughout the world, out of which has emerged a demand for an immediate consideration of the difficulties between capital and labor, bids us put our own house in order. Frankly, there can be no permanent and lasting settlements between capital and labor which do not recognize the fundamental concepts for which labor has been struggling through the years. The whole world gave its recognition and indorsement to these fundamental purposes in the league of nations.

"The statesmen gathered at Versailles recognized the fact that world stability could not be had by reverting to industrial standards and conditions against which the average workman of the world had revolted. It is, therefore, the task of the statesmen of this new day of change and readjustment to recognize world conditions and to seek to bring about, through legislation, conditions that will mean the ending of age-long antagonisms between capital and labor and that will hopefully lead to the building up of a comradeship which will result not only in greater contentment among the mass of workmen but also bring about a greater production and a greater prosperity to business itself.

"To analyze the particulars in the demands of labor is to admit the justice of their complaint in many matters that lie at their basis. The workman demands an adequate wage, sufficient to permit him to live in comfort, unhampered by the fear of poverty and want in his old age. He demands the right to live and the right to work amidst sanitary surroundings, both in home and in workshop, surroundings that develop and do not retard his own health and well-being; and the right to provide for his children's wants in the matter of health and education. In other words, it is his desire to make the conditions of his life and the lives of those dear to him tolerable and easy to bear.

WAY TO INDUSTRIAL PEACE.

"The establishment of the principles regarding labor laid down in the covenant of the league of nations offers us the way to industrial peace and conciliation. No other road lies open to us. Not to pursue this one is longer to invite enmities, bitterness and antagonisms which in the end only lead to industrial and social disaster. The unwilling workman is not a profitable servant. An employe whose industrial life is hedged about by hard and unjust conditions, which he did not create and over which he has no control, lacks that fine spirit of enthusiasm and volunteer effort which are the necessary ingredients of a great producing entity.

"Let us be frank about this solemn matter. The evidences of worldwide unrest which manifest themselves in violence throughout the world bid us pause and consider the means to be found to stop the spread of this contagious thing before it saps the very vitality of the nation itself. Do we gain strength by withholding the remedy? Is it not the business of statesmen to treat these manifestations of unrest which meet us on every hand as evidences of an economic disorder and to apply constructive remedies wherever necessary, being sure that in the application of the remedy we touch not the vital tissues of our industrial and economic life?

"There can be no recession of the tide of unrest until constructive instrumentalities are set up to stem that tide.

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING.

"Governments must recognize the right of men collectively to bargain for humane objects that have at their base the mutual protection and welfare of those engaged in all industries. Labor must not be longer treated as a commodity. It must be regarded as the activity of human beings possessed of deep yearnings and desires. The business man gives his best thought to the repair and replenishment of his machinery, so that its usefulness will not be impaired and its power to produce may always be at its height and kept in full vigor and motion.

"No less regard ought to be paid to the human machine, which, after all, propels the machinery of the world and is the great dynamic force that lies back of all industry and progress. Return to the old standards of wage and industry in employment is unthinkable. The terrible tragedy of war which has just ended and which has brought the world to the verge of chaos and disaster would be in vain if there should ensue a return to the conditions of the past.

"Europe itself, whence has come the unrest which now holds the world at bay, is an example of standpatism in these vital human matters which America might well accept as an example not to be followed but studiously to be avoided. Europe made labor the differential and the price of it all is enmity and antagonism and prostrated industry. The right of labor to live in peace and comfort must be recognized by governments and America should be the first to lay the foundation stones upon which industrial peace shall be built.

"Labor not only is entitled to an adequate wage, but capital should receive a reasonable return upon its investment and is entitled to protection at the hands of the government in every emergency. No government worthy of the name can play these elements against each other, for there is a mutuality of interest between them which the government must seek to express and to safeguard at all cost.

"The right of individuals to strike is inviolate and ought not to be interfered with by any process of government, but there is a predominant right and that is the right of the government to protect all of its people and to assert its power and majesty against the challenge of any class. The government, when it asserts that right, seeks not to antagonize a class but simply to defend the right of the whole people as against the irreparable harm and injury that might be done by the attempt by any class to usurp a power that only government itself has a right to exercise as a protection to all.

"In the matter of international disputes which have led to war, statesmen have sought to set up as a remedy arbitration for war. Does this not point the way for the settlement of industrial disputes, by the establishment of a tribunal, fair and just alike to all, which will settle industrial disputes which in the past have led to war and disaster?

"America, witnessing the evil consequences which have followed out of such disputes between the contending forces, must not admit itself impotent to deal with these matters by means of peaceful processes. Surely there must be some method of bringing together in a council of peace and amity these two great interests, out of which will come a happier day of peace and co-operation, a day that will make for more comfort and happiness in living and a more tolerable condition among all classes of men. Certainly human intelligence can devise some acceptable tribunal for adjusting the differences between capital and labor.

HOUR OF TEST AND TRIAL.

"This is the hour of test and trial for America. By her prowess and strength and the indomitable courage of her soldiers, she demonstrated her power to vindicate on foreign battlefields her conception of liberty and justice. Let not her influence as a mediator between capital and labor be weakened and her own failure to settle matters of purely domestic concern be proclaimed to the world.

"There are those in this country who threaten direct action to force their will upon a majority. Russia to-day, with its blood and terror, is a painful object lesson of the power of minorities. It makes little difference what minority it is; whether capital or labor, or any other class; no sort of privilege will ever be permitted to dominate this country. We are a partnership or nothing that is worth while.

"We are a democracy, where the majority are the masters, or all the hopes and purposes of the men who founded this government have been defeated and forgotten. In America there is but one way by which great reforms can be accomplished and the relief sought by classes obtained, and that is through the orderly processes of representative government. Those who would propose any other method of reform are enemies of this country.

"America will not be daunted by threats nor lose her composure or calmness in these distressing times. We can afford, in the midst of this day of passion and unrest, to be self-contained and sure. The instrument of all reform in America is the straight road of justice to all classes and conditions of men. Men have but to follow this road to realize the full fruition of their objects and purposes. Let those beware who would take the shorter road of disorder and revolution. The right road is the road of justice and orderly process.

ANARCHISTIC BOMB PLOTS IN THE UNITED STATES.

In the latter part of April, 1919, some thirty-six dynamite bombs were mailed in New York city to as many different persons in various parts of the United States. Six of them reached their destinations, the remainder being discovered and held in the New York city postoffice and in postoffices on the Pacific coast. It was clearly the intention of the sender or senders to cause death or injury to persons who had made themselves obnoxious to the Industrial Workers of the World and organizations of communists and anarchists. However, only two persons, the wife of ex-Senator Thomas W. Hardwick of Georgia and her maid, were injured. Among the persons to whom bombs were delivered or addressed were the following: Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, Chicago; District Attorney Charles M. Fickert and his assistant, Edward Cuchna, San Francisco; Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer, Immigration Commissioner Anthony Caminetti, Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson and Postmaster-General A. S. Burleson, Washington, D. C.; Mayor Ole Hanson, Seattle, Wash.; Mayor John F. Hylan of New York city and Gov. William C. Sproul of Pennsylvania.

The bombs were timed to explode either just before or on May 1 and create a reign of terror.

Late on the evening of June 2, 1919, bombs were exploded simultaneously in widely separated sections of the country for the purpose of killing law enforcement officials. In Washington, D. C., the house occupied by A. Mitchell Palmer, attorney-general of the United States, was partly wrecked. The bomb thrower himself was killed and possibly an accomplice, the remains being so thoroughly shattered by the explosion that the police could not tell whether they belonged to one or two persons. In New York city an attempt to blow up the home of Judge Charles C. Nott, Jr., of the Court of General Sessions resulted in the death of at least one person and possibly of three. Other explosions occurred in Boston, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Paterson, N. J., and Newtonville, Mass. The persons aimed at escaped injury in all cases. In front of Attorney-General Palmer's residence were found leaflets signed by "The Anarchistic Fighters," which advocated social revolution. The circulars were printed in Chicago and in October a number of "reds" were arrested in Gary, Ind., who were thought to have been implicated in the bomb plot. Arrests were also made in Cleveland, O.

Early in November, 1919, the federal authorities in Washington claimed to have discovered plans by the "Union of Russian Workers" to overthrow the government by means of a general strike and violence of all kinds. Between 500 and 600 arrests of alleged "reds" were made in the Chicago and New York areas and elsewhere and it was announced that many of the persons in custody would be deported.

A. C. TOWNLEY AND JOSEPH GILBERT CONVICTED.

A. C. Townley, president of the National Nonpartisan league, and Joseph Gilbert, former organization manager of the same association, were placed on trial before Judge E. M. Dean at Jackson, Minn., June 25, 1919, on the charge of conspiracy to teach disloyalty in violation of the state espionage act. On July 12 the jury in the case brought in a verdict finding both guilty. Judge Dean granted a stay until Sept. 12, when each defendant was sentenced to serve ninety days in the county jail. Another stay of sixty days was granted to allow the convicted men to move for a new trial.

Townley and Gilbert were tried for having made speeches and distributed literature in Jackson county and other parts of Minnesota, both before and after the United States entered the war against Germany, tending, it was alleged, to discourage enlistments and co-operation in other war measures. The defense claimed that the speeches, which were made at mass meetings in Minnesota early in 1918, were not disloyal in their references to the government and the prosecution of the war.

STORM AND TIDAL WAVE AT CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX.

Heavy loss of life and property was caused by a storm and tidal wave which swept over Corpus Christi, Tex., and near by places on Sunday, Sept. 14, 1919. The exact number of persons who lost their lives was not ascertained, but it was believed by investigators that it was approximately 500, while the property loss was placed at $25,000,000. Corpus Christi alone suffered a loss of $20,000,000. Deaths were reported at Corpus Christi, Sinton, Portland, White Point, Rosita, Port Aransas, Aransas Pass and Rockport, all in Texas.

UNITED STATES RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION.

WALKER D. HINES MADE DIRECTOR-GENERAL.

Walker D. Hines was appointed director-general of railroads by President Wilson on Jan. 10, 1919, to succeed William G. McAdoo, resigned. The former secretary of the treasury and director-general of railroads, who was in Los Angeles, Cal., announced the appointment of Mr. Hines in the following statement:

"The president has authorized me to announce the appointment of Walker D. Hines as director-general of railroads. He will enter upon his duty of office immediately. Mr. Hines has been my assistant at Washington since the beginning of government control, and has a thorough knowledge of organization and administration of the railroads under federal control as well as of the fundamental problem involved in the railroad situation. His ability and experience admirably fit him for the great trust and responsibility with which the president has honored him. Aside from his obvious qualifications Mr. Hines is in full sympathy with the policies which have guided the railroad administration and with the views of the president on the railroad question. I am sure that Mr. Hines will have the hearty support of the fine army of railroad officers and employes, and I can ask nothing better for him than that they shall give him and the country the same loyal and effective service they rendered during my term as director-general."

Mr. Hines issued the following statement to the public on the same day:

"From the first day of government control of the railroads I have been a part of Mr. McAdoo's administration, and it will be my purpose as director-general to carry forward the policies he has so ably put into effect—fidelity to the public interest, a square deal for labor, with not only an ungrudging but a sincere and cordial recognition of its partnership in the railroad enterprise, and fair treatment for the owners of railroad property and for those with whom the railroads have business dealings.

"Until the signing of the armistice the government's first railroad duty was to run the railroads to win the war, but now that the war is won, the government's railroad job is to render an adequate and convenient transportation service at reasonable cost. There can be no greater civil triumph in time of peace than the performance of a successful transportation service for the 100,000,000 consumers, producers and travelers in this country. To participate in the achievement of this great object I invite all the railroad officers and employes with whom I have had the great privilege of co-operating in their splendid war work.

"I am a profound believer in the virtue of mutual understanding. Most disputes come from the failure to understand the other fellow's legitimate needs and his legitimate difficulties. I shall do my best to understand the points of view of all the interests affected by the conduct of the railroads or charged with duties on the subject, and I shall also try, frankly and as clearly as I can, to get all those interests to understand the government's needs and the government's difficulties in conducting the railroad transportation service. I ask of all that they will meet me half way in this great work of trying to understand."

TAX-FREE VS. TAXABLE BONDS.

[Compiled and Copyrighted 1919, by The Bond Buyer of New York.]

A Tabulation Comparing Income from Tax-Free and Taxable Securities Under Federal Income Tax Rates Affecting 1919 Income.

The income from certain United States government and all municipal bonds is exempt from the federal income tax. Under the income tax law affecting 1919 income, taxable bonds are subject to taxes ranging from 4% to 73%, according to the amount of income. This table has been compiled to show the yield which taxable bonds must return to equal the return from tax-free bonds yielding from 3½% to 7%. Example: Individual with income of $50,000 purchases a taxable bond to yield 6.52%. His tax on 1919 income from this bond is at rate of 31% (normal tax, 8%, plus surtax on income between $48,000 and $50,000, 23%), leaving actual income of 4½%. Rates of interest given at top of columns represent yield from tax-free bonds. The equivalent yields from taxable bonds are given below for various amounts of income. While it is believed that the figures in the table are correct, their accuracy is not guaranteed.

UNITED STATES PASSPORT REGULATIONS.

Passports are issued to citizens of the United States upon application to the state department in Washington. The application must be accompanied by an affidavit, attested by a notary public or other officer empowered to administer oaths, stating that the applicant is a citizen and giving the place of birth and age, and it must be accompanied by the certificate of one other citizen to whom he is personally known that the declaration made by the applicant is true. The application must also be accompanied by a description of the person, particularly as to age, height, complexion, forehead, eyes, nose, mouth, chin, hair and face. Blank forms are furnished by the state department upon application. The fee for each passport is $1. Citizens traveling abroad may also in some cases obtain passports by applying to United States ambassadors and ministers. Where any person has made a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States and has resided in the United States for three years a passport valid for six months may be issued to him.

Owing to the war the state department was obliged in June, 1917, and September, 1918, to make stricter regulations governing the issue of passports. Applicants for passports were required to send in their applications so long in advance as to permit them to be held in the department one week, if deemed necessary, for examination.

KING ALBERT IN THE UNITED STATES.

Albert, king of the Belgians, Queen Elizabeth and Crown Prince Leopold, the first reigning monarchs to set foot on American soil, arrived in New York city Oct. 2, 1919, and after a tour of the country extending as far as the Pacific coast sailed from Newport News, Va., on Oct. 31. The illness of President Wilson marred the visit somewhat and prevented carrying out in full the program which had been arranged. However, the welcome of King Albert was cordial at all the places where he stopped. On his arrival in New York city he was welcomed by Vice-President Marshall and other representatives of the government.

The tour of the royal party included a trip to Boston Oct. 5, a visit to Niagara Falls Oct. 6; Moline, Ill., and Davenport, Iowa, Oct. 7; St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 8; Spokane, Wash., Portland, Ore., and San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 10 to 14; Yosemite valley, Oct. 15; Los Angeles, Oct. 16; the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, Arizona, Oct. 17; Albuquerque, N. M., Kansas City, Mo., Omaha, Neb., and St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 18 to 21; Springfield, Ill., Cincinnati, O., Pittsburgh, Pa., South Bethlehem, Pa., and Washington, D. C., Oct. 21 to Oct. 31.

Though King Albert was officially invited to make a stop in Chicago the state department routed him around and not through the city both on his way west and on his return to the east.

In Springfield, Ill., on Oct. 21, the king laid a wreath on the tomb of Lincoln. At Oyster Bay, L. I., Oct. 26, he paid a similar honor to the tomb of Roosevelt. Before leaving Washington King Albert and Queen Elizabeth made a brief visit to the white house, where they were received by President Wilson in his sick room. During their brief stay in the capital they were the guests of Vice-President Marshall.

One of the notable incidents of King Albert's stay in Washington was his appearance before the senate and the house of representatives in the capitol on Oct. 28. He was received in the senate in the presence of the chief justice and associate justices of the Supreme court, members of the cabinet and the senators. King Albert and the crown prince were escorted into the chamber by a committee of the senate. The visitors were seated at the right of the vice-president's chair. President Pro Tempore Albert B. Cummins delivered an eloquent address, concluding with the words:

"Of all the men of Europe, Asia, Africa or the seas there lives no man more heartily welcome to the senate of the United States than the man who sits at my side. Senators, I present to you our friend, our defender and our ally, Albert, king of the Belgians."

In response King Albert, who was received with prolonged applause, said:

"Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Senate: It is indeed a great honor for me to address this illustrious assembly.

"I salute not only the eminent men who receive me here to-day, but I salute the memory of your great predecessors who, during 130 years, have sat in this place and given to the whole world the example of the highest civic virtues.

"From the bottom of my heart I thank your president for the beautiful and far too laudatory words that he has addressed to me. It has been a great pleasure for us to be in America, and our one regret is, and it is a deep regret, that your illustrious president is ill. We express the earnest wish that he may soon be restored to full health and vigor.

"This welcome of the senate seals that reception, so warm and so spontaneous, which I have received everywhere during my journey across this magnificent country.

"I am deeply moved by the expressions of sympathy that the name of Belgium evokes from this noble American people.

"Nothing could better characterize the reign of universal democracy than that friendship which unites the great republic, with its 110,000,000 citizens, and the realm of which I am the constitutional head, with its seven million and a half inhabitants.

"If there is not equality of power and riches between them, there is equality in the love of liberty and in aspiration toward social progress. [Applause.]

"On both sides of the Atlantic the same ideal inspires us. The exchange of ideas, the commercial relations, the visits to Belgium of eminent American citizens, of whom many sit in this assembly, are so many means of tightening the bonds between the two nations.

"I hope with all my heart that these relations, which go back as far as memory, which have been fortified during the war as well as by the admirable assistance which you rendered Belgium by feeding her people and by the fraternity in arms, will never cease to develop for the great good of our two peoples."

In the house of representatives King Albert was welcomed by Speaker Frederick H. Gillett, who said:

"Your Majesty, Gentlemen of the House of Representatives: This is the first time that this chamber has been visited by a reigning monarch, and I am sure we are all glad that our guest is the one to establish this new precedent. His royalty has been overshadowed by his heroism. Every nation has developed its hero in this war; indeed, every nation has developed innumerable heroes; but I think there is universal agreement that there has come out of the war one surpassing figure who has won the supreme admiration and sympathy of the whole world by his heroic bearing, the most manly of kings and the most kingly of men, his majesty the king of the Belgians."

Replying, King Albert said:

"Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen: I am profoundly grateful to the speaker of the house for his eloquent words of welcome.

"I am happy to be able to bear to this chamber, which embodies the living spirit of the American people, the greetings of Belgium, a democratic and parliamentarian state, created by the vote of the popular assembly of 1830, which proclaimed the independence of our provinces.

"It is a pleasure to recall that many of the provisions of our constitution were taken from your fundamental law, so that at the outset of her career Belgium was indebted to you.

"Our two peoples have fought and triumphed together. The intervention of the American army was the decisive factor in determining the victory.

"I pay my respectful and sincere homage to the officers, the soldiers and sailors who fell for a great cause on the battle fields of Europe and in the defense of the seas.

"The hearts of Belgians, whom these heroes helped to liberate from the domination of the enemy, go out in profound gratitude to the wounded.

"In their name I address to the wounded of the great war the assurance of our affection and sympathy.

"I express the gratitude of Belgium to those distinguished American citizens who gave themselves with such a rare spirit of sacrifice to the task of lightening the sufferings of the Belgian people.

"In this noble assembly I solemnly thank the members of the commission for relief and the innumerable committees that helped it in its admirable efforts.

"I salute in particular the names, graven forever in our memories, of Herbert Hoover and Brand Whitlock.

"May this splendid American nation, so richly endowed by nature, so magnificently served by its people, pursue in the serenity of its power its work of achievement, of culture and of progress."

The journey both from and to Europe was made on the transport George Washington, which was placed at the king's disposal by the American government.

CARDINAL MERCIER IN AMERICA.

Cardinal Desideratus Mercier of Belgium, who won worldwide recognition for his courage and devotion to duty during the war, visited the United States in 1919, arriving early in September and departing Nov. 1. In New York, Chicago and all the large cities at which he stopped he was given a hearty and spontaneous welcome. Large sums of money were collected and turned over to him as a fund with which to further the work of educational reconstruction in Belgium. The cardinal was in Chicago Oct. 21, 22 and 23.

MEXICO AND THE UNITED STATES.

Mexico continued in a disturbed state throughout 1919 and the relations of the republic with the United States remained more or less strained. The authorities south of the Rio Grande were either unable or unwilling to protect Americans or American property from Villa and other bandits. In addition President Carranza maintained an attitude toward the United States which could not be described as cordial. In March concessions were granted to Japanese colonists in Lower California, though it was known that this would be regarded as an unfriendly act.

In Vera Cruz, April 22, Gen. Francisco Alvarez, an opponent of the government, was executed by a firing squad. About the same time Villa fought his way into Parral and looted the town.

In May the conditions across the border were so disquieting that 18,500 American soldiers, with a number of aviation units, were stationed along the frontier for possible emergencies. The forces under Gen. Felipe Angeles and Francisco Villa were having things much their own way in the northwestern part of Mexico.

Early on the morning of June 15 Villa forces began an attack on Juarez on the American border and in the evening American cavalry and infantry forces commanded by Col. Selah R. H. Tompkins and Col. G. Arthur Hadsell crossed the international bridge and intervened as shots fired by the rebels were falling in El Paso. Some sharp fighting ensued in which two Americans were killed and seven wounded. President Carranza as usual protested at the "invasion," which ended as soon as the Villa forces had been driven far from the vicinity of Juarez. The chase ended on Aug. 24, when the American cavalry returned to El Paso.

The American government on Aug. 14 made it known that a strong protest had been made in July against the failure of Mexico to prevent the murder of American citizens. It was also intimated that Henry L. Fletcher, American ambassador to Mexico, would not return to that country until something was done to improve the situation.

In response to a request from the United States senate Secretary of State Lansing reported that up to Aug. 1, 1919, 217 American citizens had been killed in Mexico since the end of the Diaz regime May 25, 1911, and that 942 claims for damages had been filed by American citizens. No sums had been specified in 153 of the claims, but the total in the remainder was $26,629,597.

On Aug. 17 it became known that Lieut. Harold G. Peterson and Lieut. Paul H. Davis, aviators, had been captured a week earlier by Mexican bandits near Candelaria, Tex., and were being held for ransom, word having been sent across the border that unless $18,000 was paid before Aug. 18 the men would be killed. Their release was demanded at once, though arrangements were also made to pay the ransom asked. The men were reached and after $8,500 had been paid to the bandits were brought back in safety to Texas. The incident caused considerable excitement for a time and troops were again sent across the border on a vain hunt for the bandits. President Carranza once more protested against the presence of American forces in Mexico and there the matter ended for the time being.

The next incident to cause international irritation was the capture on Oct. 19 of W. O. Jenkins, United States consular agent at Puebla, by bandits who held him for $150,000 ransom. His release was purchased Oct. 26 and then the Mexican government arrested and imprisoned him on the charge of collusion with the bandits. On Nov. 20 Mexico was warned that unless he was released the relations between Mexico and the United States would be seriously affected and that for this the Mexican government would have to assume the sole responsibility.

METHODIST CENTENARY EXPOSITION.

The centenary celebration or Methodist missionary exposition was held on the Ohio state fair grounds at Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13, 1919. There were 17,000 participants and employes and the attendance was approximately 1,000,000. More than 150,000 automobiles, representing at least thirty-four states, passed through the gates during the three weeks. The fundamental idea back of the exposition was to bring to the people of the Christian churches of America a first hand knowledge of actual missionary work. It was an attempt to reproduce actual conditions which exist in other less known parts of our country and of the world. It was also an attempt to tell how the other half lives, and especially to show what was being done by Christian missionaries to alleviate the human suffering and to bring the munificent influence of the gospel to bear upon the peoples of the world.

The centenary celebration was an intruder in the exposition world, upsetting all notions as to what the people seemed to demand at a fair or exposition. Old theories were exploded and its success astonished fair officials everywhere. That an exposition without horse races, midway dances, stock shows and commercial displays could attract 1,000,000 admissions through the gates in three weeks was unbelievable. It was done.

Six hundred thousand square feet of exhibits were of life and conditions of people. In the thirty-eight auditoriums on the grounds there were several thousand speakers, musicians and entertainers. There were 53,000 meetings and demonstrations held attended by 2,455,000. Among the prominent speakers were Former President William H. Taft, Col. W. J. Bryan, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Former Secretary McAdoo, Dr. S. D. Chown of Canada, Miss Margaret Bondfield and Chaplain Tiplady of England, Major Dupont, French commissioner, Commander A. C. Read of the N-C 4 and Sergt. A. C. York of Tennessee. A religious pageant known as "The Wayfarer" drew a capacity house in the Coliseum every night, and thousands of people were unable to gain admission, so great was the demand for tickets.

The exposition was put on by a joint commission representing the Methodist Episcopal church and the Methodist Episccpal Church South. Dr. W. W. Pinson of Nashville was the chairman of the commission and Dr. S. Earl Taylor of New York director-general. The associate directors-general were Dr. W. B. Beauchamp of Norfolk, Va., Dr. J. E. Crowther of Seattle and Dr. F. B. Fisher of New York.

RESIGNATION OF ATTORNEY-GENERAL GREGORY.

Thomas Watt Gregory, attorney-general of the United States since 1914, resigned Jan. 9, 1919, and went out of office on March 4 following. His letter of resignation and the president's reply were made public at the white house, Washington, Jan. 12. Mr. Gregory's letter read:

"Dear Mr. President: In accordance with the purpose expressed in our conversation just before you went abroad I tender my resignation as attorney-general.

"Pecuniary responsibilities of a substantial nature rest upon me and my private affairs have long demanded attention. During the continuance of actual warfare I did not feel at liberty to weigh these personal considerations in the balance against the public duties with which I was charged."

In reply President Wilson cabled from Paris, France:

"My Dear Mr. Attorney-General: It is with profound reluctance and regret that I accept your resignation. I do so only because you have convinced me that it is necessary in your own interest for you to retire. There has been no one with whom I have been associated in Washington whom I have learned more to trust nor to whose counsels I have attached more value and importance."

Mr. Gregory was succeeded by A. Mitchell Palmer, who during the war served as alien property custodian.

WORK OF UNITED STATES CENSUS BUREAU.

The bureau of the census in the department of commerce in Washington, D. C., is charged with the duty of taking periodical censuses of the population, agriculture, manufactures and mines and quarries of the United States, together with such special statistics as are required by congress from time to time. The next general or decennial census will be taken in 1920. A census of electrical industries is taken every fifth year; the last one was taken in 1918, for the statistics of 1917. Other regular censuses include:

Wealth, debt and taxation; taken every tenth year; latest statistics are for fiscal year ending June 30, 1913.

Manufacturing industries; taken every fifth year; last report related to calendar year 1914.

Agriculture; taken at ten year intervals; last census was taken late in fall of 1915 and related to the crops of that year.

Religious bodies; taken every tenth year; last census was taken in 1916.

Water transportation on coast and inland waters of the United States; taken every tenth year; last census covered the year 1916.

The annual reports issued by the bureau include mortality and birth statistics; financial statistics of cities with a population of 30,000 or more; statistics relating to cotton production and consumption and statistics showing the amount of tobacco of various kinds on hand on April 1 and Oct. 1 of each year.

THE GENERAL EDUCATION BOARD.

The General Education board was organized in New York Feb. 27, 1902, and incorporated by an act of congress signed Jan. 12, 1903. The purposes of the board are to promote education in the United States, without distinction as to race, sex or creed, and especially to promote, systematize and make effective various forms of educational beneficence. The principal of the funds held by the board on May 1, 1918, was $41,874,094, of which $7,240,728 represented income invested. The total of all appropriations made by the board from the date of its organization to May 1, 1918, was $22,980,223.

The following are officers of the board: Wallace Buttrick, president; Abraham Flexner, secretary; E. C. Sage, assistant secretary; L. G. Myers, treasurer; L. M. Dashiell, assistant treasurer.

The following are members of the board: Frederick T. Gates, Walter H. Page, J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Albert Shaw, Wallace Buttrick, Starr J. Murphy, Edwin A. Alderman, Harry Pratt Judson, Wickliffe Rose, Jerome D. Greene, Anson Phelps Stokes, Abraham Flexner, George E. Vincent, James H. Dillard, Frank E. Spaulding.

LADY ASTOR IN BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

Lady Astor, wife of Maj. Waldorf Astor, was elected a member of parliament for the Sutton constituency in Plymouth, England, Nov. 15, 1919, by a vote of 14,495 as against 9,292 for William Gay, laborite, and 4,139 for Isaac Foot, liberal. Her husband, on the death of his father, Viscount William Waldorf Astor, on Oct. 18, succeeded to his title and membership in the house of lords. As Maj. Astor was member of parliament for the Sutton district in Plymouth this left a vacancy to be filled by a special or by-election. His wife, who before her marriage was Nancy Langhorne of Virginia, announced her intention of seeking election to the vacant seat as the conservative candidate. The campaign was a spirited one on her part and it resulted as already announced.

Countess or Mme. Markievicz of Dublin was the first woman to be elected to the British parliament. She was chosen at the general elections in December, 1918, to represent St. Patrick's constituency, Dublin, but with the other Irish Sinn Fein members refused to go to Westminster. Lady Astor therefore is the first woman actually to occupy a seat in the British house of commons.

MUSIC IN CHICAGO.

CHICAGO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Founded by Theodore Thomas.

The Theodore Thomas orchestra was organized in Chicago in 1890-1891 by a number of men interested in promoting the highest class of instrumental music. The Orchestral association was incorporated Dec. 16, 1890, and Theodore Thomas, famous for many years as a conductor, was engaged to lead the new organization, which was then named the Chicago orchestra. The preparations were completed in 1891 and the first public rehearsal was given at the Auditorium Friday afternoon, Oct. 16, of that year. Financially the result of the first season was discouraging, the fifty or more gentlemen guaranteeing the expenses being compelled to meet a deficit of about $53,000. Receipts, however, continued to increase from year to year until the orchestra was finally placed on a permanent basis. This was accomplished when Orchestra hall, erected by subscriptions from more than 8,000 persons, was completed at 220 South Michigan avenue, and the organization was provided with a home of its own. The first concert there was given Wednesday evening, Dec. 14, 1904. Theodore Thomas died Jan. 4, 1905, and the orchestra, which until then had been called the Chicago orchestra, was named the Theodore Thomas orchestra. Feb. 24, 1913, the title was changed to the Chicago Symphony orchestra (founded by Theodore Thomas). Frederick Stock, after the death of Mr. Thomas, was made conductor, a position he held until Oct. 2, 1918, when he withdrew until he could acquire citizenship in the United States. His place was taken by Eric De Lamarter. Mr. Stock resumed the position of conductor, in May, 1919. The plan of giving two performances a week—a public rehearsal on Friday afternoon and a concert on Saturday evening—has been followed from the beginning. The season consists of twenty-eight weeks, beginning in October and ending in April.

The first officers of the Orchestral association were: N. K. Fairbank, president; C. Norman Fay, vice-president; P. A. McEwan, treasurer and secretary; Milward Adams, manager.

CHICAGO OPERA ASSOCIATION.

The Chicago Opera association, known until 1915 as the Chicago Grand Opera company, was established in 1910 by a number of citizens of Chicago and New York, who organized with a capital of $500,000, of which $300,000 was subscribed in Chicago and the remainder in the east. The Auditorium was leased, important alterations were made and the first performance by the new company was given there in November, 1910. Since then a season of opera has been given at the same place each year in the months of November, December and January. The ninth season began Nov. 18, 1919.

LABOR TROUBLES IN 1919.

Industrial unrest prevailed in most countries of the world throughout the whole of 1919 to an extent not previously known. There were many causes for this state of affairs, but the main ones were these: The general dislocation of industry, finance and business by the world war resulting in many inequalities in wages and conditions of work; the high cost of living due to decreased production and increased wages; agitation by communists and other radical elements and the spread of ideas aiming to overthrow the existing economic and political systems and the elevation to power of the proletariat.

It is impossible in the space available to give more than a bare outline of a few of the more serious labor difficulties in the United States or to make more than a mere mention of similar troubles in other lands. At the very beginning of the year railroad and other strikes were in progress in Argentina, Peru and Chile. It was reported from Buenos Aires alone that 800 persons had been killed and 5,000 injured in labor riots.

On Jan. 21 a strike of shipyard workers in Seattle, Wash., and vicinity led to a sympathetic strike involving 55,000 workers and causing the business life of the city and of Tacoma as well to come almost to a standstill. It was in connection with this strike that Ole Hanson, then mayor of Seattle, issued a proclamation that made him famous. On Feb. 7 he told the people that the time had come for every person in the city to show his Americanism. "The agitators in this community," he said, "shall not rule its affairs." On the following day he issued a statement which was also widely quoted. "This," he said, "is a test of unionism or I. W. W.-ism. If there are those who owe higher allegiance to any organization than they do to this country, they are traitors and should be treated as such. That is all there is to it. This is a time for union men to stand up and be counted. This is a time when every American must forget all other allegiances and stand by the government."

In February and March Britain faced strikes or threats of strikes by the railroad, mine and transport workers. Earnest efforts by the government were to some extent successful in preventing a serious industrial disaster at this time and also during the following months, though strikes were numerous enough in various parts of England, Scotland and Ireland.

WINNIPEG STRIKE.

Winnipeg, Man., in May and June was the scene of a determined strike in which all of the local unions were involved and in which much bitterness of feeling developed. The business of the city was paralyzed for a month or more and order was maintained and the public utilities kept going only by the municipal authorities swearing in a large number of returned soldiers. The general strike was called off June 26, when it was agreed to leave terms of settlement of the original strike to a government commission.

On June 11 a strike of all the members of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America was called by S. J. Konenkamp, the international president, and a few operators in Omaha and other cities went out. The order was generally disregarded and the strike ended quickly.

LONDON POLICEMEN OUT.

On Aug. 1 London's police force of 20,000 men went out on a strike against a proposed law prohibiting policemen from affiliating with labor unions or striking under any circumstances. The men were placated and soon returned to work.

RAILROAD STRIKES.

Railroad shopmen in the Chicago district and some other points went on a strike July 30 without the sanction of their own officials for an increase in wages to 85 cents an hour. The operations of several of the western lines were handicapped for a time and the number of trains had to be materially reduced. The situation was getting critical when President Wilson on Aug. 7 notified Director-General Hines of the railway administration to inform the shopmen that until they again recognized the authority of their own organization and returned to work the whole matter must be at a standstill. A vote was taken on Aug. 14 and on Aug. 16 the men returned to work.

In the latter part of July the four principal brotherhoods of railroad employes pressed demands for higher wages upon the railroad administration. They also urged that the railroads be turned over to them for operation. President Wilson on Aug. 1 asked congress to defer its proposed recess and initiate legislation to avert a series of strikes by the railroad employes. He suggested through Director-General Hines that a commission be created adequately representing both the public and labor to pass on railroad wage problems. The railroad unions on Aug. 6 expressed their disapproval of this suggestion. They demanded the enactment of legislation in conformity with a plan put forward by Glenn E. Plumb, a Chicago attorney. In substance this provided that the government purchase the railroads and turn them over at a nominal rental to a body called the National Railways Operating corporation to manage the properties through a board of fifteen directors, five representing the classified employes, five the official employes and five the general public, to be appointed by the president of the United States. Hearings were had and attempts were made to frame a measure to meet the situation, but without success.

Railroad employes in England, under the leadership of James Henry Thomas, began a strike Sept. 27 for higher wages. It was precipitated somewhat suddenly, although negotiations had been going on for some time with the government, and the public was put to great inconvenience and loss. Trucks, automobiles and horse drawn vehicles were used extensively and were able to meet the most pressing demands for food and fuel for the time being. The strike lacked popular sympathy and it resulted in a virtual defeat for the men, although the government consented to continue the existing rate of pay for a year and to negotiate for a new wage scale.

Traffic on the railroad lines in southern California was tied up in the latter part of August by trainmen who acted without the authority of their own officials. The men returned to work after stern admonition from the railroad men and union chiefs that any other course would be a grave mistake.

ACTORS QUIT WORK.

On Aug. 7 many of the theaters in New York city were closed by a strike of the actors and on Aug. 12 a similar state of affairs developed in Chicago. The strike was called by the Actors' Equity association and was directed by Francis Wilson, president of the organization. The main reason for the walkout seemed to be the refusal of the Producing Managers' association to recognize the Equity association. For a time there was a tangle which dimmed the footlights in many cities and resulted in suits and threats of suits for heavy damages. Heavy losses were sustained both by the managers and actors and finally a compromise was reached and the strike was called off on Sept. 6. Augustus Thomas, the playwright, acted as intermediary, with the result that the actors agreed to the "open shop" principle and all the other differences were adjusted. Some 200 theaters were closed nearly four weeks by the strike.

In New York city the employes of the Interborough company's elevated and subway system struck for an increase of 50 per cent in their wages and tied up the lines Aug. 16 and 17. On the 18th the men accepted an increase of 25 per cent and returned to work. The car lines in Louisville, Ky., were tied up temporarily by a strike on Aug. 19.

Three companies of soldiers were sent to Cudahy, Wis., Aug. 19, to quell rioting at the Cudahy Packing company's plant. In the disturbance one man was killed and a score were injured.

BOSTON POLICE STRIKE.

Members of the Boston police force went on strike Sept. 9 because the police department had issued an order prohibiting the formation of a police union and affiliation with the American Federation of Labor and because nineteen policemen had been suspended for violating the order. Just as soon as the policemen quit work rioting and looting began. It was estimated that within twenty-four hours there was a property loss of $300,000. A few of the police remained loyal, but about 1,500 deserted their posts. Efforts were made to secure protection by organizing a volunteer force and employing the metropolitan park police, but it soon became necessary to call out the entire state guard of Massachusetts and to hold federal troops in reserve. Collisions between the troops and mobs took place and a number of persons were killed.

Mayor A. J. Peters and Gov. Calvin Coolidge took a firm stand against making any compromise with the strikers, whose action was generally condemned. On Sept. 11 in Helena, Mont., President Wilson said: "I want to say this, that a strike of the policemen of a great city, leaving the city at the mercy of an army of thugs, is a crime against civilization. In my judgment the obligation of a policeman is as sacred and direct as the obligation of a soldier. He is a public servant, not a private employe, and the whole honor of the community is in his hands."

No concessions were made to the strikers, whose places were gradually filled with new men. In the campaign for the governorship of Massachusetts in which Calvin Coolidge sought re-election the maintenance of law and order was made the chief issue by him and on Nov. 4 he won by a most decisive majority over his democratic opponent, who took the side of the policemen.

STANDARD STEEL CAR STRIKE.

On July 18 3,000 men employed at the plant of the Standard Steel company at Hammond, Ind., struck for an increase in wages and for a closed shop. The strike was marked by rioting in which five lives were lost and seventy persons received injuries, the most serious clashes occurring on Aug. 15 and Sept. 9. State troops were called out and order was maintained until Oct. 29, when the car company granted a 7 per cent increase in wages but refused to grant the closed shop principle. The strike then ended.

NEW YORK PRINTING TRADES STRIKE.

On Oct. 1 some 10,000 members of New York city printing trades unions employed in 250 plants, from which are issued a large number of magazines and trade papers, were forced out of work by a simultaneous lockout and strike. The action followed the refusal of the employers to grant a forty-four hour week and a weekly increase of $14 in all wage scales. Under an agreement with the International Typographical union the forty-four hour week was to become effective May 1, 1921, but the men insisted that it go into effect Oct. 1, 1919. They also refused an offer of a wage increase of $6 a week. The issue of the leading weekly and monthly publications was made almost impossible in the majority of cases. Nov. 23 the printers voted to return to work.

CHICAGO TRACTION STRIKE.

Employes of the surface and elevated car lines in Chicago in the latter part of July, while the city was in the midst of a violent race riot, demanded on pain of a strike that they be given an eight hour day, 85 cents an hour wages, time and a half for overtime, 80 per cent straight runs and no run over ten hours. Negotiations, in which the officials of the companies, the officers of the employes' union and Gov. Frank O. Lowden took part, resulted in a compromise offer by the car lines of 65 cents an hour for men receiving 48 cents an hour, and a 17 cent increase for all other employes, an eight hour day, 60 per cent of all runs to be straight and all runs to be completed within eight hours. This was for the surface line employes. The elevated road men were offered 67 cents an hour for those receiving 50 cents and a 17 cent increase for the others, an eight hour day with time and a half for overtime, 70 per cent of all runs to be completed in eight hours and all runs to be completed within thirteen hours. The union officials accepted the offer, but the men rejected it and went on strike at 4 a. m., July 29.

The tieup continued until 5 a. m., Aug. 2, when it was called off by a referendum vote in which those in favor of accepting the compromise carried the day by the narrow margin of 386 votes. During the four days of the strike the people of Chicago doing business in the downtown district or at points distant from their residences were compelled to ride to and from work in automobiles, trucks, taxicabs and other motor vehicles and naturally suffered much inconvenience and delay.

The result of the strike was that the traction companies in order to meet the expense put upon them by the increase in wages were empowered by the state utilities commission to charge 7 cent fares on the surface line and 8 cents on the elevated roads. The higher fares went into effect Aug. 8.

CARPENTERS' STRIKE IN CHICAGO.

Building operations in Chicago were at a complete standstill during most of the summer and early fall of 1919 owing to strike and lockout of union carpenters and other building trades men. The men demanded $1 an hour, while the contractors were willing to pay only 92½ cents. The carpenters won their point and went back to work Sept. 22 after having been out ten weeks.

STRIKE IN IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRY.

In August it became evident that the employes of the United States Steel corporation and affiliated companies were determined to strike to gain what they called their twelve basic demands and a number of minor ones. The basic demands were:

1. Right of collective bargaining.
2. Reinstatement of all men discharged for union activities with pay for time lost.
3. The eight hour day.
4. One day's rest in seven.
5. Abolition of twenty-four hour shifts.
6. Increases in wages sufficient to guarantee American standards of living.
7. Standard scales of wages for all crafts and classifications of workers.

8. Double rates of pay for all overtime work and for work on Sundays and holidays.
9. Check off system of collecting union dues and assessments.
10. Principles of seniority to apply in maintaining, reducing and increasing working forces.
11. Abolition of company unions.
12. Abolition of physical examination of applicants for employment.

Twenty-four unions in the steel industry made these demands through W. Z. Foster, their chief spokesman. They made efforts to reach E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, but he declined to enter into negotiations. It was claimed that less than one-half of the employes in the industry were union men and that the corporation would insist on maintaining the open shop principle. The cause of the strikers was championed by John Fitzpatrick and other representatives of the American Federation of Labor, but no settlement was reached and on Sept. 10 a strike was called for Sept. 22. President Wilson urged a postponement of the strike until after an industrial conference in Washington, D. C., could be held. The steel employes rejected his suggestion on the ground that they could not afford to wait and so informed him in a letter made public Sept. 18.

Further efforts to come to an understanding were made, but without avail, and on Sept. 20, two days before the time set, many of the employes in the Gary (Ind.) mills of the steel corporation walked out. The same action was taken the next day at Pittsburgh, Pa., Youngstown, O., Indiana Harbor, Ind., South Chicago, Ill., Joliet, Ill., Milwaukee, Wis., and other places. However, not all the men went out and many of the mills continued to operate partially. The union chiefs claimed that 327,000 men had ceased work, but the figure was said by the steel officials to be much too high. Disorders occurred early in the strike at Pittsburgh, Pa., and at various other points in the east, resulting in several deaths.

On Sept. 23 the United States senate instructed its committee on labor to investigate the strike and that body immediately summoned before it E. H. Gary, John Fitzpatrick and others. They appeared and testified, but nothing was accomplished and the strike went on. More of the steel mills reopened daily and conflicts became more numerous. On Oct. 4 the disturbances in Gary and Indiana Harbor became so serious that eleven companies of state troops were ordered on duty there. This was not deemed sufficient for the protection of the men desiring to work and on Oct. 6 Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, at the request of Gov. James P. Goodrich of Indiana, placed Gary, East Chicago and Indiana Harbor under martial law and called in 4,000 federal troops to maintain order. This move was successful. The unruly elements were subdued and no more rioting occurred. Many arrests were made of radicals, among them several agents of the Russian bolsheviki with large quantities of "red" propaganda. By Nov. 1 the union officials admitted that the strike was a failure, as most of the men had gone back to work.

AMERICAN MINERS' STRIKE.

In November the industrial unrest in the United States came to a climax with a general strike of the miners. On Oct. 25 President Wilson issued a statement in which he recounted the facts leading to the action taken by the miners and his reasons for disapproving of this course. The statement follows:

"On Sept. 23, 1919, the convention of the United Mine Workers of America at Cleveland, O., adopted a proposal declaring that all contracts in the bituminous field shall be declared as having automatically expired Nov. 1, 1919, and making various demands, including a 60 per cent increase in wages and the adoption of a six hour work day and a five day week; and providing that, in the event a satisfactory wage agreement should not be secured for the central competitive field before Nov. 1, 1919, the national officials should be authorized and instructed to call a general strike of all bituminous miners and mine workers throughout the United States, effective Nov. 1, 1919.

"Pursuant to these instructions, the officers of the organization have issued a call to make the strike effective Nov. 1. This is one of the gravest steps ever proposed in this country affecting the economic welfare and the domestic comfort and health of the people.

"It is proposed to abrogate an agreement as to wages which was made with the sanction of the United States fuel administration and which was to run during the continuance of the war, but not beyond April 1, 1920.

"This strike is proposed at a time when the government is making the most earnest effort to reduce the cost of living and has appealed with success to other classes of workers to postpone similar disputes until a reasonable opportunity has been afforded for dealing with the cost of living.

"It is recognized that the strike would practically shut off the country's supply of its principal fuel at a time when interference with that supply is calculated to create a disastrous fuel famine. All interests would be affected alike by a strike of this character, and its victims would be not the rich only but the poor and the needy as well—those least able to provide in advance a fuel supply for domestic use.

"It would involve the shutting down of countless industries and the throwing out of employment of a large part of the workers of the country. It would involve stopping the operation of railroads, electric light and gas plants, street railway lines, and other public utilities, and the shipping to and from this country, thus preventing our giving aid to the allied countries with supplies which they so seriously need.

"The country is confronted with this prospect at a time when the war itself is still a fact, when the world is still in suspense as to negotiations for peace, when our troops are still being transported and when their means of transport is in urgent need of fuel.

"From whatever angle the subject may be viewed, it is apparent that such a strike in such circumstances would be the most far-reaching plan ever presented in this country to limit the facilities of production and distribution of a necessity of life and thus indirectly to restrict the production and distribution of all the necessaries of life.

"A strike under these circumstances is not only unjustifiable, it is unlawful.

"The action proposed has apparently been taken without any vote upon the specific proposition by the individual members of the United Mine Workers of America throughout the United States, an almost unprecedented proceeding.

"I cannot believe that any right of any American worker needs for its protection the taking of this extraordinary step, and I am convinced that when the time and manner are considered it constitutes a fundamental attack, which is wrong both morally and legally, upon the rights of society and upon the welfare of our country.

"I feel convinced that individual members of the United Mine Workers would not vote, upon full consideration, in favor of such a strike under these conditions.

"When a movement reaches the point where it appears to involve practically the entire productive capacity of the country with respect to one of the most vital necessities of daily domestic and industrial life, and when the movement is asserted in the circumstances I have stated, and at a time and in a manner calculated to involve the maximum of danger to the public welfare in this critical hour of our country's life, the public interest becomes the paramount consideration.

"In these circumstances I solemnly request both the national and the local officers and also the individual members of the United Mine Workers of America to recall all orders looking to a strike on Nov. 1 and to take whatever steps may be necessary to prevent any stoppage of work.

"It is time for plain speaking. These matters with which we now deal touch not only the welfare of a class but vitally concern the well-being, the comfort, and the very life of all the people. I feel it my duty in the public interest to declare that any attempt to carry out the purposes of this strike and thus to paralyze the industry of the country, with the consequent suffering and distress of all our people, must be considered a grave moral and legal wrong against the government and the people of the United States.

"I can do nothing less than to say that the law will be enforced and means will be found to protect the interests of the nation in any emergency that may arise out of this unhappy business.

"I express no opinion on the merits of the controversy. I have already suggested a plan by which a settlement may be reached, and I hold myself in readiness at the request of either or both sides to appoint at once a tribunal to investigate all the facts with a view to aiding in the earliest possible orderly settlement of the questions at issue between the coal operators and the coal miners, to the end that the just rights not only of those interests but also of the general public may be fully protected."

President Wilson's appeal proved of little effect. A conference of executive officers of the United Mine Workers of America took place in Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 29. It was decided to go ahead with the strike and on Nov. 1 nearly all the mines ceased to operate. Between 375,000 and 400,000 men quit work. This was in the face of the fact that Judge A. B. Anderson in Indianapolis, Ind., at the request of Attorney-General Palmer in Washington had issued an injunction forbidding the union officials from taking any part in the strike. At the same time the war orders regarding mining and the transportation of coal were put back in force by Fuel Administrator Garfield.

On Nov. 8 at Indianapolis Judge Anderson issued an order directed to the officers of the United Mine Workers of America to rescind the strike order of Oct. 15. This was done, but work was not generally resumed anywhere in the bituminous field. The shortage of coal soon made itself felt and some of the roads had to cancel the less important trains and reduce the equipment of others.

INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE.

In August it became known that President Wilson had in mind a plan for a conference between representatives of employers and employes in industries and of the public. His idea was to develop something which would result in greater harmony between labor and capital and in some kind of revolution in the wage system. This was announced in his labor day message made public Aug. 31. In September the conference was fixed to be held in Washington, D. C., beginning Oct. 6. On Sept. 17 while in San Francisco the president announced the names of twenty-two men who were to represent the public at the conference. They were Bernard M. Baruch, Robert S. Brookings, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Elbert H. Gary, Charles W. Eliot, Charles E. Russell, John Spargo, O. E. Bradfute, Ward Burgess, F. R. Galloway, Thos. L. Chadbourne, Charles G. Dawes, H. B. Endicott, Paul L. Fiess, Edwin F. Gray, George R. James, Thomas D. Jones, A. L. Landon, E. T. Meredith, Gavin McNab, L. D. Sweet and Louis Titus. Not all of these men accepted the honor, Mr. Dawes being one of those who declined.

On Sept. 22 Samuel Gompers announced the names of fifteen men who would take part in the conference. They were besides himself J. F. Valentine, Frank Duffy, W. D. Mahon, T. A. Rickert, Jacob Fischer, Frank Morrison, Daniel J. Tobin, John L. Lewis, Sara A. Conboy, William H. Johnston, Paul Scharrenberg, John Donlin and M. F. Tighe.

The conference began on the date fixed with some sixty-odd delegates, including most of those named above, but from the start it was apparent that an agreement of any kind was quite unlikely and that no new or acceptable solution of the conflict between capital and labor would be found. The rock on which the delegates split was the principle of collective bargaining. This resolution was brought in by a committee of fifteen:

"The right of wage earners to organize in trade and labor unions, to bargain collectively, to be represented by representatives of their own choosing in negotiations and adjustments with employers, and in respect to wages, hours of labor, and rules and conditions of employment, is recognized.

"This must not be understood as limiting the right of any wage earner to refrain from joining any organization or to deal directly with his employer if he chooses."

In opposition to this the employers' group presented the following:

"Resolved, That, without in any way limiting the right of a wage earner to refrain from joining any association or to deal directly with his employer as he chooses, the right of wage earners in private as distinguished from government employment to organize in trade and labor unions, in shop industrial councils, or other lawful form of association, to bargain collectively, to be represented by representatives of their own choosing in negotiations and adjustments with employers in respect to wages, hours of labor, and other conditions of employment, is recognized; and the right of the employer to deal or not to deal with men or groups of men who are not his employes and chosen by and from among them is recognized; no denial is intended of the right of an employer and his workers voluntarily to agree upon the form of their representative relations."

The labor resolution, amended so as to leave out any reference to trade and labor unions, came up for action on Oct. 22 when the employers voted against it. The labor delegates then, led by Mr. Gompers, left the conference in spite of the fact that on the same day from his sick room President Wilson had sent an appeal that an earnest effort be made to come to an agreement. Attempts to continue the meeting failed and on Oct. 24 it finally ended.

President Wilson on Nov. 20 appointed members of a new industrial conference to be held in Washington, D. C., beginning Dec. 1.

WORK OF SIXTY-SIXTH CONGRESS—FIRST SPECIAL SESSION (MAY 20-NOV. 19).

On May 7, 1919, while in Paris, France, President Wilson issued a call for a special session of congress to begin May 19. The session began on the date named. Representative Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts, a republican, was elected speaker of the house and Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, republican, was elected president pro tempore of the senate. Following is a list of the more important measures passed:

An act to prohibit intoxicating beverages, and to regulate the manufacture, production, use and sale of high-proof spirits for other than beverage purposes, and to secure an ample supply of alcohol and promote its use in scientific research and in the development of fuel, dye and other lawful industries; became a law without the president's approval, being passed over his veto Oct. 28.

An act for the repeal of the daylight-saving law; vetoed by the president Aug. 15 but passed over his veto by the house Aug. 19 and by the senate Aug. 20.

Joint resolution submitting woman suffrage amendment to the federal constitution; passed house May 21 and senate June 4. (See Woman Suffrage in this volume.)

Joint resolution tendering the thanks of the American people and the congress of the United States to Gen. John J. Pershing, and to the officers and men of the American expeditionary force; approved Sept. 29, 1919.

An act relating to the creation of the office of general of the armies of the United States; approved Sept. 3, 1919.

An act to provide the necessary commissioned personnel for the army until June 30, 1920; approved Sept. 17, 1919.

Joint resolution authorizing the appointment of an ambassador to Belgium; approved Sept. 29, 1919.

An act to incorporate the American Legion; approved Sept. 16, 1919.

Joint resolution to authorize the president to convene a meeting of an international labor conference in Washington, D. C.; approved Aug. 15, 1919.

An act to incorporate the Near East Relief; approved Aug. 6, 1919.

An act to repeal the joint resolution approved July 16, 1918, authorizing the president to take over the telegraph, telephone and cable lines of the country; approved July 11, 1919.

An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide further for the national security and defense by encouraging the production, conserving the supply and controlling the distribution of food products and fuel"; approved Oct. 22, 1919.

An act to amend an act of congress approved March 12, 1914, relating to the construction and operation of railroads in Alaska; became a law without the president's approval Oct. 17, 1919.

An act to penalize persons transporting stolen automobiles from one state to another; became a law without the president's approval Nov. 8, 1919.

Appropriation bills were passed as follows:

For owners of railroads under federal control, $750,000,000; approved June 30, 1919.

For bureau of Indian affairs; approved June 30, 1919.

For the support of the naval service; approved July 11, 1919.

For supplying deficiencies; approved July 11, 1919.

For District of Columbia expenses; approved July 11, 1919.

For the support of the army; approved July 11, 1919.

For sundry civil expenses; approved July 19, 1919.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION ACT.

Following are the main features of the national prohibition act which was vetoed by President Wilson Oct. 27 but was passed over his veto by the house the same day and by the senate on the 28th: Title I. provides for the enforcement of war prohibition. The first section defines the words "beer, wine or other intoxicating malt and vinous liquors" in the war prohibition act as meaning any such beverages which contain one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol by volume. The second section provides for the arrest and prosecution by the commissioner of internal revenue of persons violating the act. Section 3 defines any room or other place where intoxicating liquor is kept for sale as a public and common nuisance and the keeper thereof subject to a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000 and to imprisonment of from thirty days to one year, or both. Sections 4 and 5 designate the methods of trying and punishing violators of the law. Section 6 provides that if any section of the act is declared invalid the other sections shall continue in force and section 7 declares that none of the provisions of the act shall be construed to repeal any of the clauses of the "war prohibition act."

The first two sections of Title II. of the act define various terms used in Title II. and Title III. and provide for the prosecution by the commissioner of internal revenue and his assistants of violators of the law. Sections 3 and 4 read:

"Sec. 3. No person shall on or after the date when the eighteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States goes into effect, manufacture, sell, barter, transport, import, export, deliver, furnish or possess any intoxicating liquor except as authorized in this act, and all the provisions of this act shall be liberally construed to the end that the use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage may be prevented. Liquor for nonbeverage purposes and wine for sacramental purposes may be manufactured, purchased, sold, bartered, transported, imported, exported, delivered, furnished and possessed, but only as herein provided, and the commissioner may, upon application, issue permits therefor: Provided, That nothing in this act shall prohibit the purchase and sale of warehouse receipts covering distilled spirits on deposit in government bonded warehouses, and no special tax liability shall attach to the business of purchasing and selling such warehouse receipts.

"Sec. 4. The articles enumerated in this section shall not, after having been manufactured and prepared for the market, be subject to the provisions of this act if they correspond with the following descriptions and limitations, namely:

"(a) Denatured alcohol or denatured rum produced and used as provided by laws and regulations now or hereafter in force.

"(b) Medicinal preparations manufactured in accordance with formulas prescribed by the United States Pharmacopœia, National Formulary or the American Institute of Homeopathy that are unfit for use for beverage purposes.

"(c) Patented, patent and proprietary medicines that are unfit for use for beverage purposes.

"(d) Toilet, medicinal and antiseptic preparations and solutions that are unfit for use for beverage purposes.

"(e) Flavoring extracts and sirups that are unfit for use as a beverage, or for intoxicating beverage purposes.

"(f) Vinegar and preserved sweet cider.

"A person who manufactures any of the articles mentioned in this section may purchase and possess liquor for that purpose, but he shall secure permits to manufacture such articles and to purchase such liquor, give the bonds, keep the records and make the reports specified in this act and as directed by the commissioner. No such manufacturer shall sell, use or dispose of any liquor otherwise than as an ingredient of the articles authorized to be manufactured therefrom. No more alcohol shall be used in the manufacture of any extract, sirup or the articles named in paragraphs b, c and d of this section which may be used for beverage purposes than the quantity necessary for extraction or solution of the elements contained therein and for the preservation of the article.

"Any person who shall knowingly sell any of the articles mentioned in paragraphs a, b, c and d of this section for beverage purposes, or any extract or sirup for intoxicating beverage purposes, or who shall sell any of the same under circumstances from which the seller might reasonably deduce the intention of the purchaser to use them for such purposes, or shall sell any beverage containing one-half of 1 per centum or more of alcohol by volume in which any extract, sirup or other article is used as an ingredient, shall be subject to the penalties provided in section 29 of this title. If the commissioner shall find, after notice and hearing as provided for in section 5 of this title, that any person has sold any flavoring extract, sirup or beverage in violation of this paragraph, he shall notify such person, and any known principal for whom the sale was made, to desist from selling such article; and it shall thereupon be unlawful for a period of one year thereafter for any person so notified to sell any such extract, sirup or beverage without making an application for, giving a bond and obtaining a permit so to do, which permit may be issued upon such conditions as the commissioner may deem necessary to prevent such illegal sales, and in addition the commissioner shall require a record and report of sales."

Section 5 provides for the cancellation of permits of manufacturers of the articles mentioned in the preceding section who violate the requirements of the law. In section 6 it is provided that no one shall manufacture, sell, purchase, transport or prescribe any liquor without first obtaining a permit from the commissioner so to do, except that a person may, without a permit, purchase and use liquor for medicinal purposes when prescribed by a physician, and except that any person who in the opinion of the commissioner is conducting a bona fide hospital or sanitarium engaged in the treatment of persons suffering from alcoholism, may purchase and use, in accordance with the methods in use in such institution, liquor to be administered to the patients of such institution under the direction of a duly qualified physician.

All permits to manufacture, prescribe, sell or transport liquor may be issued for one year, and shall expire on the 31st day of December next succeeding the issuance thereof. Permits to purchase liquor for the purpose of manufacturing or selling as provided in this act shall not be in force to exceed ninety days from the day of issuance. A permit to purchase liquor for any other purpose shall not be in force to exceed thirty days.

Nothing in this title shall be held to apply to the manufacture, sale, transportation, importation, possession or distribution of wine for sacramental purposes or like religious rites. No person to whom a permit may be issued to manufacture, transport, import or sell wines for sacramental purposes or like religious rites shall sell, barter, exchange or furnish any such to any person not a rabbi, minister of the gospel, priest or an officer duly authorized for the purpose by any church or congregation, nor to any such except upon an application duly subscribed by him, which application, authenticated as regulations may prescribe, shall be filed and preserved by the seller. The head of any conference or diocese or other ecclesiastical jurisdiction may designate any rabbi, minister or priest to supervise the manufacture of wine to be used for the purposes and rites in this section mentioned, and the person so designated may, in the discretion of the commissioner, be granted a permit to supervise such manufacture.

Section 7 provides that no one but a physician holding a permit to prescribe liquor shall issue any prescription for liquor. And no physician shall prescribe liquor unless after careful physical examination of the person for whose use such prescription is sought, or if such examination is found impracticable, then upon the best information obtainable, he in good faith believes that the use of such liquor as a medicine by such person is necessary and will afford relief to him from some known ailment. Not more than a pint of spirituous liquor to be taken internally shall be prescribed for use by the same person within any period of ten days and no prescription shall be filled more than once. Every physician who issues a prescription for liquor shall keep a record, alphabetically arranged in a book prescribed and furnished by the commissioner, which shall show the date of issue, amount prescribed, to whom issued, the purpose or ailment for which it is to be used and directions for use, stating the amount and frequency of the dose.

Section 8 designates the kind of blanks to be furnished to the physicians and section 9 provides for the investigation of violations of the conditions under which permits are issued and the cancellation of such permits in cases where willful violations are proved. Sections 10 and 11 provide for the keeping of elaborate records by all persons manufacturing, selling or transporting liquor. Section 12 prescribes the kind of labels to be attached to all containers of liquor. Section 13 makes it the duty of every carrier to make a record at the place of shipment of the receipt of any liquor transported. Section 14 makes it unlawful for any person to ship liquor without notifying the carrier of the true nature thereof, while sections 15 and 16 make it unlawful to accept shipments known to be falsely described or to give any carrier an order enabling any person not a bona fide consignee to obtain such liquor. Sections 17 to 20, inclusive, provide:

"It shall be unlawful to advertise anywhere, or by any means or method, liquor, or the manufacture, sale, keeping for sale or furnishing of the same, or where, how, from whom or at what price the same may be obtained. No one shall permit any sign or billboard containing such advertisement to remain upon one's premises. But nothing herein shall prohibit manufacturers and wholesale druggists holding permits to sell liquor from furnishing price lists, with description of liquor for sale, to persons permitted to purchase liquor, or from advertising alcohol in business publications or trade journals circulating generally among manufacturers of lawful alcoholic perfumes, toilet preparations, flavoring extracts, medicinal preparations and like articles: Provided, however, That nothing in this act or in the act making appropriations for the postoffice department, approved March 3, 1917 (Thirty-Ninth Statutes at Large, Part 1, page 1058, et seq.), shall apply to newspapers published in foreign countries when mailed to this country.

"It shall be unlawful to advertise, manufacture, sell or possess for sale any utensil, contrivance, machine, preparation, compound, tablet, substance, formula, direction or recipe advertised, designed or intended for use in the unlawful manufacture of intoxicating liquor.

"No person shall solicit or receive, nor knowingly permit his employe to solicit or receive, from any person any order for liquor or give any information of how liquor may be obtained in violation of this act.

"Any person who shall be injured in person, property, means of support or otherwise by any intoxicated person, or by reason of the intoxication of any person, whether resulting in his death or not, shall have a right of action against any person who shall, by unlawfully selling to or unlawfully assisting in procuring liquor for such intoxicated person, have caused or contributed to such intoxication, and in any such action such person shall have a right to recover actual and exemplary damages."

Section 21 declares that all places where intoxicating liquor is manufactured, sold or kept in violation of the law to be a common nuisance and subject to a fine of not more than $1,000 and imprisonment of not more than one year, or both. Section 22 provides for issuing injunctions against the nuisance described and section 23 provides that carrying around liquor on the person or by a vehicle of any kind to be subject to the same abatement by injunction. It is provided in section 24 that violations of injunctions may be summarily punished for contempt of court. Section 25 provides:

"It shall be unlawful to have or possess any liquor or property designed for the manufacture of liquor intended for use in violating this title or which has been so used, and no property rights shall exist in any such liquor or property. A search warrant may be issued as provided in title XI. of public law numbered 24 of the 65th congress, approved June 15, 1917, and such liquor, the containers thereof, and such property so seized shall be subject to such disposition as the court may make thereof. If it is found that such liquor or property was so unlawfully held or possessed, or had been so unlawfully used, the liquor and all property designed for the unlawful manufacture of liquor shall be destroyed unless the court shall otherwise order. No search warrant shall issue to search any private dwelling occupied as such unless it is being used for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, or unless it is in part used for some business purpose such as a store, shop, saloon, restaurant, hotel or boarding house. The term 'private dwelling' shall be construed to include the room or rooms used and occupied not transiently but solely as a residence in an apartment house, hotel or boarding house. The property seized on any such warrant shall not be taken from the officer seizing the same on any writ of replevin or other like process."

Section 26 provides for the seizure and destruction of liquor being unlawfully transported in any wagon, buggy, automobile, water or air craft or any other vehicle. In section 27 it is provided that seized liquors may be sold by the government to persons having the right to buy them for permissible uses. Section 28 confers upon the commissioner of internal revenue and his assistants and all other officers of the United States whose duty it is to enforce criminal laws power to enforce this act.

In section 29 it is provided that any person who manufactures or sells liquor in violation of this title shall for a first offense be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not exceeding six months, and for a second or subsequent offense shall be fined not less than $200 nor more than $2,000 and be imprisoned not less than one month nor more than five years. Any person violating the provisions of any permit, or who makes any false record, report or affidavit required by this title, or violates any of the provisions of this title, for which offense a special penalty is not prescribed, shall be fined for a first offense not more than $500; for a second offense not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, or be imprisoned not more than ninety days; for any subsequent offense he shall be fined not less than $500 and be imprisoned not less than three months nor more than two years.

Sections 30, 31 and 32 deal with certain legal phases of prosecutions for violations of the prohibition act. Section 33 provides:

"After Feb. 1, 1920, the possession of liquors by any person not legally permitted under this title to possess liquor shall be prima facie evidence that such liquor is kept for the purpose of being sold, bartered, exchanged, given away, furnished or otherwise disposed of in violation of the provisions of this title. Every person legally permitted under this title to have liquor shall report to the commissioner within ten days after the date when the eighteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States goes into effect, the kind and amount of intoxicating liquors in his possession. But it shall not be unlawful to possess liquors in one's private dwelling while the same is occupied and used by him as his dwelling only and such liquor need not be reported, provided such liquors are for use only for the personal consumption of the owner thereof and his family residing in such dwelling and of his bona fide guests when entertained by him therein; and the burden of proof shall be upon the possessor in any action concerning the same to prove that such liquor was lawfully acquired, possessed and used."

The remaining sections of title II. (34-38 inclusive) deal mainly with administrative features of the law. The sum of $2,100,000 is appropriated for the enforcement of the law by the commissioner of internal revenue and the department of justice during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920.

Title III. concerns industrial alcohol.

Reasons for Veto.

In returning the act without his approval President Wilson, after quoting the title of the act, said:

"The subject matter treated in this measure deals with two distinct phases of prohibition legislation. One part of the act under consideration seeks to enforce war time prohibition. The other provides for the enforcement which was made necessary by the adoption of the constitutional amendment. I object to and cannot approve that part of this legislation with reference to war time prohibition.

"It has to do with the enforcement of an act which was passed by reason of the emergencies of the war and whose objects have been satisfied in the demobilization of the army and navy and whose repeal I have already sought at the hands of congress. Where the purposes of particular legislation arising out of war emergency have been satisfied, sound public policy makes clear the reason and necessity for repeal.

"It will not be difficult for congress in considering this important matter to separate these two questions and effectively to legislate regarding them, making the proper distinction between temporary causes which arose out of the war time emergencies and those like the constitutional amendment of prohibition, which is now part of the fundamental law of the country.

"In all matters having to do with the personal habits and customs of large numbers of our people we must be certain that the established processes of legal change are followed. In no other way can the salutary object sought to be accomplished by great reforms of this character be made satisfactory and permanent."

The house passed the measure over the veto by a vote of 176 to 55 and the senate took the same action by a vote of 65 to 20.

DAYLIGHT-SAVING LAW REPEALED.

In response to demands from the farming sections of the country the senate and house on June 18 voted for a rider to the agricultural appropriation bill repealing the daylight-saving law. President Wilson vetoed the agricultural bill on account of the rider, holding that the repeal of the daylight-saving act would involve a serious economic loss. The agricultural bill was then passed by both houses without the rider and a separate measure repealing the daylight-saving act was passed by the house and senate. President Wilson on Aug. 15 again vetoed the measure, but it was passed over his veto by the house Aug. 19 and by the senate Aug. 20. The act as passed reads:

"That section 3 of the act entitled 'An act to save daylight and to provide standard time for the United States,' approved March 19, 1918, is hereby repealed, effective on the last Sunday of October, 1919, after the approval of this act, when by the retarding of one hour the standard time of each zone shall be returned to and thereafter be the mean astronomical time of the degree of longitude governing each zone as defined in section 1 of said act, approved March 19, 1918."

THANKS TO GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING.

Resolved, etc., That the thanks of the American people and of the congress of the United States are due, and are hereby tendered, to Gen. John J. Pershing for his highly distinguished services as commander in chief of the American expeditionary forces in Europe and to the officers and men under his command for their unwavering devotion and heroic valor throughout the war. (Approved Sept. 29, 1919.)

OFFICE OF GENERAL CREATED.

Be it enacted, etc., That the office of general of the armies of the United States is hereby revived, and the president is hereby authorized, in his discretion and by and with the advice and consent of the senate, to appoint to said office a general officer of the army who, on foreign soil and during the recent war, has been especially distinguished in the higher command of military forces of the United States; and the officer appointed under the foregoing authorization shall have the pay prescribed by section 24 of the act of congress approved July 15, 1870, and such allowances as the president shall deem appropriate; and any provision of existing law that would enable any other officer of the army to take rank and precedence over said officer is hereby repealed: Provided, That no more than one appointment to office shall be made under the terms of this act. (Approved Sept. 3, 1919.)

COMMISSIONED PERSONNEL OF ARMY.

Until June 30, 1920, the secretary of war is authorized to maintain such commissioned personnel in addition to the officers of the permanent establishment and to retain at their temporary grades such officers of the regular army as in his judgment may be necessary for the proper performance of the functions of the military establishment. Additional officers so maintained shall be selected, so far as practicable, from officers and enlisted men who served during the emergency and are applicants for appointments in the permanent establishment. After Oct. 31, 1919, the total number of commissioned officers exclusive of retired officers and disabled emergency officers awaiting discharge upon completion of treatment for physical reconstruction shall at no time exceed 18,000. No officer on the active list shall be detailed for recruiting service or for duty at schools and colleges, not including schools of the service, where officers on the retired list can be secured who are competent for such duty. Hereafter officers retired for physical disability shall not form part of the limited retired list. One thousand two hundred emergency officers shall be assigned to the air service, of whom not less than 85 per cent shall be duly qualified flyers. (Approved Sept. 17, 1919.)

AMBASSADOR TO BELGIUM.

Resolved, etc., That the president be authorized to appoint as the representative of the United States an ambassador to the kingdom of Belgium, who shall receive as compensation the sum of $17,500 per annum. (Approved Sept. 29, 1919.)

INTERNATIONAL LABOR CONFERENCE.

Resolved, etc., That the president of the United States be authorized to convene and to make arrangements for the organization of a general international labor conference, to be held in Washington, D. C.: Provided, however, That nothing herein shall be held to authorize the president to appoint any delegate to represent the United States of America at such conference or to authorize the United States of America to participate therein unless and until the senate shall have ratified the provisions of the proposed treaty of peace with Germany with reference to a general international labor conference. (Approved Aug. 15, 1919.)

RETURN OF TELEGRAPH LINES.

The act of congress approved July 16, 1918, authorizing the president in time of war to take possession of the telegraph, telephone, cable and radio systems of the country is repealed to take effect at midnight on the last day of the calendar month in which the act is approved. The rates or tolls fixed by the postmaster-general to continue in force for four months unless sooner modified by state or other authorities or voluntarily reduced. The president is directed to return the properties taken over to their respective owners. (Approved July 11, 1919.)

ACT AGAINST PROFITEERING.

Section 1 of the act entitled "An act to provide further for the national security and defense by encouraging the production, conserving the supply, and controlling the distribution of food products and fuel," approved Aug. 10, 1917, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That by reason of the existence of a state of war, it is essential to the national security and defense, for the successful prosecution of the war and for the support and maintenance of the army and navy, to assure an adequate supply and equitable distribution, and to facilitate the movement of foods, feeds, wearing apparel, containers primarily designed or intended for containing foods, feeds or fertilizers, fuel, including fuel oil and natural gas, and fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients, tools, utensils, implements, machinery and equipment required for the actual production of foods, feeds and fuel, hereafter in this act called necessaries; to prevent, locally or generally, scarcity, monopolization, hoarding, injurious speculation, manipulation and private controls affecting such supply, distribution and movement; and to establish and maintain governmental control of such necessaries during the war. For such purposes the instrumentalities, means, methods, powers, authorities, duties, obligations and prohibitions hereinafter set forth are created, established, conferred and prescribed. The president is authorized to make such regulations and to issue such orders as are essential effectively to carry out the provisions of this act."

Section 4 of such act of Aug. 10, 1917, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That it is hereby made unlawful for any person willfully to destroy any necessaries for the purpose of enhancing the price or restricting the supply thereof; knowingly to commit waste or willfully to permit preventable deterioration of any necessaries in or in connection with their production, manufacture or distribution; to hoard any necessaries; to monopolize or attempt to monopolize, either locally or generally, any necessaries; to engage in any discriminatory and unfair, or any deceptive or wasteful practice or device, or to make any unjust or unreasonable rate or charge in handling or dealing in or with any necessaries; to conspire, combine, agree or arrange with any other person, (a) to limit the facilities for transporting, producing, harvesting, manufacturing, supplying, storing or dealing in any necessaries; (b) to restrict the supply of any necessaries; (c) to restrict distribution of any necessaries; (d) to prevent, limit or lessen the manufacture or production of any necessaries in order to enhance the price thereof; or (e) to exact excessive prices for any necessaries, or to aid or abet the doing of any act made unlawful by this section. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section upon conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding $5,000 or be imprisoned for not more than two years, or both: Provided, That this section shall not apply to any farmer, gardener, horticulturist, vineyardist, planter, ranchman, dairyman, stockman or other agriculturist, with respect to the farm products produced or raised upon land owned, leased or cultivated by him: Provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to forbid or make unlawful collective bargaining by any co-operative association or other association of farmers, dairymen, gardeners or other producers of farm products with respect to the farm products produced or raised by its members upon land owned, leased or cultivated by them."

NATIONAL MOTOR VEHICLE THEFT ACT.

The law is entitled "An act to punish the transportation of stolen motor vehicles in interstate or foreign commerce." As used in the act the term "motor vehicle" includes an automobile, automobile truck, automobile wagon, motorcycle or any other self-propelled vehicle not designed for running on rails.

The term "interstate or foreign commerce" includes transportation from one state, territory or the District of Columbia to another state, territory or the District of Columbia, or to a foreign country or from a foreign country to any state, territory or the District of Columbia.

Whoever shall transport or cause to be transported in interstate or foreign commerce a motor vehicle, knowing the same to have been stolen, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment of not more than five years, or both. Whoever shall receive, conceal, store, barter, sell or dispose of any motor vehicle, moving as or which is a part of or which constitutes interstate or foreign commerce, knowing the same to have been stolen, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment of not more than five years, or both. Any person violating the act may be punished in any district in or through which such motor vehicle has been transported or removed by such offender.

(The act was received by the president Oct. 17, 1919, but owing to his illness was not signed by him and thus became a law without his approval.)

ALASKAN RAILROADS.

In order to complete on or before Dec. 31, 1922, the construction and equipment of the railroad between Seward and Fairbanks, Alaska; together with necessary sidings, spurs and lateral branches, the additional sum of $17,000,000 is authorized to be appropriated, to be immediately and continuously available until expended. Became a law Oct. 17, 1919, without the president's approval.

RAILROAD DEFICIENCY.

To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for carrying out the act entitled "An act to provide for the operation of transportation systems while under federal control, for the just compensation of their owners, and for other purposes," approved March 21, 1918, there is appropriated $750,000,000, which shall be in addition to the appropriation of $500,000,000 made in section 6 of said act, and shall be subject in all respects to the same authority for and restriction of expenditure as the said $500,000,000. (Approved June 30, 1919.)

NAVAL APPROPRIATION ACT.

The naval appropriation act provides that the total authorized enlisted strength of the active list of the navy shall be temporarily increased from 131,485 during the period from July 1, 1919, to Sept. 30, 1919, to 241,000 men, and from Oct. 1, 1919, to Dec. 31, 1919, to 191,000 men, and from Jan. 1, 1920, to June 30, 1920, to 170,000 men. The president is authorized, whenever in his judgment a sufficient national emergency exists, to increase the authorized enlisted strength of the navy to 191,000 men, and the secretary of the navy is authorized to call to or continue on active service on strictly naval duties, with their consent, such numbers of the male members and nurses of the naval reserve force in enlisted ratings as may be necessary to supply deficiencies to maintain the total authorized strength for the periods herein authorized. The act appropriates $25,000,000 for aviation purposes. No increase in the navy is authorized, but limits of the cost of the ships provided for in the preceding appropriation act are increased substantially.

ARMY APPROPRIATION ACT.

The army appropriation act appropriates $25,000,000 for aviation purposes; $20,300,000 for pay of officers of the line; $19,429,367 for pay of officers of the staff corps and departments; $92,728,230 for pay of enlisted men of the line and $48,162,500 for pay of enlisted men of the staff corps and departments.

NUMBER OF THE STARS.

According to the best astronomers the number of stars that can be seen by a person of average eyesight is only about 7,000. The number visible through the telescope has been estimated by J. E. Gore at 70,000,000 and by Profs. Newcomb and Young at 100,000,000.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE CONFERENCE.

Beginning on Oct. 20, and ending Oct. 25, 1919, an important international trade conference was held at Atlantic City, N. J. It was summoned on the initiative of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and was attended not only by leading business men of America but by some of the best known manufacturers, financiers, engineers and economists of the allied countries of Europe. France, Great Britain, Italy and Belgium were represented by the following missions:

FRANCE.

Eugene Schneider, president of the mission, head of the Creusot Iron and Steel works.
Alexander Louis Albert Tirman, councilor of state and delegate of the ministry of commerce.
Baron du Marais, vice-president and director of the Credit Lyonnaise.

ITALY.

F. Quartieri, president of the mission.
Commander Prof. Bernardo Attolico, Italian minister plenipotentiary.
Commander Luigi Quartieri, president of the Italian Corporation for Chemical Industries.
Commander Engineer Luigi Luiggi, member of the state council of public works and professor at the University of Rome.
Commander Prof. Vittorio Meneghelli, president of the Venice chamber of commerce.
Commander Giorgio Mylius, president of the Italian Master Cotton Spinners and Weavers' association.
Commander Domenico Gidoni, representing the minister of the treasury.
Commander Pietro Giovanni Lazzerini, secretary general of the mission.
Chevalier Giovanni Fummi, stockbroker.
Commander Arselio Baroni, president of the Italian Union for the Manufacture of Explosives.
Commander Dr. Augusto Jaccarino, representing the Bank of Naples.
Chevalier Gaetano Biasutti, representing the Banca Italiana di Sconto.
Dr. Ildo Marchisio, representing the Banca di Roma.
Chevalier Guido Pedrazzini, representing the Banca Commerciale Italiana.
Chevalier Felice Bava, representing the Credito Italiana.
Marquis T. Theodoli, Mario Luiggi, engineer; Arturo Anzani, expert accountant; Sig. Antonio Agresti, secretaries.

BELGIUM.

Florimond Hankar, representing National Bank of Belgium.
M. Canon-Legrand, president of the chamber of commerce, Mons, consulting engineer.
Albert Neve, departmental director, Ougree-Marihaye works, Liege.
Albert E. Janssen, director of the National Bank, Belgium, and Professor of the University of Louvain.

AMERICAN REPRESENTATIVES.

Among the Americans promoting or taking part in the conference were Thomas W. Lamont, Edward A. Filene, Edward G. Miner, A. C. Bedford, James S. Alexander, Charles H. MacDowell, Frank S. Peabody, Theodore F. Whitmarsh, E. A. S. Clarke, W. C. Teagle, P. A. S. Franklin, John R. Munn and Harry A. Wheeler.

Japan was not represented because the conference was called primarily for meeting the needs of devastated Europe.

RESULTS OF CONFERENCE.

It was felt by those attending that the conference was successful in promoting the friendship of the countries represented and in establishing trade relations between America and Europe that would not only assist in rehabilitating devastated Europe but would go a long way toward establishing world peace on a firm basis. The situation in Europe was graphically described by M. Schneider of the French mission when he said:

"At the outbreak of the war each nation was like a vast firm whose cellars and stores contained stocks accumulated by former generations. At the present time cellars and stores are well-nigh empty. We used all our stocks and for a space of four years we produced only to destroy. Never have the wants of Europe been greater nor her resources more scanty. Eleven months after the armistice, eleven months after our victory, we are poor, weak, crushed under an enormous debt; our populations are too scantily fed; rationing is still in force; the cost of living continues to rise at a more rapid rate even than wages or salaries; many a home is not even assured of its daily bread."

Representatives of the foreign missions set forth the needs of their countries in the way of fuel, food, shipping, raw materials and financial assistance, while the representatives of American interests told just what they could do to meet these needs. The matter of exchange was also discussed and it was generally agreed that only an equalization of imports and exports would have a favorable effect. The matter of long time credits which were asked for especially by France and Italy was considered, but no decision was arrived at. This was also true of a proposition to raise money by a big popular loan in America.

The National Security league works for:

"1. The Americanization of all those whose future belongs to the United States whether native-born or foreign-born by—

"a. The speading of a wider knowledge of the constitutional privileges and the corresponding obligations of American citizenship.

"b. Uncompromising opposition to the substitution of any foreign language for the English language.

"c. Persistent war upon illiteracy, the most deadly foe of free government.

"d. Insistence upon the duty of every American to fit himself for the work of national military defense as an indispensable element in citizenship.

"2. The creation of a public sentiment which will look upon public office as a public trust to be committed only to those who are known to be competent, honest, loyal to our constitution, and ready to subordinate personal aims and ambitions to the common weal."

THE AMERICAN DEFENSE SOCIETY, INC.

National Headquarters—1133 Broadway, New York city, N. Y.
Slogan—"We have room for but one flag, the American flag, and this excludes the red flag, which symbolizes all wars against liberty and civilization."—Theodore Roosevelt.
Honorary President—(In Perpetuam Memoriam) Theodore Roosevelt.
Honorary Vice-Presidents—David Jayne Hill, Robert Bacon, Perry Belmont, Charles S. Fairchild, Charles J. Bonaparte, Henry B. Joy, William Guggenheim.

Executive Officers.

Chairman Board of Trustees—Charles Stewart Davison.
Chairman Executive Committee—J. Raymond Tiffany.
Treasurer—Robert Appleton.
Secretary—C. S. Thompson.

Aims.

Defense of America—1. To fight disloyal influences in America. Full punishment of radical agitators who conspire to overthrow the government. Apprehension of dangerous bolshevists, warning of public officials against the activities of anarchists, and the urging of preparedness in every section of the country.

2. Working for the passage by congress of legislation providing for a system of military training. In this connection the society is supporting the national service act, also known as the Chamberlain-Kahn bill, which provides for a great citizen army and a small army of regulars, of approximately 150,000 men. Six months' military training advocated for the youth of the country, with educational camps for the illiterate and non-English speaking; three months preceding the regular training to constitute a course here. Organization of trained men into a reserve called out periodically for further training. Officers chosen from the ranks and given opportunity to qualify for leadership.

3. Recognition of accountability. To demand such full accountability of all officials as will result in the elimination of inefficiency.

4. Circulation of propaganda. To crystallize the sentiment of the nation so that favorable action will be taken on measures that would regard the life and property of Americans. To raise the standard of citizenship so that every man will realize his obligation to his country as well as its privileges.

National Chaplain—Francis A. Kelly, New York, N. Y.
Membership—1,000,000.
Headquarters—Indianapolis, Ind.

The next national convention is to be held in Cleveland, O., beginning Sept. 27, 1920.

The American Legion was organized at a convention held in St. Louis, Mo., May 8-10, 1919, when temporary officers were chosen and the main principles of the association were adopted. Henry D. Lindsley of Dallas, Tex., was chosen as the temporary commander and it was decided to hold the first regular convention in Minneapolis, Minn. It took place there Nov. 10-12, 1919, when national officers were chosen and the organization perfected. All persons are eligible for membership who were in the military or naval and marine service of the United States between April 6, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918. The object of the association is to uphold and defend the constitution of the United States; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a 100 per cent Americanism; to combat autocracy whether of the classes or the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity principles of justice, freedom and democracy and to sanctify the comradeship of the war by mutual helpfulness.

The American Legion is a nonpolitical organization. It was incorporated by an act of congress approved Sept. 16, 1919.

VICTOR L. BERGER EXCLUDED FROM CONGRESS.

Victor L. Berger, socialist, representing the 5th Wisconsin district, was excluded from membership in the national house of representatives Nov. 10, 1919, on the ground of disloyalty to the United States and giving aid and comfort to the enemy in time of war. Before the vote was taken Mr. Berger reiterated the views and articles for which he had been sentenced to prison for twenty years by a federal court in Chicago. The vote in favor of his expulsion from the house was 309 to 1, the only man voting for him being Edward Voight of the 2d Wisconsin district.

The national holidays, such as July 4, New Year's, etc., are such by general custom and observance and not because of congressional legislation. Congress has passed no laws establishing holidays for the whole country. It has made Labor day a holiday in the District of Columbia, but the law is of no effect elsewhere. It has also designated the second Sunday in May as Mothers' day. President Wilson issued a proclamation May 30, 1916, requesting that June 14, the anniversary of the day on which the national emblem was adopted by congress, be observed as Flag day throughout the nation.

TORNADO AT FERGUS FALLS, MINN.

Fergus Falls, Minn., was visited by a tornado on Sunday evening June 22, 1919, causing the death of sixty persons, the injury of many more and a property loss estimated at from $4,000,000 to $6,000,000. Nearly 400 homes and business houses were destroyed, the storm doing the greatest damage in the central part of the city. Union avenue, the principal street, had every structure for a distance of three blocks blown down together with scores of residences on adjacent streets. Among the buildings shattered was the Grand hotel in which a number of fatalities occurred. The Oriental limited on the Great Northern railroad was blown from the track at a point twenty miles west of Fergus Falls by another tornado, but no lives were lost.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Sept. 29, 1909, the British parliament passed an act empowering the four self-governing colonies of South Africa—Cape of Good Hope, Natal, Transvaal and Orange Free State—to form a federal government to be known as the Union of South Africa. This was proclaimed May 31, 1910, at Pretoria, the seat of government, other services taking place at Cape Town, the seat of the legislature.

The executive government is vested in the king, represented by a governor-general, and an executive council and in ten ministers of state. Legislative power is vested in a parliament consisting of a senate and a house of assembly. The senate contains forty members, eight of whom are nominated by the governor-general in council and thirty-two elected by the four provinces, each of which is entitled to eight senators. The assembly consists of 121 members, chosen in electoral division as follows: Cape of Good Hope, 51; Natal, 17; Transvaal, 36; Orange Free State, 17. Senators are elected for ten years and assemblymen for five. The English and Dutch languages are both official.

Imports and Exports—The total imports of the four states in 1918 were valued at $247,435,840 and the exports at $164,746,185. Exports to the United States in 1919, $36,388,174; imports, $44,841,871.

ALBANIA.

Albania before the great war was an autonomous kingdom created at a conference of ambassadors in London May 30, 1913, as a result of the Balkan wars. Its territory formerly comprised the Turkish provinces of Scutari and Yanina. It has an area of 11,317 square miles and a population of nearly 1,000,000. Until the outbreak of the European war in August, 1914, it was governed by a king (mpret) and an international commission. William I., prince of Wied, was the first king, but he was on the throne only half a year, an insurrection compelling him to leave the capital, Durazzo, Sept. 2, 1914. Since then the country has been in a state of disorder. A provisional government has been administered by Italian military forces in Durazzo since June 3, 1917.

REPUBLIC OF AUSTRIA.

Government—The various states composing the former Austro-Hungarian empire at the conclusion of the war broke away from the union and declared themselves independent of the mother country, each becoming a republic in form. Austria herself was proclaimed a republic Nov. 12, 1918, and the government was administered by a national assembly. On Feb. 16, 1919, a national constitutional assembly was elected with the following party representation: Social democrats, 70; Christian socialists, 64; liberals, 23; other parties, 5. The assembly on Oct. 22, 1919, formally adopted the name "Republic of Austria" for the state, omitting the word German from the title. The assembly up to Nov. 15, 1919, had not chosen any one to act as president, the administration being conducted by Dr. Karl Renner and a cabinet chosen by him. Dr. Renner announced in October that the republic would be constituted by the federation of eight Austrian states, each preserving to a large degree its autonomy.

Area and Population—The area and population of the Republic of Austria cannot yet (November, 1919) be given with any degree of certainty. The area may be roughly estimated at 30,000 square miles and the population at 10,300,000. The population of Vienna in 1914 was 2,149,800.

Imports and Exports—No figures on the imports and exports of the Republic of Austria were available in the fall of 1919. The United States in the fiscal year 1919 exported to the territory comprised in the old empire goods to the vaue of $19,441,603 and imported merchandise valued at $308,682.

ESTHONIA.

Esthonia is one of the provinces of the former Russian empire in the Baltic region. It is an independent republic and is ruled by a constitutional assembly, but owing to war with the Russian bolsheviki and troubles with other adjoining states it had not up to November, 1919, attained any degree of stability. Esthonia has an area of 7,289 square miles and a population of about 1,750,000.

FINLAND.

Finland was proclaimed an independent state July 20, 1917, and a republic on Oct. 7 of the same year. Organization was delayed on account of war between the red guards of the Russian bolsheviki and the white guards under Gen. Mannerheim, but the independence of the country was preserved and on July 25, 1919, Prof. Kaarie Juho Stahlberg was elected the first president of the republic by the diet. Universal suffrage (men and women) prevails. Members of parliament are chosen by direct vote.

The area of Finland is 125,689 square miles and the population in 1915 was 3,300,650. In the fiscal year 1919 Finland exported $309,053 worth of merchandise to the United States and imported goods to the value of $9,509,167.

HUNGARY.

Hungary was proclaimed an independent republic Nov. 16, 1918, with Count Michael Karolyi as provisional president and a provisional assembly as the source of legislative power. This administration continued until March 22, 1919 when the Karolyi cabinet resigned and was succeeded by a bolshevist cabinet under Bela Kun. There was much rioting and bloodshed in Budapest and no material progress toward stability was made. Early in August Bela Kun was forced to flee from the country and then the Roumanians who had been fighting the Hungarian bolsheviki came in and took possession of Budapest. Though ordered by the peace council in Paris to leave Hungary, the Roumanians remained. A cabinet under Jules Peidll was in power a short time, when it was overthrown by Archduke Joseph, who established a new ministry. This lasted only about two weeks. In November, 1919, a government headed by Karl Huszar was in control of Hungarian affairs.

Hungary has an area of about 109,000 square miles and in 1910 had a population of 18,142,200, not including Croatia and Slavonia, which had joined the Jugo Slav republic. Having been in a state of anarchy for more than a year, the country in 1919 was not in a condition to do exporting or importing on any except a minor scale.

ICELAND.

Since Dec. 1, 1918, Iceland has been recognized as an independent state united to Denmark chiefly through having the same king, Christian X. He left Portsmouth, England, Aug. 5, on the battle cruiser Renown and arrived at St. John's, N. F., Aug. 11. After a stay of about a week there he proceeded to Halifax, N. S., and thence to Quebec, Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver and other places, devoting some of his time between official receptions and entertainments to hunting and fishing.

On Monday evening, Nov. 10, the prince and his suite crossed into the United States at Rouses Point, N. Y., and on the following day reached Washington, D. C. They were welcomed at the frontier by Secretary of State Lansing and in Washington by Vice-President Marshall on behalf of President Wilson, who was confined to his bed by illness. On arriving in the capital Nov. 11 the prince called at the white house and in the evening he was entertained at a dinner given by the vice-president at which many diplomats, judges, congressmen and other distinguished guests were present. Later he was the guest of the National Press club, at which he made a brief speech.

Wednesday evening the prince met the members of congress and their wives, members of the cabinet and the diplomatic corps in the hall of the library of congress. In the receiving line were Vice-President Marshall, Mrs. Robert Lansing and Viscount Grey, the British ambassador. In the course of the day he was entertained at an informal dinner by Secretary Lansing. He visited the Walter Reed military hospital and the Lincoln memorial and called on Mrs. Dewey, widow of Admiral George Dewey.

On Thursday, Nov. 13, the prince went to Mount Vernon where he laid a wreath on the tomb of Washington and planted a young cedar near it. Returning to Washington he took tea with Mrs. Wilson and had a visit with the president in his sick room. In the course of the day he decorated eighty officers and men of the United States army and navy and seven nurses. On the following day he visited the naval academy at Annapolis and left for a three day visit to a southern resort, whence he returned to New York, concluding his American visit.

ARMY-NAVY BALLOON RACE.

In an army-navy balloon race, which started at St. Louis, Sept. 26, 1919, with five contestants, Capt. E. Paul Phillips of the army was the winner with a distance of 491.8 miles. With Lieut. Byron T. Burt as aid he piloted a Langley field (Va.) entry and landed in Lake Michigan some twenty miles out from Marinette, Mich. Second place was awarded to Lieut. R. Emerson and Ensign F. L. Sloman of Washington, D. C., who brought a naval balloon to a point two miles northwest of Stittsville, Mich., 485.4 miles from the starting point. Third place was awarded to Ensign J. H. Stevens and Lieut. W. R. Reed of the United States naval station, Pensacola, Fla., with a distance of 479 miles, measured from the landing place on Lake Michigan, four miles northwest of Menomonie, Wis.

RACE RIOTS OF 1919.

IN CHICAGO, ILL.

Serious clashes between the white and colored races occurred in the summer of 1919 in Washington, D. C., Chicago, Ill., Omaha, Neb., and Elaine, Ark. In Chicago the trouble originated chiefly from ill feeling due to the "invasion" of white residence districts by negro families, causing depreciation in the value of property. There was also a belief prevalent among colored people that they were unfairly treated in many ways. Lynchings of colored men in various parts of the country but especially in the southern states contributed largely to the feeling of resentment. On both sides enmity was encouraged by the radical and rough elements of the population.

While there had been some minor collisions previously there was no general outbreak of rioting in Chicago until the afternoon of Sunday, July 27, when it was reported that a colored boy named Eugene Williams had been stoned by white boys and men at a bathing beach at the foot of East 29th street and that in consequence the boy had lost his life by drowning. Witnesses later testified that Williams had drowned but not as a result of having been stoned. As soon as the report of the alleged killing of the boy became generally known the white and colored men and women on the beach engaged in a melee, which quickly spread into the "black belt" on the south side and for several days this part of the city was the scene of much disorder, with shootings, stabbings, assaults and some incendiarism. The police were unable to master the situation and on July 30 state troops were called out by Gov. Frank O. Lowden at the request of the mayor and distributed over the riot zone. The regiments which were summoned were the 1st, 2d and 3d reserve militia and the 10th and 11th infantry. Members of the national guard and veterans of the war in Europe also assisted the police in checking the riots and in regulating the street traffic in the loop. The soldiers, under the general direction of Brig.-Gen. Frank S. Dickson, the adjutant-general of Illinois, co-operated with the police and did effective work. While disorder continued in spots for some time, the riotous elements were quickly subdued and by Aug. 3 calm was restored. On Aug. 8 the 6,000 state troops that had been on guard day and night near the stockyards and in the adjacent neighborhoods were permitted to go home.

In the course of the disturbances hundreds of arrests were made both of white and colored persons. Many of these were fined for carrying concealed weapons or for disorderly conduct or were held over for trial where the evidence showed that they were probably guilty of crimes ranging from assault to murder. Investigations were set on foot by State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne and by Coroner Peter Hoffman. In a report made public Nov. 4 by the coroner's jury which investigated the riots, race segregation by agreement and quick punishment of the guilty, regardless of color, were suggested as remedies. In a sworn statement the coroner fixed the number of race riot deaths at thirty-eight—fifteen white and twenty-three colored persons. The testimony of 450 witnesses was taken, resulting in the holding of twenty men to the grand jury on charges of murder and manslaughter. The coroner's jury branded the riots as "the pastime of hoodlums," pointing out that most of the victims of both races were robbed.

Damage suits arising out of the riots were filed in large numbers against the city, the total amount reaching about $1,000,000.

On Aug. 20 Gov. Lowden announced the membership of a committee of representative men of both races to investigate the relationship between the races. "This," he said, "is a tribunal constituted to get the facts, interpret them and find a way out." The men chosen were:

Julius Rosenwald,	Edward H. Morris.
Victor F. Lawson,	Robert S. Abbott.
Edward Osgood Brown.	Adelbert H. Roberts.
Harry Eugene Kelly.	George H. Jackson.
William Scott Bond.	Dr. L. K. Williams.
Dr. Cleveland Hall.

The committee took measures to investigate the situation with scientific thoroughness and to report such remedies as it should deem most practicable in preventing similar riots in the future.

IN OMAHA, NEB.

In Omaha, Neb., on Sept. 28 a mob set fire to the courthouse, nearly killed Mayor E. P. Smith and lynched William Brown, a negro accused of an attack on a white girl. In a battle lasting nine hours hundreds of shots were fired and a large number of persons were more or less seriously hurt. One man named H. J. Hykell died Sept. 30 from a bullet wound received during the rioting. Louis Young, aged 17, was shot and killed by the police while trying to enter the courthouse during the rioting. Federal troops were rushed to Omaha from various points and the soldiers, under the command of Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, who arrived on the 30th, quickly restored order.

IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Race riots broke out in Washington, D. C., July 21, 1919, and continued through the following day, when the presence of a strong force of troops quelled the disturbance. Five men were killed and many injured. The cause of the disorder was said to be attacks on white women by negroes.

IN ELAINE, ARK.

The killing of W. D. Adkins, a railroad special agent, at Elaine, Ark., Sept. 30, led to a conflict between negroes and whites on Oct. 1 and 2, 1919, resulting in the death of eleven negroes and four or five white men. It was reported that the negroes in the vicinity had been led to believe that they could carry out a successful rising against the whites and that their efforts in this direction led to the killings.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S ILLNESS.

President Wilson, after having nearly completed a speaking tour of a large part of the United States in favor of the ratification of the peace treaty with Germany, including the league of nations, broke down from the strain of many months of arduous work and when he returned to Washington Sept. 28, 1919, he was in a critical condition. He was suffering from an acute attack of nervous prostration and his physician, Rear-Admiral Cary T. Grayson, ordered him to bed and refused to allow business of any kind to be called to his attention. Dr. F. X. Dercum of Philadelphia, a neurologist, and other specialists were called in from time to time for consultation. Recovery was slow and it was not until the first part of November that the bulletins on his condition ceased to be issued and he was permitted to sign bills and attend to other pressing duties. He was still confined to his bed but was able to see a few visitors including Albert, king of the Belgians, and the prince of Wales.

SOCIALIST LABOR.

Means of production must be controlled by the people in common.
Industrial administration by the working class —the workers to assume control and direction as well as operation of their industrial affairs.
Organization of the workers into a revolutionary party.

NATIONAL WOMAN'S PARTY.

Adoption of the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the United States constitution that the right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

ILLINOIS LABOR PARTY PLATFORM.

Following is the text of the platform adopted by the Illinois state labor party at Springfield April 12, 1919:

The labor party was organized to assemble into a new majority the men and women who work, but who have been scattered as helpless minorities in the old parties under the leadership of the confidence men of big business.

These confidence men by exploitation rob the workers of the product of their activities and use the huge profits thus gained to finance the old political parties, by which they gain and keep control of the government. They withhold money from the worker and use it to make him pay for his own defeat.

Labor is aware of this and throughout the world the workers have reached the determination to reverse this condition and take control of their own lives and their own government. In this country this can and must be achieved peacefully by the workers uniting and marching in unbroken phalanx to the ballot boxes. It is the mission of the labor party to bring this to pass.

The state of Illinois is especially unfortunate in having been bound by exploiters and profiteers. Corruption in politics and government has been created and fostered by big business.

In the city which is the capital of Illinois, on the day following that in which the lower house of the general assembly denied working men and women relief from the servile injunction judges who unlawfully deprive citizens of their constitutional rights at the behest of the bosses who control nominations and elections to the bench, the labor party of Illinois springs into being to strike from the state government the shackles which prevent our state from becoming great.

This cannot be accomplished by compromising longer with the old parties. The day has passed when forward looking citizens can hope for progress, aid or sincerity at the hands of republican or democratic party officeholders.

The following program is announced:

1. Democratic control of industry and commerce for the general good of those who work with hand and brain and the elimination of autocratic domination of the forces of production and distribution, either by selfish private interests or bureauratic agents of government.

2. The unqualified right of workers to organize and to deal collectively with employers through such representatives of their organizations as they choose.

3. The freedom from economic hazard which comes with a minimum wage based upon the cost of living, and the right of the worker to maintain, without the labor of mother and children, himself and his family in health and comfort, with ample provision for recreation and good citizenship.

4. Leisure in which to enjoy happiness and improve the mind and body by the institution of a maximum working day of eight hours and a maximum working week of forty-eight hours, both for men and women.

5. Abolition of unemployment by reducing the hours of work still further as necessary to permit all who are able to work to find occupation and full pay for those who for a time are unemployed because of illness, accident or temporary loss of work.

6 Equality of men and women in government and industry, with complete enfranchisement of women and equal pay for men and women doing similar work.

7. Reduction of the cost of living to a just level, immediately and as a permanent policy, by the development of co-operation and the elimination of wasteful methods, middlemen and all profiteering in the creation and distribution of the products of industry and agriculture, in order that the actual producers may enjoy the fruits of their toil.

8. Complete revision of the state constitution to reclaim it for the people, so that instead of its being, as at present, the fortress of reactionaries and the backbone of the big business organizations that grip the state it will become the bulwark of the workers, built upon the theory of guaranteeing human rights instead of exalting property rights. Now the workers' measures are unconstitutional. It must be rewritten so that the proposals of crooked big business will be unconstitutional. It must be made easy of amendment. It must give the state a new and just revenue system. It must guarantee the initiative, referendum and recall. It must release the bonding power of communities, so that public ownership and operation are made possible.

9. Taxation of inheritances and income at a graduated rate progressing with their size, and taxation of land values but not of improvements.

10. Public ownership and operation of all public utilities, including grain elevators, warehouses, stockyards abattoirs, insurance and banks. Development under public ownership of the water power sites of Illinois. Public ownership, preferably federal, of the mines of Illinois, and in the meantime state regulation, which will prevent wasteful competitive methods of mining.

11. State aid to provide lands and homes for Illinois residents in town or country.

12. Abolition of employment of all children under the age of 16 years.

13. A democratic system of public education from kindergarten to university, with free textbooks and with opportunity for full cultural and vocational education for every child. Reeducation of disabled soldiers and the application of the same restorative treatment to disabled industrial workers.

14. Old age and health insurance, an adequate workmen's compensation law and a mothers' pension that will put an end to child poverty and permit the full development of every child under its mother's care.

15. Use by the state of only such supplies and materials as bear the union label, including school textbooks.

16. Full political rights for civil service employes.

17. Abolition of private employment, detective and strike breaking agencies and the extension of federal and state employment services to make these agencies for finding jobs for workers, instead of merely finding workers for jobs, and to prevent them from placing workers in positions that do not pay a living wage.

18. Abolition of the state senate.

19. Abolition of the power of judges to issue and enforce injunctions to deprive citizens of their rights in industrial disputes, and enactment into law of the right of citizens to trial by jury for contempt of court committed elsewhere than in the presence of the court.

20. No law to be declared by the Supreme court unconstitutional unless three-fourths of the judges so decide.

21. All state work to be done, not by contract, but directly by the state.

22. The development of co-operative trade and industry and enactment of needed legislation favorable to that purpose.

23. Complete restoration at the earliest possible moment of all fundamental political rights—free speech, free press and free assemblage; the removal of all war time restraints upon the interchange of ideas and the movement of people among communities and nations, and the liberation of all persons held in prison or indicted under charges due to their championship of the rights of labor or their patriotic insistence upon the rights guaranteed to them by the constitution.

SOCIALIST 1917 PLATFORM.

Political Demands.

1. Complete adult suffrage by the elimination of all sex, residential and educational qualifications, by the abolition of all registration fees, poll taxes or other impediments to voting. Enfranchisement of those who have declared their intention to become citizens and have resided in this country one year.

2. Democratic control of the government through a constitutional amendment providing for the initiative, referendum and recall.

3. Effective voting and proportional representation on all legislative bodies.

4. The abolition of the power of the courts to make and unmake laws because of alleged unconstitutionality or other grounds.

5. Rigid maintenance of the right of free press, speech and assemblage in peace and in war.

Economic Demands.

1. National ownership and democratic control of the railroads, telegraphs and telephones, steamship lines and all other social means of transportation, communication, storage and distribution.

2. Nationalization of banking and of socially beneficial kinds of insurance.

3. Direct loans to municipalities and states at cost.

Further Demands.

The following measures do not exhaust by any means the ways by which the workers can be helped to freedom. They are compiled as suggestive of further activity to that end.

1. Abolition of the senate and the veto power of the president.

2. Direct election of the president and vice-president.

3. Immediate curbing of the power of the courts to issue injunctions.

4. Direct election of all judges of the United States courts for short terms.

5. Free administration of law and the creation of public defenders.

Industrial Demands.

1. Complete abolition of child labor.

2. A legal minimum wage based on the ascertained cost of a decent standard of life.

3. Full protection for migratory and unemployed workers from oppression.

4. Abolition of private employment, detective and strike breaking agencies, and the extension of the federal employment bureau.

5. A shorter work day in keeping with increased industrial productivity.

6. An uninterrupted rest period of one and a half days in each week.

7. Freedom of industrial and political activities of the workers.

General Demands.

1. Taxation to be raised from graduated taxes on incomes and inheritances and from site values.

2. Adequate higher educational facilities for the entire youth of the nation, and such contribution to family resources as will enable the youth to remain in contact with such facilities until they are fully equipped for their economic and social careers.

3. Government support, by loans and other methods, to farmers' and workers' co-operative organizations.

4. The retention and extension of the public domain and the conservation and full development of natural resources by the nation.

5. Pensions for mothers, for invalidity, and old age.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Nationwide woman suffrage in the United States was made possible in 1919 when the 66th congress at its first session adopted a joint resolution proposing an amendment, popularly known as the Susan B. Anthony amendment, to the federal constitution extending the right of suffrage to women. The resolution was as follows:

"Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled (two-thirds of each house concurring therein), That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states.

"'Article —. The right of citizens of the United States shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

"'Congress shall have the power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.'"

In the 65th congress a similar resolution was passed by the house of representatives Jan. 10, 1918, by a vote of 274 yeas to 136 nays. In the senate progress was slow and on Sept. 30 President Wilson made a personal appeal for the passage of the resolution. A vote was taken on Oct. 1, but the necessary two-thirds vote was not attained and the measure failed. On the first day of the special session of the 66th congress, May 19, 1919, Representative James R. Mann of Illinois introduced the Susan B. Anthony resolution in the house and on May 21 it was adopted by a vote of 304 to 88, the necessary two-thirds total being 262. The bulk of the opposition came from southern democrats. Only sixteen republicans voted against the resolution.

In the senate efforts were made to delay the adoption of the resolution, but these were unsuccessful and a vote was taken on June 4. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 56 to 25, receiving two votes more than the requisite two-thirds of the senators voting. The republicans voting in the negative were: Borah, Brandegee, Dillingham, Knox, Lodge, McLean, Moses and Wadsworth. The democrats voting no were: Bankhead, Beckham, Dial, Fletcher, Gay, Harrison, Hitchcock, Overman, Reed, Simmons, Smith (Md.), Smith (S. C.), Swanson, Trammell, Underwood, Williams and Wolcott.

The resolution was drafted, substantially in the form in which it was eventually passed, by Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton in 1875. It was first introduced by Senator A. A. Sargent of California in 1878.

It was defeated in the senate in 1887, 1914, 1918 and once in 1919. In the house it was defeated in 1915 by a vote of 174 yeas to 204 nays.

Immediately after the passage of the resolution by congress strong efforts were made to secure its ratification by the state legislatures in order to permit the women of all the states in the union to take part in the presidential election of 1920. Illinois was the first state to ratify the amendment and was closely followed by Wisconsin and Michigan, all taking favorable action on June 10. Up to Nov. 28, 1919, the record stood as follows:

Number necessary to carry amendment, 36.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION OF 1920.

The next president and vice-president of the United States will be chosen Nov. 2, 1920. Electors will then be voted for directly by the people on the party tickets. These electors meet in their respective states on the second Monday in January, 1921, and ballot for president and vice-president of the United States. On the second Wednesday in February the electoral votes are opened and counted in the presence of both houses of congress and the result is announced by the president of the senate. The successful candidates are sworn in March 4 following.

Many of the states have presidential preference primaries, but the candidates are actually chosen by delegates to the national party conventions held in the spring and summer preceding the election.

NONPARTISAN LEAGUE MOVEMENT IN NORTH DAKOTA.

Considerable attention was directed in the summer and fall of 1918 to the progress of the National Nonpartisan league, especially in North Dakota, where it was most successful, electing its candidates for state offices and carrying a number of proposed amendments to the state constitution of a somewhat radical character. It was and is chiefly a farmers' movement and as such has many adherents throughout the northwest. Following are the amendments to the state constitution of North Dakota advocated by the Nonpartisan league and approved by popular vote at the election of Nov. 5, 1918:

Permitting bond issues for public owned projects; a more workable form of the initiative, referendum and recall; amendment of the state constitution through the initiative and referendum; public ownership of industries; state controlled rural credit banks operated at cost and compulsory state hail insurance.

The state platform of the league also advocated the creation of a state labor and employment bureau and state insurance on all public and farm buildings.

OGLESBY MONUMENT IN CHICAGO.

On Nov. 21, 1919, a bronze statue of Richard J. Oglesby, former governor of Illinois, was unveiled in Lincoln park, Chicago, with fitting ceremonies. It was presented by State Senator Martin B. Bailey of Danville, as chairman of the monument commission, and was accepted by Gov. Frank O. Lowden, who said in part:

"I think I may say without detraction that no man in all our history was ever so close to the hearts of the people of Illinois as Richard J. Oglesby. His career recounted in simple words upon the bronze plate beyond the statue reads like a romance. I am very happy to-day, in the name of the state of Illinois, to receive with commendation this noble statue erected to the memory of Richard J. Oglesby."

Mrs. Oglesby, Lieut.-Gov. John G. Oglesby, Miss Felicite Oglesby and Richard J. Oglesby II. were present as guests of honor of the state of Illinois.

The statue is the work of the sculptor Leonard Crunelle.

DIRIGIBLE DESTROYED BY LIGHTNING.

The British dirigible NS-11 ran into a storm and was struck by lightning while over the North sea off the Norfolk coast, England, July 14, 1919. The craft fell in a mass of flames and its entire crew of two officers and ten men perished. The NS-11 was of the nonrigid type and had been used during the war in spotting enemy submarines and mines.

CHICAGO WATERWORKS SYSTEM.

The following table shows the growth of Chicago's waterworks system by decades since 1854, when the first large pumping station at Chicago avenue and the lake was built, and by years since 1900:

Year.	*Population using city water.	Gallons pumped per day.	Gallons per capita.	Total revenue.
1854.	65,000	591,000	9.1	$58,105.00
1860.	109,000	4,704,000	43.1	131,162.00
1870.	307,000	21,766,000	70.9	539,180.00
1880.	503,000	57,384,000	114.1	865,618.35
1890.	1,107,000	152,372,000	137.6	2,109,508.00

FREIGHT TUNNELS UNDER CHICAGO.

Underlying nearly all the streets in the central business section of Chicago are sixty miles of tunnels connecting the freight terminals of the railroads with commercial houses. The tunnels are provided with narrow-gauge (2 ft.) electric railroads equipped with electric locomotives and steel cars. These are used chiefly in transporting goods to and from railroad freight yards and in carrying coal to business houses. Excavated and waste material from new buildings is removed through the tunnels and disposed of, permitting the work of construction to go on without interruption. In 1914 the Chicago Utilities company, which now owns the tunnel system, had in operation 117 electric motors and 3,000 coal, freight and other cars. In addition it had charge of some 24,000 telephones.

The original franchise for the tunnel system was granted Feb. 20, 1899, to the Illinois Telephone and Telegraph company, which was organized in 1898 by A. G. Wheeler and associates for the purpose of establishing an independent telephone system. By an amendatory ordinance granted July 15, 1903, the company was given the right to construct and operate a subway system for the transportation of mail matter, newspapers, packages and freight generally. The tunnels are 19 feet below city datum or 33 feet below the surface of the streets, the trunk line tunnels being limited in size to 12 feet 9 inches in width by 14 feet in height, and the smaller ones to 6 feet in width and 7 feet 6 inches in height. Part of the tunnel system was put into operation Aug. 15, 1906, but the whole of it was not in use until Sept. 1, 1907.

The Illinois Telephone and Telegraph company was succeeded in October, 1903, by the Illinois Tunnel company, which was followed in November, 1904, by the Chicago Subway company. The property of the Subway company and underlying concerns was acquired in April, 1912, by the Chicago Utilities company, the authorized capital stock of which is $53,000,000.

CHICAGO'S WELCOME TO WAR VETERANS.

Chicago in the course of 1919 welcomed home thousands of her sons and many of their comrades on their return from the world war and also remembered in various ways those who fell in battle or died from wounds and disease. The soldiers and sailors began coming in January and they were still coming though in far fewer numbers in November. They came by little groups, by battalions and by regiments; some were given public greetings on a large scale, others were entertained in a more quiet fashion, while still others, arriving unannounced, failed to find a welcome of any kind. This was nobody's fault, but was simply due to the multiplicity of disembarking points in the city and the inability of the welcoming bodies to be in so many places at once. Some were even whisked around the city on the belt lines and did not see their relatives or friends until they returned from some demobilization camp.

The first large detachment to arrive was the 333d field artillery regiment belonging to the Blackhawk division. It consisted of 1,430 men who paraded in the loop and were entertained at luncheon in various downtown hotels before proceeding to Camp Grant for demobilization.

On Jan. 17, 1,100 veteran fighting men of the 118th (heavy) artillery, Dixie division, arrived after having been mustered out at Camp Grant. They had passed through the city on the 11th of the month without the knowledge of the welcoming committees.

Later in the month arrangements were made for properly welcoming the Illinois soldiers on their arrival at New York.

On Feb. 3, 1,046 men of the 311th ammunition train and field signal battalion of the Blackhawk division were welcomed.

The 331st field artillery regiment, 1,285 strong, from the Blackhawk division, and 250 casuals came home Feb. 13.

The 370th infantry, better known locally as the "old 8th" Illinois, came back to Chicago Feb. 17 and the colored soldiers, scores of whom had won decorations for valor, were given a cordial welcome by the citizens without distinction as to color. There were 1,441 men in the parade which passed through the loop streets.

More Blackhawk men came home on Feb. 22. They formed the 332d field artillery regiment, 1,648 strong. With them in the parade marched 500 other men from Illinois and Wisconsin, all bound for Camp Grant.

March 10 another contingent of colored soldiers arrived and paraded. These were the 365th regiment of the "Buffalo" or 92d division.

On the evening of March 21 the 108th trench mortar battery of the 33d or "Prairie" division, 270 men, arrived. These were followed on April 6 by some 500 men from the 17th engineer regiment, the Blackhawk and Prairie divisions.

April 7 469 men of a tank corps consisting of Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota troops paraded in the loop and were given a luncheon at a downtown hotel. On April 15 the 72d coast artillery corps of 1,196 men passed through the city. On the 19th of April hospital units 12 and 13 from the Northwestern and Presbyterian hospitals, 270 men, received a warm welcome. Then on April 30 hospital unit No. 14 arrived. There were 161 men in this unit. On May 1 came hospital unit No. 11 with 210 men. Nurses of hospital unit No. 12, to the number of sixty, arrived the next day. May 3 a number of casuals from the 149th artillery regiment or "Reilly's Bucks" preceded their comrades and were welcomed by a Red Cross canteen team. On May 5 forty woman nurses of hospital unit No. 12 were cheered by throngs of friends.

May 8 was a great day in Chicago, for then the main body of Col. Henry J. Reilly's regiment, the 149th field artillery, came back and received a royal welcome in spite of rain and cold weather. There were 1,414 of them, with an additional battalion of 370 men from the 167th Minnesota infantry regiment. Gov. Frank O. Lowden, Maj.-Gen. Wood and other distinguished men were among those who paid tribute to the gunners and their officers who had been through some of the severest fighting in the war.

May 12 was another big day in Chicago's history, for then the 13th engineers, 1,075 men, chiefly railroaders, arrived after serving two years in France and distinguishing themselves in many ways. The preparations for their reception were unusually elaborate and the program was carried out in a manner befitting the occasion.

The 309th field signal battalion, 1st army artillery park and 119th field artillery evacuation hospital, 352 men, arrived the next day.

Nearly 5,000 men of the 33d division arrived at New York, May 17 and were officially welcomed in the harbor by Gov. Lowden and many others. Efforts to have the whole division parade in Chicago were made, but the war department declared that the plan was impracticable and it was abandoned. Nevertheless a fine showing was made by the men who arrived in Chicago and paraded. There were 6,246 men in all belonging to the division headquarters, the 65th infantry brigade headquarters, the 130th infantry (old 4th Illinois), commanded by Col. John V. Clinnin, the 132d infantry (old 2d Illinois), commanded by Col. Abel Davis, the 122d, 123d and 124th machine gun battalions, the 108th mobile ordnance repair detachment and the railroad detachment. The parade was viewed by Gov. Lowden, Maj.-Gen. Wood, Maj.-Gen. George Bell, Jr., and many other notable civilians and military men. The soldiers and officers were entertained at luncheon at the downtown hotels.

Equally hearty was the reception given to another contingent of Chicago and other Illinois soldiers who arrived on June 1 and 2. This included the 131st infantry (old 1st Illinois) commanded by Col. Joseph B. Sanborn, the 129th infantry regiment (old 3d Illinois) commanded by Col. George Meyers, the 108th train headquarters, the 108th ammunition train (part of old 7th Illinois) and the 108th military police, comprising altogether 5,642 men. All were given a rousing welcome of the same description as that accorded their predecessors.

On June 5 came the 58th artillery brigade headquarters, the 122d field artillery (old 1st cavalry) commanded by Col. Milton J. Foreman, the 124th field artillery (old 3d Illinois artillery) commanded by Col. H. B. Hackett, the 108th engineer regiment, the 108th sanitary train and the 108th field signal battalion, numbering in all 5,975 men. The welcome given these veterans was as enthusiastic as that received on earlier dates by other Illinois troops.

July 2, 3 and 6 saw the arrival and welcoming of the 311th engineer regiment of 1,200 men, the 602d engineer regiment and the 410th telegraph battalion. The 106th engineers, the 346th field remount squadron and a large number of casuals came July 11 and on July 24 the 803d pioneer infantry arrived. On Aug. 14 the 5th and 6th regiments of the 4th brigade, 2d division, United States marines, came to Chicago and on Aug. 23 2,500 of these fighters on land and sea paraded in Chicago before great crowds of spectators.

This ended the formal demonstrations in honor of the returning war heroes, though many more arrived later in smaller contingents or as individuals. The majority of the soldiers honored in Chicago were demobilized at Camp Grant near Rockford.

GEN. PERSHING COMMENDS 33D DIVISION.

When Maj.-Gen. George Bell, Jr., arrived in New York on the Mount Vernon with a part of the 33d division, May 17, 1919, he made public the following letter from Gen. John J. Pershing:

"American Expeditionary Forces, Offices of the Commander in Chief, France, April 23, 1919.

"Maj.-Gen. George Bell, Commanding 33d Division, A. E. F.

"My Dear Gen. Bell:

"It afforded me great satisfaction to inspect the 33d division at Ettelbruck on April 22 and to extend at that time to the officers and men of your command my congratulations on their fine appearance and appreciation of their splendid record while in France.

"The division has had an interesting and varied battle experience. One of these was to be schooled with the British expeditionary forces. It arrived in France toward the end of May, 1918, when it trained with the 4th army. Although as a division it did not enter the line here, yet the majority of the organizations had hard fighting experience before they left the British sector.

"On July 4 part of the 131st and 132d regiments of infantry, brigaded with Australian troops, successfully attacked Hamel and the Hamel and Vaire woods. On Aug. 9 the 131st infantry, under the 5th British division, successfully attacked Chipilly ridge and the Gressaire woods, an operation made especially difficult by the character of the terrain.

"Toward the end of August the division joined the 1st American army in the Toul sector, remaining in reserve until Sept. 5. On Sept. 10 it relieved a French division in the Blercourt area, southwest of Verdun.

"It took part in the opening of the great Meuse-Argonne offensive, capturing the Bois des Forges and occupying the sector facing the Meuse river. Beginning with Oct. 8 it participated in the operation east of the Meuse, pressing vigorous attacks on the 11th, 12th and 13th in the vicinity of Consenvoye and the Bois de Chaume and the Bois de Platchene.

"It remained on a stream of the Meuse until it was relieved on Oct. 21, in which entire period it was constantly subject to heavy artillery and machine gun fire from the heights of the west bank, and was continually in action.

"On Oct. 26 it re-entered the line in the Troyon sector, where it took part in the attack of the 2d army, driving the enemy from the towns of St. Hilaire and Marcheville and occupying the towns of Burgeville and Riaville. The division was advancing when hostilities ended with the armistice.

"It is gratifying to see your troops in such good physical shape and still more so to know that the moral tone of all ranks is so high. I believe that they will return with this high standard to perform in the same way whatever tasks may lie before them in civil life. They should go home proud of themselves and of the part they have played, and conscious of the respect and admiration of their comrades throughout the American expeditionary forces. Sincerely yours,

LINCOLN MEMORIAL COMMISSION.

Chairman—William Howard Taft, New Haven, Conn.

Joseph G. Cannon, Danville, Ill.
George P. Wetmore, Newport, R. I.
Samuel W. McCall, Winchester, Mass.
Congressman Champ Clark, Washington, D. C.
Senator Thomas S. Martin, Washington, D. C.
Secretary—Henry A. Vale, 2415 20th street, Washington, D. C.
Executive and Disbursing Officer—Col. Clarence S. Ridley, U. S. A.

The Lincoln memorial commission was created by an act of congress approved Feb. 9, 1911, to devise and construct a memorial of Abraham Lincoln in the city of Washington, D. C. A design submitted by Henry Bacon, a New York architect, was formally accepted by congress Feb. 9, 1913. The memorial, which stands in Potomac park, is a colonnaded edifice containing a statue of Abraham Lincoln, a memorial of the Gettysburg speech, a memorial of the second inaugural address and a symbol of the union of the states. Its cost was limited to $2,000,000. Ground was broken Feb. 12, 1914.

ILLINOIS STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE ENDS ITS WORK.

The State Council of Defense of Illinois terminated its career of usefulness Nov. 21, 1919, the final meeting being held on that date at the office of Samuel Insull, the chairman, at 72 West Adams street, Chicago. In the course of its existence the council expended a little more than $190,000, but it handled a total of $447,646.51, of which $306,146.51 was profit from the lake front war exposition and was turned over to the national committee on public information at Washington. The remainder, $141,500, was profit from the seed corn campaign and was turned over to the department of agriculture.

Besides Mr. Insull, the members of the council were J. Ogden Armour, B. F. Harris, Dr. Frank Billings, Mrs. Bowen, John H. Harrison, Levy Mayer, John G. Oglesby, Victor A. Olander, David E. Shanahan, John A. Spoor, Fred W. Upham, Charles H. Wacker and John H. Walker. John P. Hopkins served as secretary until his death on Oct. 13, 1918. He was succeeded by Roger C. Sullivan.

OIL BURNING AMERICAN STEAMERS.

When the construction program of the United States shipping board is completed there will be under the American flag 1,731 oil burning steamers of an aggregate of nearly 10,000,000 dead weight tons. On Nov. 1, 1919, there were 486 oil burning ships in the government merchant fleet and sixty-seven others had been sold to Americans. Six hundred and thirty-six oil burning vessels were under construction.

ILLINOIS LEGISLATION IN 1919.

Following were some of the more important laws enacted by the 51st general assembly at the regular biennial session beginning Jan. 8 and ending June 30, 1919:

CIVIL ADMINISTRATIVE CODE.

Section 6 and 63 of an act entitled "An act in relation to the civil administration of the state government, and to repeal certain acts therein named," are amended to read as follows:

Sec. 6. Advisory and nonexecutive boards, in the respective departments, are created as follows:

In the Department of Agriculture.

A board of agricultural advisers, composed of fifteen persons, and a board of state fair advisers consisting of nine persons, not more than three of whom shall be appointed from any one county.

In the Department of Labor.

A board of Illinois free employment office advisers, composed of five persons.

A board of local Illinois free employment office advisers, for each free employment office, composed of five persons on each local board.

In the Department of Public Works.

A board of art advisers, composed of eight persons.

A board of water resource advisers, composed of five persons.

A board of highway advisers, composed of five persons.

A board of parks and buildings advisers, composed of five persons.

In the Department of Public Welfare.

A board of public welfare commissioners, composed of five persons.

In the Department of Public Health.

A board of public health advisers, composed of five persons.

In the Department of Registration and Education.

A board of natural resources and conservation advisers, composed of seven persons.

A board of state museum advisers, composed of five persons.

The immigrants commission, composed of five members, one of whom shall be the director of the department of registration and education.

The members of each of the above named boards shall be officers.

Sec. 63. The board of natural resources and conservation, acting through five or more subcommittees each of which shall be composed of the director of registration and education, the president of the University of Illinois, or his representative, and the expert adviser specially qualified in each of the fields of investigation, shall:

1. Consider and decide all matters pertaining to natural history, geology, water and water resources, forestry, and allied research, investigational and scientific work.

2. Select and appoint, without reference to the state civil service law, members of the scientific staff, prosecuting and research, investigational and scientific work.

3. Co-operate with the University of Illinois in the use of scientific staff and equipment.

4. Co-operate with the various departments in research, investigational and scientific work useful in the prosecution of the work in any department.

The board of state museum advisers shall advise the director of education and registration in all matters pertaining to maintenance, extension and usefulness of the state museum.

The immigrants commission shall:

1. Make a survey of the immigrant, alien born and foreign speaking people of the state, and of their distribution, conditions of employment and standards of housing and living.

2. Examine into their economic, financial and legal customs, their provisions for insurance and other prudential arrangements, their social organization and their educational needs; keeping in friendly and sympathetic touch with alien groups and co-operating with state and local officials, and with immigrant or related authorities of other states and of the United States. (Approved June 10, 1919.)

CIVIL ADMINISTRATIVE CODE—STATE TAX COMMISSION.

D. 1921, and three until the second Monday in January, A. D. 1923. After the expiration of the terms of office of those first appointed, their respective successors shall hold office for a term of six years.

Of the tax commissioners first appointed one shall be appointed for a term of six years, one for a term of four years, and one for a term of two years, from the first day of July, A. D. 1919. Thereafter as the respective terms of office expire their respective successors shall hold office for a term of six years.

State Tax Commission.

Sec. 39a. The state tax commission created by this act shall, in its name, without any direction, supervision or control by the director of finance, exercise and discharge all duties now or hereafter imposed by law on it with reference to the assessment of property for taxation. All clerical and administrative functions pertaining to the business of the tax commission shall be discharged by the director of finance, who shall, for that purpose, act as its secretary and executive officer. (Approved June 19, 1919.)

STATE TAX COMMISSION-ASSESSMENTS.

The term "local assessment officers," as used in this act, shall mean and include township assessors, boards of assessors, the county treasurer and boards of review.

Sec. 2. The tax commission shall:

(1) Direct and supervise as provided by this act the assessment for taxation of all real and personal property in this state to the end that all assessments of property be made relatively just and equal;

(2) Confer with, advise and assist local assessment officers relative to the assessment of property for taxation;

(3) Prescribe general rules and regulations, not inconsistent with law, for local assessment officers relative to the assessment of property for taxation, which general rules and regulations shall be binding upon all local assessment officers and shall be obeyed by them respectively until reversed, annulled or modified by a court of competent jurisdiction;

(4) Prescribe or approve the form of blanks for schedules, returns, reports, complaints, notices and other documents, files and records authorized or required by and provision of law relating to the assessment of property, or by any rule and regulation of the commission, and all assessing officers shall use true copies of such blank forms;

(5) Assess the railroad property denominated "railroad track" and "rolling stock";

(6) Assess and value, in the manner provided by law, the capital stock, including the franchise, of all companies or associations now or hereafter incorporated under the laws of this state, except companies and associations organized for purely manufacturing and mercantile purposes, or for either of such purposes, or for the mining and sale of coal or for printing or for the publishing of newspapers, or for the improving and breeding of stock, or for the purpose of banking, including any of such property as may have been omitted from assessment in any year or years, or which, from defective description, has not paid any taxes for any year or years;

(7) Equalize the valuation and assessment of property throughout the state between the different counties of the state and fix the aggregate amount of the assessment for each county upon which taxes shall be extended;

(8) Keep a correct record of its acts and doings relative to the assessment of property and the equalization of assessments.

Sec. 3. The tax commission shall have power:

(1) To require local assessment officers to meet with it from time to time for the purpose of considering matters relative to taxation;

(2) To formulate and recommend legislation for the improvement of the system of taxation of property and for the equalization of the taxation of the state;

(3) To make such research and investigation as to the properties of corporations and the true values of the franchise and properties of all corporations incorporated under the laws of this state, except companies and associations organized for purely manufacturing and mercantile purposes, or for either of such purposes, or for the mining and sale of coal, or for printing or for the publishing of newspapers, or for the improving and breeding of stock, or for the purpose of banking, as will enable it to ascertain the fair cash value of the capital stock, including the franchise, of such corporations as are assessed by it and to obtain such further data and information upon which general rules and regulations may be based;

(4) To investigate the tax systems of other states and countries;

(5) To request the institution of proceedings, actions and prosecutions to enforce the laws relating to the penalties, liabilities and punishment of public officers, persons, or officers or agents of corporations for failure or neglect to comply with this act;

(6) To order in any year a reassessment of all real and personal property, or real or personal property, or any class of personal property, in any county, or in any assessment district thereof, when in its judgment such reassessment is desirable or necessary, and for that purpose to cause such reassessment to be made by the local assessment officers, and cause it to be substituted for the original assessment;

(7) To take testimony and proofs under oath and to require the production of books, papers and documents pertinent to any assessment, investigation or inquiry and for that purpose to subpœna and compel the attendance of witnesses;

(8) To require from all state and local officers such information as may be necessary for the proper discharge of its duties;

(9) To examine and make memoranda from all records, books, papers, documents, statements of account on record or on file in any public office of the state or of any county, township, road district, city, village, incorporated town, school district or any other taxing district of the state, and all public officers having charge or custody of such records shall furnish to the commission information of any and all matters on file or of record in their respective offices;

(10) To adopt, from time to time, rules not inconsistent with law, for ascertaining the fair cash value of the capital stock, including the franchise, of corporations assessed by it.

Sec. 4. Certified copies of the records of the tax commission pertaining to the assessment of property and the equalization of assessments, attested by the seal of the department of finance, shall be received in evidence in all courts with like effect as certified copies of other public records.

Sec. 5. Each officer in the tax commission, each employe of the commission and each other competent person specially delegated in writing for that purpose, shall have the power to administer all oaths authorized or required under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 6. Any sheriff, constable or other person may serve any subpœna issued under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 7. The fees and mileage of witnesses attending any hearing held by the tax commission under the provisions of this act, pursuant to any subpœna, shall be the same as those of witnesses in civil cases in the Circuit court in counties of the second class. Such fees and mileage shall be paid by the state.

Sec. 8. In case any person refuses to comply with any subpœna issued by the tax commission, or to produce or to permit the examination or inspection of any books, papers and documents pertinent to any assessment, investigation or inquiry, or to testify to any matter regarding which he may be lawfully interrogated, the Circuit court or County court of the county in which such matter or hearing is pending, on application of the tax commission, shall compel obedience by attachment proceedings as for contempt, as in a case of disobedience of the requirements of a subpœna from such court on a refusal to testify therein.

Sec. 9. Upon the completion of the original assessments to be made by the tax commission, it shall publish a full and complete list of such assessments in the state "official newspaper." Any person or corporation feeling aggrieved by any such assessment may, within ten days of the date of publication of such "official newspaper" containing such list, apply to the tax commission for a review and correction of the assessment complained of. Upon such review the tax commission may make such correction, if any, therein as may be just and right.

Sec. 10. Any person feeling himself aggrieved by any assessment made by the tax commission may appeal to the Circuit court of the county in which such property or some part thereof is situated, for the purpose of having the lawfulness of such assessment inquired into and determined.

The person taking such appeal shall file with the tax commission written notice of such appeal, which notice shall state in full the grounds of such appeal. Such notice of appeal shall be filed within ten days after such assessment is made and notice given thereof. Thereupon the tax commission shall prepare and transmit to the clerk of the court to which such appeal is taken a copy of such notice of appeal and a copy of all evidence, documents, papers, books and files pertaining to such appeal, which copies shall be certified to as correct by the director of finance. The appeal shall be heard without formal pleadings upon the record so certified by the tax commission. Appeals shall lie from the judgment of the Circuit court to the Supreme court. The remedy by appeal herein provided for shall not be construed to be exclusive.

Sec. 11. No appeal to the Circuit court from an assessment made by the tax commission shall stay or suspend any assessment or the extension of any taxes thereon. If the court, by its final judgment, should set aside or reduce such assessment, and the taxes so erroneously assessed shall have been paid, the person or corporation so erroneously paying such taxes shall be entitled to a refund thereof as provided by section 268 of an act entitled "An act for the assessment of property and for the levy and collection of taxes," approved March 30, 1872, in force July 1, 1872.

Reassessments.

Sec. 12. Whenever it shall appear to the tax commission that the real or personal property in any county, or in any assessment district thereof, has not been assessed in substantial compliance with law, or has been unequally or improperly assessed, the tax commission may, in its discretion, in any year order a reassessment for such year of all or any class of the taxable property in such county, or assessment district thereof. The tax commission may order such reassessment made by the local assessment officers. The order directing such reassessment shall be filed in the office of the county treasurer of the county in which such reassessment has been ordered, except in counties having an elective board of review, in which case such order shall be filed with the board of review.

Sec. 13. Such reassessment shall be made in the same manner and subject to the same laws and rules as an original assessment and shall be subject to review and correction by the board of review as in case of an original assessment.

Sec. 14. For the purpose of reviewing and equalizing such reassessment, the board of review of the county in which the reassessment is made shall review and correct such reassessment. The tax commission shall fix the time and place of the meeting of the board of review to review and correct such reassessment. At least one week before the meeting of such board of review to review and correct such reassessment the board of review shall publish a notice of the time and place of its meeting for such purpose in at least one newspaper of general circulation published in the county in which such reassessment is made. The board of review shall convene at the time and place fixed in such order and shall review, correct, return and certify such reassessment in like manner, and shall have and exercise all the power and authority given to boards of review and shall be subject to all the restrictions, duties and penalties of such boards.

Sec. 15. Such local assessment officer while engaged in making such reassessment shall have custody and possession of the assessment books containing the original assessment and all property and other statements and memoranda relating thereto, and the person having the custody thereof shall deliver such assessment books and such property to the local assessment officer on demand. He shall, in making such reassessment, have all the power and authority given by law to local assessment officers and shall be subject to all the restrictions, liabilities and penalties imposed by law upon local assessment officers.

Sec. 16. Such reassessment, when completed and reviewed as provided herein, shall be the assessment upon which taxes for that year shall be levied and extended in the county or assessment district for which made.

Sec. 17. The necessary books, records and blank forms needful for the purpose of such reassessment shall be furnished by the same authorities that furnish books, records and blank forms for an original assessment. The local assessment officer and the members of the board of review when convened in extraordinary session for the purpose of making such reassessment or of reviewing and correcting the same shall receive the same compensation as for like service in making, or in reviewing, an original assessment, which compensation, as well as all other expenses in making the reassessment, shall be paid by the county on the certificate of the tax commission.

Equalization.

Sec. 18. The tax commission shall act as an equalizing authority. It shall examine the abstracts of property assessed for taxation in the several counties as returned by the county clerks and the original assessment made by it, and shall equalize the assessments as in this act provided. The tax commission may so lower or raise the total assessed value of property in any county as returned by the county clerk as shall make the property in such county bear a just relation to the assessed value of property in other counties. The total amount of such increase or decrease in any one county shall not exceed 10 per cent of the total assessed value of all property in the state as returned for purposes of taxation. The tax commission shall not reduce the aggregate assessed valuation in the state; nor shall it increase such aggregate valuation, except in such amount as may be necessary to a just equalization.

Sec. 19. The tax commission in equalizing the valuation of property as listed and assessed in different counties shall consider the following classes of property separately, viz.: personal property, railroad and telegraph property, lands, town and city lots and the capital and other property of public utilities and of companies and associations assessed by the tax commission and, upon such consideration determine such rates of addition to or deduction from the listed or assessed valuation of each of such classes of property in each county, or to or from the aggregate assessed value of each such classes in the state as may be deemed by the tax commission to be equitable and just, such rate being in all cases even and not fractional; and such rates as finally determined by the tax commission shall not be combined.

Sec. 20. In equalizing the value of personal property between the several counties, the tax commission shall cause to be obtained the state averages of the several kinds of enumerated property, from the aggregate footings of the number and value of each; and the value of the several kinds of enumerated property in each county shall be obtained at those average values; and the value of the enumerated property thus obtained, as compared with the assessed value of such property in each county, shall be taken by the tax commission to obtain a rate per cent to be added to or deducted from the total assessed value of such property in each county. Whenever in the opinion of the tax commission it is necessary, to a more just and equitable equalization of such property, that a rate per cent be added to or deducted from the value thus obtained in any one or more of the counties, the tax commission shall have the right so to do; but the rate per cent heretofore required shall first be obtained to form the basis upon which the equalization of personal property shall be made.

Sec. 21. Lands shall be equalized by adding to the aggregate assessed value thereof, in every county in which the tax commission may believe the valuation to be too low, such rate per centum as will raise the same to its proper proportionate value, and by deducting from the aggregate assessed value thereof, in every county in which the tax commission may believe the valuation to be too high, such per centum as will reduce the same to its proper value. Town and city lots shall be equalized in the same manner herein provided for equalizing lands, and at the option of the tax commission may be combined and equalized with lands.

Sec. 22. When the tax commission shall have separately considered the several classes of property as hereinbefore required, the results shall be combined in one table, and the same shall be examined, compared and perfected in such manner as the tax commission shall deem best to accomplish a just equalization of assessments throughout the state, preserving, however, the principle of separate rates for each class of property.

Sec. 23. In all cases of partial return from any county where the number of defaulting towns or districts does not exceed one-third of the whole number of towns or districts in the county, the tax commission may estimate the valuation in the towns or districts from which returns have not been received and may equalize the total valuation as in other cases.

Sec. 24. When the tax commission shall have completed its equalization of assessments for any year, it shall certify to the several county clerks the rates finally determined by it to be added to or deducted from the listed or assessed valuation of each class of property in the several counties. The respective assessments made by it on the capital stock, including the franchise, of corporations assessed by it (other than of the capital stock of railroads and telegraph companies) shall be certified by it to the county clerks of the respective counties in which such companies or associations are located. And said clerk shall extend the taxes for all purposes on the respective amounts so certified, the same as may be levied on the other property in such towns, districts, villages or cities in which such companies or associations are located. It shall also certify to the county clerk of the proper counties the assessments of "railroad track" and "rolling stock," and the assessments of the capital stock, including the franchise, of railroad and telegraph companies. And the county clerk shall distribute the value so certified to him to the county and to the several towns, districts, villages and cities in his county entitled to a proportionate value of such "railroad track" and "rolling stock," and capital stock, and shall extend taxes against such values the same as against other property in such towns, districts, villages and cities.

Miscellaneous.

Sec. 25. All records, books, papers, documents and memoranda pertaining to the state board of equalization shall, upon the taking effect of this act, be transferred and delivered to the tax commission.

Sec. 26. On and after the taking effect of this act all the powers and duties now conferred or imposed upon the state board of equalization and upon the auditor of public accounts in relation to the assessment of property for taxation shall be transferred to and thereafter shall be exercised and performed by the tax commission.

Sec. 27. Whenever, in any law relating to the assessment of property for taxation, abstracts, reports, or schedules or other papers or documents, are required to be filed with, or any duty is imposed upon, or power vested in either the auditor of public accounts or the state board of equalization, such abstracts, reports, schedules, or other papers or documents shall be filed with, such duty and power shall be discharged and exercised by the tax commission.

Sec. 28. Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to give the tax commission any power, jurisdiction or authority to review, revise, correct or change any individual assessment made by any local assessment officer.

Repeal.

Sec. 29. The following acts and parts of acts are hereby repealed:

Sections 100 to 116, both inclusive, of an act entitled "An act for the assessment of property and for the levy and collection of taxes," approved March 30, 1872, in force July 1, 1872; and amendments thereto;

Sections 50 and 51 of an act entitled "An act for the assessment of property and providing the means therefor, and to repeal a certain act therein named," approved Feb. 25, 1898, in force July 1, 1898, and amendments thereto.

Sec. 25 of an act entitled "An act in regard to elections, and to provide for filling vacancies in elective offices," approved April 3, 1872, in force July 1, 1872. (Approved June 19, 1919.)

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Be it enacted, etc.: That at the hour of 12 o'clock noon, on the 6th day of January, 1920, a convention to revise, alter or amend the constitution of the state of Illinois shall meet in the hall of the representatives of the general assembly in the capitol building, in the city of Springfield. The secretary of state shall take such steps as may be necessary to prepare the hall of the representatives for the meeting of the convention.

Sec. 2. The convention shall consist of 102 delegates. Two delegates shall be elected in and from each district entitled by law to elect a senator to the general assembly. Delegates shall possess the same qualifications as state senators. The governor, or the person exercising the powers of governor, shall issue writs of election to fill vacancies in the convention.

Sec. 3. A primary election for the nomination of candidates for the position of delegate shall be held on the 10th day of September, 1919. All provisions of law in force at such time, and applying to the nomination of candidates for the office of state senator, shall to the extent that they are not in conflict with the terms of this act, apply to the primary election herein provided for.

Vacancies created by the death of or the declination of the nomination by any person nominated as a candidate for the position of delegate shall be filled in the manner provided by law for the filling of similar vacancies occasioned by the death of or declination of the nomination by any person nominated as a candidate for the office of state senator.

Independent nominations for the position of delegate may be made in the manner now provided by law for the nomination of independent candidates by petition.

Sec. 4. The delegates shall be chosen at an election to be held on the 4th day of November, 1919. Such election shall be conducted in conformity with the laws then in force relating to elections for state senators, to the extent that such laws are applicable.

All votes cast in the election for delegates shall be tabulated, returned and canvassed in the manner then provided by law for the tabulation, return and canvass of votes cast in elections for state senators.

The official, or officials, charged with the duty of issuing certificates of election to persons elected to the office of state senator shall issue certificates of election to all persons duly elected as delegates.

Election contests for membership in the convention shall be heard and determined by the convention.

Sec. 5. Each delegate before entering upon his duties as a member of the convention shall take an oath to support the constitutions of the United States and of the state of Illinois, and to discharge faithfully his duties as a member of the convention. In going to and returning from the convention and during the sessions thereof the delegates shall, in all cases except treason, felony or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest; and they shall not be questioned in any other place for any speech or debate in the convention.

Sec. 6. Each delegate shall receive for his services the sum of $2,000 payable at any time after the convention is organized. The delegates shall be entitled to the same mileage as is paid to the members of the general assembly, to be computed by the auditor of public accounts. The delegates shall receive no other allowance or emolument whatever, except the sum of $50 to each delegate, which shall be in full for postage, stationery, newspapers, and all other incidental expenses and perquisites. The pay and mileage allowed to each delegate shall be certified to by the president of the convention and entered on the journal of the convention.

Sec. 7. The convention shall determine the rules of its procedure, shall be the judge of the election, returns, and qualifications of its members, and shall keep a journal of its proceedings.

The governor shall call the convention to order at its opening session and shall preside over it until a temporary or permanent presiding officer shall have been chosen by the delegates.

The delegates shall elect one of their own number as president of the convention, and they shall have power to appoint a secretary and such employes as may be deemed necessary. The secretary shall receive a compensation of $15 per day. The employes of the convention shall receive such compensation as shall be determined upon by the convention.

Sec. 8. The proceedings of the convention shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state. The revision or alteration of or the amendments to the constitution, agreed to and adopted by the convention, shall be recorded in the office of the secretary of state.

The revision or alteration of or the amendments to the constitution, adopted by the convention, shall be submitted to the electors of this state for ratification or rejection, at an election appointed by the convention for that purpose, not less than two months nor more than six months after the adjournment of the convention. The convention shall determine the manner in which such revision, alteration or amendments shall be submitted to the electors. The convention shall prescribe the manner and form in which such revision, alteration or amendments shall be published prior to the submission thereof to the electors. No such revision, alteration or amendments shall take effect unless approved by a majority of the electors voting at such election.

The convention shall designate or fix a day or days upon which such revision, alteration or amendments, if adopted by the voters, shall become effective.

Sec. 9. Notices of the election to be called by the convention shall be given in the manner and form prescribed by the convention. The convention shall prescribe the manner and form of voting at such election, and the ballots for use in such election shall be printed accordingly, by the officials charged with the duty of printing ballots for use in general elections.

The votes cast at such election shall be tabulated, returned and canvassed in such manner as may be directed by the convention.

Sec. 10. Every person who, at the time of the holding of any primary or other election provided for in this act, is a qualified elector under the constitution and laws of this state, shall be entitled to vote in such election.

The primary and other elections provided for in this act shall be held at the places fixed by law for the holding of general elections and shall be conducted by the officials, judges and clerks charged with the duty of conducting general elections.

All laws then in force in relation to the registration of voters in primary and general elections, and all laws then in force for the prevention of fraudulent and illegal voting, shall be applicable to the primary and other elections provided for in this act.

All laws in force governing elections and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, or with powers exercised under the terms hereof, shall apply to and govern elections held under the terms of this act.

Sec. 11. The convention shall have power to punish by imprisonment any person, not a member, who shall be guilty of disrespect to the convention, by disorderly or contemptuous behavior in its presence. But no such imprisonment shall extend beyond twenty-four hours at any one time, unless the person shall persist in such disorderly or contemptuous behavior. Commitments for disorderly or contemptuous behavior in the presence of the convention shall be made in the manner now provided by law for the commitment of persons guilty of disrespect to the general assembly.

Sec. 12. It shall be the duty of all public officers to furnish the convention with any and all statements, papers, books, records and public documents that the convention shall require. The convention and its committees shall have the same power to compel the attendance of witnesses, or the production of papers, books, records and public documents, as is now exercised by the general assembly, and its committees, under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to revise the law in relation to the general assembly," approved and in force Feb. 25, 1874.

Sec. 13. The sum of $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated for the payment of salaries and other expenses properly incident to the constitutional convention. The auditor of public accounts is hereby authorized and directed to draw warrants on the state treasurer for the foregoing amount or any part thereof, upon the presentation of itemized vouchers certified to as correct by the president of the constitutional convention or the acting president of the convention. All printing, binding, stationery and other similar supplies for the constitutional convention shall be furnished through the department of public works and buildings. (Approved June 21, 1919.)

Compilation of Data.

The joint legislative reference bureau shall compile and publish in pamphlet form or otherwise, for the use of the members of the convention, such information and data as may be deemed necessary, and shall furnish or render to the delegates such other information or assistance as may be requested. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act there is appropriated the sum of $10,000. (Approved June 9, 1919.)

ILLINOIS WATERWAY.

By the provisions of an act approved June 17, 1919, the state of Illinois is authorized to take possession of the lands or premises now belonging to the state which were granted to it by the federal government or became its property in connection with the construction of the Illinois and Michigan canal. The department of public works and buildings is authorized to prevent encroachments upon the Illinois and Michigan canal throughout its entire course as originally constructed, and to preserve its navigable condition throughout its entire course, and it may, when the permission of the federal government is obtained, change and improve said canal to provide terminal and harbor facilities for interchange of freight or for any other use in connection with transportation which the department may deem advantageous to the state.

Following are the main provisions of the act, approved June 17, 1919, to construct, operate and maintain a deep waterway from Lockport to a point in the Illinois river at or near Utica:

A deep waterway shall be constructed from the water power plant of the sanitary district of Chicago, at or near Lockport in the township of Lockport, in the county of Will, to a point in the Illinois river at or near Utica. Such waterway shall be known as "the Illinois waterway."

The general route of "the Illinois waterway" shall be as follows: Commencing at the water power plant of the sanitary district of Chicago, at or near Lockport, in the township of Lockport, in the county of Will, thence through the tail race of the sanitary district of Chicago to the junction of such tail race and the Des Plaines river, the Des Plaines river and Illinois and Michigan canal through the city of Joliet, the Des Plaines river to the Illinois river and the Illinois river to a point therein at or near Utica.

If, in the judgment of the department of public works and buildings, the utilization of sections of the Illinois and Des Plaines rivers is not practicable or feasible, then the general route above described may be deviated from in such sections and in lieu thereof the Illinois and Michigan canal may be used and improved, or channels outside of such rivers may be constructed.

The channel of the Illinois waterway, where practicable, shall be not less than 150 feet bottom width. The minimum depth of channel in the earth sections shall be not less than eight feet and in the rock sections not less than ten feet. The minimum depth over miter sills of the locks shall be not less than fourteen feet. The minimum width of locks shall be not less than 110 feet and the minimum length shall be not less than 600 feet usable length.

The general assembly declares and finds that "the Illinois waterway" along the route herein defined, with the minimum width and depth of channel herein prescribed, is practicable for a general plan and scheme of a deep waterway and is deemed most advantageous for such plan of deep waterway.

The construction, maintenance, control and operation of "the Illinois waterway" and its appurtenances shall devolve upon the department of public works and buildings.

Subject to the conditions and limitations prescribed by this act, and subject to any conditions and limitations which the federal government or the officers thereof may lawfully impose, the department of public works and buildings shall have power:

(1) To prepare plans and specifications for the construction of "the Illinois waterway" and its appurtenances;

(2) To construct, control, manage, maintain and operate such waterway and its appurtenances;

(3) To use or to lease, in whole or in part, the surplus waters of such waterway or the power developed therefrom;

(4) To construct, maintain and operate power plants, structures, buildings and appliances relative thereto for the utilization of the surplus waters arising from the construction, maintenance or operation of the waterway, and to lease, sell or otherwise dispose of the whole or any part of the electrical current or energy thereby generated;

(5) To establish and collect reasonable rates of toll for the passage through and the use of such waterway, dams, locks and other appurtenances within the limits of the state, but such waterway and its appurtenances shall be free for the transportation of any property of the United States or persons in the service thereof passing through the same;

(6) To prescribe reasonable rules and regulations in respect to all matters connected with the navigation and use of such waterway and its appurtenances;

(7) To acquire by donation, purchase, contract or exchange any property, real or personal, necessary or incident to the construction, maintenance, equipment, operation or repair of such waterway and its appurtenances;

(8) To acquire by condemnation under the eminent domain laws of this state all property necessary to be taken or damaged for the construction, maintenance, operation or repair of such waterway and its appurtenances;

(9) To enter upon and use any lands, waters, streams and materials of any description, necessary for the prosecution of the works contemplated by this act;

(10) To repair, replace or reconstruct any and all public bridges along the line of such waterway in order to provide safe and suitable navigation along such waterway, and to require the removal or alteration of bridges owned, controlled or operated by private corporations or persons which hinder or obstruct navigation;

(11) To exercise, during the construction of such waterway, police jurisdiction over such waterway and its appurtenances throughout its entire extent and within a distance of one mile on either side thereof outside the limits of cities and villages, and to prescribe reasonable police rules and regulations for the preservation of the public peace, the protection of property and the conservation of health;

(12) To prescribe and enforce, during the construction of such waterway, sanitary regulations for all camps, boarding and rooming houses and dwellings where employes of the department or of the contractors on such waterway and its appurtenances are domiciled;

(13) To sell and dispose of any machinery, tools, fixtures, stone, debris, material or personal property unnecessary for the proper management, construction, repair or use of the waterway or its appurtenances;

(14) To sell or to lease, from time to time, any of the lands or lots acquired for use in the construction of such waterway, or in the development of power incident thereto and no longer needed for the maintenance, use and operation of such waterway or water power;

(15) To employ, without reference to the state civil service act, as many engineers, draftsmen, surveyors, agents, clerks, superintending or expert help, laborers and other persons as may be necessary to the designing and construction of the waterway and its appurtenances;

(16) To make application to the federal government for all necessary permits;

(17) To make all contracts and to do all acts necessary to carry into effect the powers herein granted.

In the construction of such waterway the department of public works and buildings may proceed in either of the following ways:

(1) It may let the same or any part or portion thereof to the lowest responsible bidder; or

(2) It may do the same or any part or portion thereof, by the direct employment of services, labor, materials and equipment, and may procure and employ for such purpose the necessary superintendents, agents, office force, laborers, workmen, implements, tools, machinery and all other employes, equipment and services necessary or incidental to such construction.

The gross or total proceeds, receipts and income arising from the operation, management and maintenance of "the Illinois waterway" and its appurtenances, including all receipts from the utilization or lease of water power, shall be covered into a special fund in the treasury which shall be known as "the waterway maintenance fund."

ILLINOIS WATERWAY BONDS.

By an act approved June 17, 1919, the governor and secretary of state are authorized to have prepared and from time to time to execute and deliver to the state treasurer bonds of the state of Illinois to the amount of $20,000,000 for the purpose of constructing the deep waterway.

The bonds shall be known as Illinois waterway bonds, shall be of the denomination of $1,000 each, numbered from 1 to 20,000 both inclusive, be dated the 1st day of January, 1920, and bear interest, evidenced by coupons, at the rate of 4 per centum per annum, payable semiannually, and both principal and interest shall be payable at the office of the state treasurer. One million dollars in amount of the bonds shall become due on the 1st day of January in each of the years 1921 to 1940, both inclusive.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION.

That all of the provisions and benefits of an act of congress entitled "An act to provide for the promotion of vocational education; to provide for co-operation with the states in the promotion of such education in agriculture and the trades and industries; to provide for co-operation with the states in the preparation of teachers of vocational subjects, and to appropriate money and regulate its expenditures," approved Feb. 23, 1917, as amended, hereinafter referred to as the federal vocational education law, are hereby accepted by the state of Illinois.

Sec. 2. There is hereby established the board of vocational education. The board of vocational education shall consist of the director of registration and education, the superintendent of public instruction, the director of agriculture, the director of labor, and the director of trade and commerce.

The director of registration and education shall be the chairman of the board of vocational education, and the superintendent of public instruction shall be its executive officer.

The director of registration and education, the director of agriculture, the director of labor, the director of trade and commerce and the superintendent of public instruction shall serve as members of the board of vocational education during the respective terms of office for which they shall have been appointed or elected, as the case may be.

Sec. 3. The members of the board of vocational education shall serve without compensation, but they shall be reimbursed for their actual and necessary expenses incurred in the discharge of duties under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 4. The board of vocational education shall have power and it shall be its duty:

(a) To co-operate with the federal board for vocational education in the administration of the provisions of the federal vocational education law, to the extent and in the manner therein provided;

(b) To promote and aid in the establishment of schools and classes of the types and standards provided for in the plans of the board for vocational education, as approved by the federal board for vocational education, and to co-operate with state and local school authorities in the maintenance of such schools and classes;

(c) To conduct and prepare investigations and studies in relation to vocational education and to publish the results of such investigations and studies;

(d) Upon the recommendation of the executive officer to appoint, without reference to any civil service law which is now or which hereafter may be in force in this state, such technical assistants as may be necessary, and to prescribe their duties, compensation and terms of employment;

(e) Upon the recommendation of the executive officer to appoint, without reference to the provisions of any civil service law which is now or which hereafter may be in force in this state, such clerks and stenographers and other employes as may be necessary, and to prescribe their duties, compensation and terms of employment;

(f) To promulgate reasonable rules and regulations relating to the enforcement of the provisions of this act;

(g) To report, in writing, to the governor, annually on or before the first day of December, and at such other times and in such manner and upon such subjects as the governor may require. The annual report shall contain (1) a statement of the extent to which vocational education has been established and maintained in the state; (2) a statement of the existing condition of vocational education in the state; (3) a statement of suggestions and recommendations with reference to the development of vocational education in the state; and (4) an itemized statement of the amounts of money received from federal and state sources, and of the objects and purposes to which the respective items of these several amounts have been devoted; and

(h) To make such reports to the federal board of vocational education as may be required by the provisions of the federal vocational education law, and by the rules and regulations of the federal board of education.

Sec. 5. The state treasurer shall act as the custodian of all moneys allotted to this state under the provisions of the federal vocational education law. These moneys shall be kept by the state treasurer in a separate fund, to be known as "the federal vocational education fund," and shall be paid out only upon the requisition of the board of vocational education, in the manner hereinafter provided.

The auditor of public accounts is hereby authorized and directed to draw warrants upon the state treasurer against "the federal vocational education fund," upon vouchers certified to as correct by the executive officer of the board for vocational education and approved by the department of finance.

Sec. 6. Because of an emergency this act shall take effect upon its passage. (Approved March 6, 1919.)

ENFORCEMENT OF LIQUOR LAWS.

Through the enactment of a law known as the "search and seizure" act and approved June 21, 1919, stringent provisions are made for the enforcement of the liquor laws in Illinois. Some of the main points in the act follow:

"Whoever manufactures, sells or keeps for sale any intoxicating liquor for medicinal, sacramental, chemical, mechanical or manufacturing purposes, in prohibition territory, shall first secure from the attorney-general of this state a permit. Any person desiring to obtain a permit shall file a written application with the attorney-general, giving his name and address, nature of his business and full statement of grounds on which application is made.

"Whoever shall, within prohibition territory, in any manner manufacture, advertise, sell, keep for sale, order, purchase, receive, transport, take an order for, give away or in any manner dispose of any preparation, compound or tablet from which intoxicating liquor as a beverage is made, shall be punished in the manner prescribed in section 8 of this act.

"Whoever shall, by himself or another, either as principal, clerk or servant, within prohibition territory, directly or indirectly, in any newspaper, periodical, circular, handbill or price list, advertise any intoxicating liquor for sale or distribution, or publish or distribute any printed matter which either directly or indirectly advertises any intoxicating liquor for sale or distribution, or display or post or suffer to be displayed or posted, in, on or about any building, premises, boat, vehicle or any other place whatsoever under his control, any sign or other advertisement of any liquor manufacturer, wholesale or retail liquor dealer, or display or post or suffer to be displayed or posted, any sign or other advertisement indicating that intoxicating liquor is kept or distributed at such building, premises, boat, vehicle or other place, shall be punished in the manner prescribed in section 8 of this act.

"Whoever shall, by himself or another, either as principal, clerk or servant, within this state, ship or cause to be shipped, or offer for shipment, or transport by any means whatsoever upon any highway in, through or into prohibition territory, any vessel or package containing any intoxicating liquor which is not so labeled or marked on the outside cover thereof as to plainly show the true name and address of the consignor and consignee, the kind and quantity of liquor contained therein, and the purpose for which such liquor is to be used by the consignee, and the place where such liquor is to be used by the consignee, shall be punished in the manner prescribed in section 8 of this act.

"Whoever shall violate any provision of the foregoing section of this act, or shall do or neglect, omit or refuse to do, anything required or prohibited by this act when there is no specific penalty or punishment imposed by this act for such act or omission, shall for each offense, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than $50, nor more than $500, or imprisoned in the county jail for not less than twenty days nor more than sixty days, or both in the discretion of the court. If any person shall be convicted of violating any provision of any such sections, and shall subsequently violate any provision of any such sections, for such second and each subsequent violation he shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than $200 nor more than $5,000, and be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than ninety days nor more than one year, in the discretion of the court."

The act prescribes severe penalties for druggists, pharmacists and physicians who violate the conditions under which they may dispense or prescribe liquors for medicinal, sacramental or other permissible purposes.

"All places within prohibition territory where any intoxicating liquor is manufactured, kept for sale, used or in any manner disposed of in violation of any provision of this act shall be taken and held and are hereby declared to be common nuisances, and may be abated as such.

"All intoxicating liquor manufactured, kept for sale, used, disposed of or transported within prohibition territory, in violation of any law of this state, with all vessels containing the same, and all implements, furniture and vehicles kept or used for any such purposes, are hereby declared to be common nuisances, and shall be subjected to seizure, confiscation and destruction in the manner hereinafter provided: Whenever complaint is made in writing, verified by affidavit, to any judge having cognizance of criminal offenses within such prohibition territory, that complainant has just and reasonable grounds to believe and does believe that intoxicating liquor is manufactured, kept for sale, used, disposed of or transported in violation of any law of this state in any house, building, premises, boat, vehicle, receptacle or any other place whatsoever (particularly describing and designating the same) in prohibition territory, with the facts upon which such belief is based, the judge may issue a search warrant as hereinafter provided. Provided, however, no warrant shall be issued to search a private dwelling occupied as such unless such warrant is signed by two judges, and unless such residence is a place of public resort, or intoxicating liquor is sold or kept for sale in violation of the law."

ENGLISH LANGUAGE IN SCHOOLS.

Every person having control of any child between the ages of 7 and 16 years shall annually cause such child to attend some public school (or some private school in which the instruction in the elementary branches of education is in the English language) for the entire time during which the school attended is in session, which shall not be less than seven months of actual teaching: Provided, however, that this act shall not apply in case the child has been or is being instructed for a like period in each and every year in the elementary branches of education by a person or persons competent to give such instruction, which instruction of the child in the elementary branches of education shall be in the English language; or in case the child's physical or mental condition renders his or her attendance impracticable or inexpedient; or in case the child is excused for temporary absence for cause by the principal or teacher of the school which the child attends; or in case the child is between the ages of 14 and 16 years and is necessarily and lawfully employed during the hours when the public school is in session. For every neglect of the duty prescribed by this section, the person so offending shall forfeit to the use of the public schools of the city, town, or district in which the child resides a sum not less than $5 nor more than $20 and cost of suit, and shall stand committed until such fine and costs of suit are fully paid.

Because the English language is the common as well as official language of our country, and because it is essential to good citizenship that each citizen shall have or speedily acquire, as his natural tongue, the language in which the laws of the land, the decrees of the courts and the proclamations and pronouncements of its officials are made, and shall easily and naturally think in the language in which the obligations of his citizenship are defined, the instruction in the elementary branches of education in all schools in Illinois shall be in the English language: Provided, That this shall not apply to vocational schools where the pupils have already received the required instruction in English during the current school year. (Approved June 28, 1919.)

OLD SALEM STATE PARK.

On behalf of the state of Illinois, the department of public works and buildings shall have the power to acquire by donation the title to the land formerly constituting the site of the town of New Salem (the home of Abraham Lincoln 1831-1837) and land contiguous thereto, now the property of the Old Salem Chautauqua association, comprising sixty-two acres more or less. The title to such land shall be taken in the name of the people of the state of Illinois and the deed conveying such property shall be deposited in the office of the secretary of state. The land so acquired shall be set aside as a state park, to be known as the Old Salem State park, and shall never be devoted to any other use.

Sec. 2. After the acquisition of the land formerly constituting the site of the town of New Salem and the land contiguous thereto as aforesaid by the state of Illinois, it shall be the duty of the department of public works and buildings:

1. To take possession of such land and establish and maintain thereon a state park which, subject to such reasonable rules and regulations as may be deemed necessary, shall be free of access to the public.

2. Erect thereon a suitable building of sufficient dimensions to house and preserve all relics and mementos of Abraham Lincoln's residence in the town of New Salem.

3. To provide a residence for the caretaker or custodian of Old Salem State park, and make such other improvements as may be necessary.

4. Complete the restoration of, as far as possible, all buildings which were standing thereon during the time that Abraham Lincoln resided in the town of New Salem.

5. Employ a caretaker or custodian for Old Salem State park; and

6. Employ such other persons at such times as may be required for the care, preservation and protection of Old Salem State park and for the accommodation of the public. (Approved April 3, 1919.)

HOUSING COMMISSION.

The Illinois housing and building commission is hereby created. Such commission shall consist of seven members, all to be appointed by the governor. Of the seven members of said commission two shall be members of the senate of the 51st general assembly, two shall be members of the house of representatives of the 51st general assembly, one shall be an architect, one shall be a building contractor, and the seventh member any voter in the state of Illinois. The governor shall designate the chairman of said commission.

Sec. 2. The commissioners shall meet and organize as soon as possible after their appointment. The duties and functions of the commission shall cease and the terms of office of the members thereof shall terminate upon the convening of the 52d general assembly.

Sec. 3. It shall be the duty of the commission to prepare and draft a state housing code, a state building code, and a zoning bill for the state of Illinois, for presentation to the 52d general assembly.

Sec. 4. The department of public works and buildings, the department of public welfare, the department of public health, the department of trade and commerce, the department of labor, the joint legislative reference bureau and all other departments and agencies of the state government shall furnish such information and assistance as may be required of them by the commission, with reference to the performance of its duties under the provisions of this act. (Approved June 28, 1919.)

ADVOCATING OVERTHROW OF GOVERNMENT.

Be it enacted, etc.: That an act entitled "An act to revise the law in relation to criminal jurisprudence," approved March 27, 1874, in force July 1, 1874, as amended, is amended by adding to division I. thereof six new sections, to be known as sections 265a, 265b, 265c, 265d, 265e, 265f and 265g, to read as follows:

Sec. 265a. It shall be unlawful for any person openly to advocate, by word of mouth or writing, the reformation or overthrow, by violence or any other unlawful means, of the representative form of government now secured to the citizens of the United States and the several states by the constitution of the United States and the constitutions of the several states.

Sec. 265b. It shall be unlawful for any person to publish, issue or knowingly sell or distribute any book, paper, document or other written or printed matter which advocates crime and violence as a means of accomplishing the reformation or overthrow of the constitutional representative form of government so secured to the citizens of the United States and the several states.

Sec. 265c. It shall be unlawful for any person to organize, aid in the organization of, or become a member of any society or association the object of which is to advocate the reformation or overthrow of the existing form of government by violence or any other unlawful means.

Sec. 265d. It shall be unlawful for any person voluntarily and with knowledge of the purpose of such meeting or assembly to be present at any meeting or assembly at which the reformation or overthrow of the existing form of government by crime and violence is advocated.

Sec. 265e. It shall be unlawful for any person owning, possessing or controlling the use of any room, building or other premises, knowingly to permit the same to be used as the headquarters of any organization which advocates crime and violence or as a meeting place for any meeting or assembly at which crime and violence is advocated, as a means of accomplishing the reformation or overthrow of the existing form of government.

Sec. 265f. It shall be unlawful to display or exhibit at any meeting, gathering or parade, public or private, any flag, banner, emblem or other insignia symbolizing or intending to symbolize a purpose to overthrow by force or violence or by physical injury to person or property the representative form of government now secured to the citizens of the United States and the several states by the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of Illinois.

Sec. 265g. Any person who shall violate sections 265a, 265b, 265c or 265f of this act shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction therefor shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a period of not less than one year nor more than ten years. Any person who shall violate sections 265d and 265e of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction therefor shall be punished by a fine or not less than $500 nor more than $1,000, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not less than six months nor more than one year, or both. (Approved June 28, 1919.)

BOYCOTTS AND BLACKLISTS.

Section 46 of division I. of "An act to revise the law in relation to criminal jurisprudence," approved March 27, 1874, in force July 1, 1874, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

Sec. 46. If any two or more persons conspire or agree together, or the officers or executive committee of any society or organization or corporation, shall issue or utter any circular or edict, as the action of or instruction to its members, or any other persons, societies, organizations or corporations, for the purpose of establishing a so-called boycott or blacklist, or shall post or distribute any written or printed notice in any place, with the fraudulent or malicious intent wrongfully and wickedly to injure the person, character, business or employment, or property of another, or to obtain money or other property by false pretenses, or to do any illegal act injurious to the public trade, health, morals, police or administration of public justice, or to prevent competition in the letting of any contract by the state, or the authorities of any counties, city, town or village, or to induce any person not to enter into such competition, or to commit any felony, they shall be deemed guilty of a conspiracy; and every such offender, whether as individuals or as the officers of any society or organization, and every person convicted of conspiracy at common law, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or fined not exceeding $2,000, or both.

Associations, corporate or otherwise, of farmers, gardeners or dairymen, including live stock farmers and fruit growers, engaged in making collective sales or marketing for its members or shareholders of farm, orchard or dairy products, produced by its members or shareholders, are not conspiracies, contracts, agreements, arrangements or combinations made by such associations or the members, officers or directors thereof in making such collective sales and marketing and prescribing the terms and conditions thereof are not conspiracies and they shall not be construed to be injurious to the public trade. (Approved June 30, 1919.)

COMMUNITY BUILDINGS.

Subject to the provisions of this act, any town may levy an annual tax of not to exceed 2 mills on each dollar of the assessed valuation of taxable property therein for the purpose of erecting and maintaining community buildings. Such tax shall be levied and collected in the same manner as other general taxes.

Sec. 2. Upon the filing with the town clerk of any town a petition containing the names of not less than fifty legal voters of such town praying that the tax herein authorized be levied, the question of levying such tax shall be submitted to the voters of such town at a special election to be called for that purpose, not less than thirty nor more than sixty days after the filing of such petition: Provided, That the question of levying such tax shall be submitted at a regular town election if such election is to be held not less than twenty nor more than ninety days after the filing of the petition. And provided, further, That such question shall not be submitted in any town in which there is a population of over 5,000 inhabitants according to the latest federal census.

Sec. 3. If a majority of those voting on the question of levying a tax for the establishment, erection and maintenance of a community building shall vote in favor thereof, an annual tax of not to exceed 2 mills on each dollar of the assessed valuation of the taxable property shall be levied and collected for that purpose.

Sec. 4. The establishment or erection of a community building and the maintenance thereof shall be under the supervision of a board of managers. The board of managers shall consist of three persons, residents of the town, who shall be elected at the regular town election for a term of three years. The board of managers shall serve without compensation. The first board of managers shall be elected at a special election called for that purpose after the ratification of the question of levying the tax hereby authorized, one for one year, one for two years and one for three years, to be determined by lot. Thereafter one person shall be annually elected to the board of managers at the regular town election, for a term of three years.

Sec. 5. The board of managers shall have power to lease a building, or buildings, for the establishment of a community building, or to select a site and cause the erection of a building for that purpose, and may exercise any and all other powers necessarily incidental in order to carry out the provisions of this act. The town treasurer shall pay out moneys derived from the tax hereby authorized only on the order of a majority of the board of managers.

Sec. 6. If the board of managers shall deem it necessary to issue bonds for the purpose of obtaining sufficient funds to establish a community building, it shall cause the question of issuing such bonds to be submitted to a vote of the people of the town, at an election to be called for that purpose. Notices of such election shall be posted in at least five of the most public places in such town, for at least ten days prior to the date fixed for holding such election. Such notices shall state the amount of bonds proposed to be issued, the date of maturity and the rate of interest to be paid thereon.

The ballots for use in such election shall be in substantially the following form:

For bond issue of.....dollars payable in.....years with interest at the rate of.....per cent per annum for community building purposes.
Against bond issue of.....dollars payable in.....years with interest at the rate of.....per cent per annum for community building purposes.

Such bonds shall mature on or before twenty years from the date thereof and shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed 5 per cent per annum, payable annually or semiannually as the board of managers may determine. If the interest is to be paid semiannually, that fact shall be stated in the notices of election and on the ballots. Such bonds shall be sold at not less than par. From the proceeds of the annual tax levy authorized by this act, the board of managers shall provide a sinking fund for the retirement of such bonds, and such bonds shall be payable only out of such proceeds.

Sec. 7. The community building of any town may be dedicated to the soldiers and sailors of such town and bronze tablets or other memorials in honor of such soldiers and sailors may be placed therein by the board of managers.

Sec. 8. Subject to the reasonable rules and regulations of the board of managers, the community building shall be for the free use and benefit of the inhabitants of such town for lectures, concerts, free amusements and entertainments, and all other general educational purposes. The annual town meetings and other public assemblies may be held therein. The board of managers shall have power to lease, temporarily, the community building when not in use for public purposes for any reasonable and legitimate private use on such terms as may be deemed reasonable and proper. Private lessees of a community building may charge admission fees. All money received from temporary rentals shall be turned over to the town treasurer and shall be used only for the maintenance of the community building.

Sec. 9. The board of managers shall make a full and complete annual report of all its actions to the town board of auditors. (Approved June 30, 1919.)

CHICAGO—FIFTY WARDS.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc.: That an act entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation of cities and villages," approved April 10, 1872, as amended by subsequent acts, be and the same hereby is amended, in pursuance of section 34 of article IV. of the constitution, by repealing the whole of part 4 of article XII, added by the act approved June 27, 1913; by adding to part 2 of article XII. of said act one new section to be known as section 8; and by adding to said article XII, two new parts to be known as parts 4 and 5; which new sections and parts shall read as follows:

Part Two.

Sec. 8. City Clerk and City Treasurer—Election, Tenure. At the general election held in 1923, and quadrennially thereafter, there shall be elected a city clerk and a city treasurer, each of whom shall hold his office for a term of four years and until his successor is elected and qualified. No person, however, shall be elected to the office of city treasurer for two terms in succession.

Part Four.

Concerning the Election of Aldermen.

Sec. 8. General Municipal Elections for Aldermen—Terms Prescribed. (a) If the provisions of this act become operative in time to govern the general election for aldermen to be held in the year 1920, one alderman shall then be elected from each ward to serve for a period of one year. If this act shall be adopted at the same time as that at which aldermen are elected in 1920, such adoption shall limit the term of aldermen so elected to one year. The general election for aldermen under this act in 1920 shall be held upon the day prescribed by law for a primary to elect delegates and alternate delegates to national nominating conventions and to secure an expression with respect to candidates for nomination for the office of president of the United States, if such a primary is held in the year 1920 and shall be conducted by the same judges and clerks. All provisions of election laws shall apply to such election, except that the hours for keeping open the polls shall be those prescribed by "An act to provide for the holding of primary elections by political parties," approved March 9, 1910, in force July 1, 1910, as subsequently amended. A general election for aldermen shall be held in the year 1921, at the time prescribed by law, at which one alderman shall be elected from each ward to serve for a term of two years. The next general election for aldermen shall take place in the year 1923, at which time one alderman shall be elected from each ward and thereafter general elections for aldermen shall be held each second and each fourth year, according as the term of aldermen is determined by popular vote under the terms of this act to be two or four years.

(b) The terms of this paragraph shall apply if this act does not become operative in time to govern the general election for aldermen in 1920 or to limit the terms of such aldermen, but does become operative in time to govern the general election for aldermen to be held in the year 1921. One alderman shall be elected from each ward at the general election for aldermen in the year 1921, but no general election for aldermen shall be held in the year 1922, it being the purpose of this act that the council shall be composed of one alderman from each ward after the expiration of the terms of aldermen elected at the general election for aldermen in the year 1920. Any person serving as alderman under an election of 1920 may be a candidate for alderman in the general election for aldermen to be held in the year 1921, and his election at such time shall constitute an abandonment of the office held by him under his election in the year 1920 for the unexpired term thereof, if any, as soon as he has qualified under his election in the year 1921. A general election for aldermen shall be held in the year 1923, at which one alderman shall be elected from each ward, and thereafter general elections for aldermen shall be held each second or fourth year, according as the term of aldermen is determined by popular vote under the terms of this act to be two or four years.

(c) If this act shall become operative at any time subsequent to the times provided for in the foregoing paragraphs, the provisions of this paragraph shall govern. If the act becomes operative in time to govern the general election of aldermen to be held in an odd numbered year, the provisions of this section with respect to the election in the year 1921 shall apply, with appropriate changes of dates. The terms of aldermen first elected shall always expire with the term of the mayor then in office, and new elections for a two or four year term, as the case may be, shall be held at the time when the mayor is to be elected. If this act becomes operative in time to govern the general election of aldermen to be held in an even numbered year which immediately precedes the year in which a mayor is to be elected, aldermen at such election shall be elected for the term of one year, and a general election for aldermen for a two or four year term, as the case may be, shall be held at the time when the mayor is to be elected. If this act becomes operative in time to govern the general election of aldermen to be held in an even numbered year other than that which immediately precedes the year in which a mayor is to be elected, aldermen at such election shall be elected for a one year term, aldermen at the next general election for aldermen to be elected for a two year term, if a two year term shall have been adopted by a popular vote under the terms of this act; if under the terms of this act a four year term for aldermen shall have been adopted then aldermen shall be elected for a three year term at the election of such even numbered year. New elections for a two or four year term, as the case may be, shall then take place at the time when the mayor is to be next elected.

(d) All elections for aldermen shall be in accordance with the provisions of law in force and operative in the city of Chicago for such elections at the time that such elections are held, and vacancies occurring in such office shall be filled in the manner prescribed by law for filling vacancies. Except as otherwise provided in this section, the number of aldermen under the provisions of this act shall be one from each ward.

Sec. 2. Salary of Aldermen. The aldermen elected under the provisions of this act may receive for their services such compensation as shall be fixed by ordinance, at the rate of not to exceed $5,000 per annum for each alderman. The salaries of the aldermen elected at the first general election for aldermen provided for in this act shall be fixed by the outgoing council.

Part Five.

Concerning the Redistricting of the City Into Wards.

Section 1. City to Have Fifty Wards. The city of Chicago shall be divided into fifty wards. In the formation of wards the population of each shall be as nearly equal as practicable and each shall be composed of contiguous and compact territory.

Sec. 2. Additional Territory to Be Annexed to Existing Wards. Whenever territory is annexed to the city, the city council shall by ordinance declare it a part of the ward or wards which it adjoins; Provided, That at any time after such territory is annexed the city council may provide for the redistricting of the city in accordance with the provision of this act.

Sec. 3. City to Be Redistricted After Adoption of the Act. Within three months after the adoption of this act by the voters it shall be the duty of the city council to pass an ordinance redistricting the city into fifty wards in accordance with the provisions of this act. Such redistricting of the city shall not apply to the general election for aldermen to be held in the year 1920, but shall apply to the first general election thereafter and until the city is again redistricted as herein provided for. All elections of aldermen shall be held from the present wards until a redistricting is had as provided for in this act.

Sec. 4. When Redistricting Ordinance Takes Effect—Substitute Ordinance May Be Submitted. No such redistricting ordinance shall take effect until the expiration of fifteen days after its passage. If within such fifteen days one-fifth or more of the aldermen elected, who did not vote to pass such redistricting ordinance, file with the city clerk a proposed substitute ordinance redistricting the city in accordance with the provisions of this act, together with a petition signed by them demanding that the question of the adoption of the redistricting ordinance passed by the city council, together with the question of the adoption of such substitute ordinance, be submitted to the voters, then such redistricting ordinance passed by the city council shall not go into effect until the question of this adoption shall have been submitted to a popular vote: Provided, That no aldermen shall have the right to sign more than one such petition. Upon the expiration of such fifteen days the city clerk shall promptly certify to the board of election commissioners of the city of Chicago the ordinance passed by the city council and such substitute ordinance or ordinances and petition or petitions, and it shall thereupon be the duty of the board of election commissioners to submit the ordinances so certified to a popular vote at the next general, municipal or special election, to be held in and for the entire city not less than forty days after the passage of such redistricting ordinance by the city council.

Sec. 5. Failure of Council to Act—One-Fifth of the Aldermen May Submit Redistricting Ordinance. If the city council shall fail at any time to pass a redistricting ordinance as required herein, one-fifth or more of the aldermen elected shall have the right to file with the city clerk, not less than forty days before the date of holding any general, municipal or special election, to be held in and for the entire city, an ordinance redistricting the city in accordance with the provisions of this act, together with a petition signed by them demanding that such ordinance be submitted to the legal voters at the next such election in and for the entire city to be held not less than forty days after the filing of such ordinance and petition: Provided, That no alderman shall have the right to sign more than one such petition. Upon the expiration of the time for filing any such ordinance the city clerk shall promptly certify to the board of election commissioners of the city of Chicago any ordinance or ordinances, together with any petition or petitions, so filed; and thereupon it shall be the duty of the board of election commissioners to submit such ordinance or ordinances to a popular vote at the election specified in such petition or petitions: Provided, That if, after the filing of any such ordinance and petition and not less than forty days prior to such election, the city council shall pass an ordinance redistricting the city, then the question of the adoption of any ordinance or ordinances filed with the city clerk in accordance with the provisions of this section shall not be submitted to a popular vote. However, after such action by the city council, a substitute ordinance or ordinances may be proposed in the manner provided in section 4 hereof.

Sec. 6. Redistricting Ordinance Submitted—Form of Ballot. If the question of the adoption of one of two or more redistricting ordinances is submitted to the voters at any election, the ballots used for the submission of such proposition shall, in addition to the other requirements of law, conform substantially to the following requirements:

1. Above the propositions submitted the following words shall be printed in capital letters:

"Propositions for the Redistricting of the City of Chicago."

2. Immediately below said words shall be printed in small letters the direction to voters: "Vote for One."

3. Following thereupon shall be printed each proposition to be voted upon in substantially the following form:

For the adoption of an ordinance for the redistricting of the city of Chicago (here insert "passed by the city council" or "proposed by Aldermen (here insert names of the aldermen signing petition)" as the case may require).
For the adoption of an ordinance for the redistricting of the city of Chicago proposed by Aldermen (here insert names of the aldermen signing the petition).

Whenever the question of the adoption of but one redistricting ordinance shall be submitted to the voters, the form of the ballot shall be substantially as follows:

Shall the ordinance proposed by Aldermen (here insert the names of the aldermen signing the petition) be adopted?	Yes
	No

4. All the propositions shall be printed in uniform type.

Sec. 7. Redistricting Ordinance Submitted—When Approved and in Effect. If the question of the adoption of one of two or more redistricting ordinances is submitted to the voters at any election, the ordinance for which the highest number of votes is cast shall be deemed approved and shall thereupon be in force and effect. If the question of the adoption of but one such ordinance is submitted at any election and a majority of the votes cast thereon are for the adoption of such ordinance, it shall thereupon be in force and effect; otherwise such ordinance shall not go into effect.

Sec. 8. Election and Ballot Laws to Apply Where Consistent Herewith. All election and ballot laws in force in the city of Chicago governing the submission of propositions to a popular vote or applicable thereto and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act shall apply to and govern the submission of any propositions herein provided for.

Sec. 9. Redistricting in 1931 and Decennially Thereafter. On or before the 1st day of December, 1931, and every ten years thereafter, the city council shall by ordinance redistrict the city on the basis of the national census of the preceding year. All provisions of this act, relating to redistricting of the city immediately following the adoption of this act, including the provisions for the filing and submission of substitute or other redistricting ordinances, shall apply with equal force and effect to the redistricting of the city in 1931 and decennially thereafter.

Sec. 2. This act shall not be in force in the city of Chicago until the question of its adoption shall first have been submitted to the legal voters of the city of Chicago and approved by a majority of those voting thereon.

The question of the adoption of this act by the city of Chicago shall be submitted to such legal voters at the first general, municipal or special election, to be held in and for the entire city after the passage of this act, or before that time at a special election to be called by the city council by ordinance.

If this act shall fail to be adopted at the election aforesaid by a majority of the legal voters of the city of Chicago voting thereon, the city council of the city of Chicago may by ordinance direct that the question of the adoption of this act be again submitted to such legal voters at any such general, municipal or special election in and for the entire city to be held not less than thirty days from and after the passage of such ordinance, and not less than fifteen months prior to the expiration of the term of the mayor in office at the time of the passage of such ordinance. The city clerk of the city of Chicago shall promptly certify the passage of such ordinance to the board of election commissioners of the city of Chicago, and it shall thereupon be the duty of said board of election commissioners to submit the question of the adoption of this act to such legal voters at such election.

If this act shall fail to be adopted at the election first provided for herein by a majority of the legal voters thereon, the question of the adoption of this act may also again be submitted to the legal voters of the city of Chicago, at any general, municipal or special election to be held in and for the entire city not less than forty days from and after the filing of the petition hereinafter provided for, and not less than fifteen months prior to the expiration of the term of the mayor in office at the time of filing such petition, in the following manner: A petition signed by legal voters of the city equal in number to at least 5 per cent of the legal voters of the city voting at the last preceding election for mayor, demanding the submission of the question of the adoption of this act, may be filed with said board of election commissioners and it shall thereupon be the duty of said board of election commissioners to submit the question of the adoption of this act to such legal voters at the election specified in said petition.

If this act shall fail to be adopted at any time at which it is submitted under the requirements of this section by a majority of the legal voters of the city of Chicago voting thereon, then it may be resubmitted from time to time by ordinance or petition as above provided.

The said board of election commissioners shall give notice of any election provided for in this section by publishing a notice thereof, not less than twenty days prior to such election, in at least one newspaper of general circulation published in the city of Chicago.

The ballot to be used at such election shall be in substantially the following form:

For the adoption of an act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation of cities and villages," so as to provide for the election of one alderman from each ward, for redistricting the city of Chicago into fifty wards and for the election of the city clerk and city treasurer for terms of four years each.	Yes
	No

If a majority of the legal voters of the city of Chicago, voting thereon at any such election, shall vote for the adoption of this act, it shall thereby and thereupon be adopted and shall be in force and effect and become operative in the city of Chicago. Aldermen elected at the election of 1923 and at general elections for aldermen subsequent thereto shall serve for the term determined by popular vote in accordance with the provisions of this section. At any time when the question of the adoption of this act is submitted to the legal voters of the city of Chicago, there shall also be submitted upon the same ballot questions to appear as follows:

"Vote for one."

For the adoption of a two year term for aldermen
For the adoption of a four year term for aldermen.

If a majority of those voting on the questions shall vote for a two year term, the term of aldermen elected in 1923 and at subsequent general elections for aldermen shall be two years, and a general election for aldermen shall be held at the time prescribed by law, each second year after 1923. If a majority of those voting on the question shall vote for a four year term, the term of aldermen elected in 1923 and at subsequent general elections for aldermen shall be four years and a general election for aldermen shall be held at the time prescribed by law each fourth year after 1923. If this act shall be adopted so as to become operative subsequent to the general election to be held in the year 1923, a general election for aldermen shall always come at the same time as the election for mayor.

Sec. 3. That an act constituting part 4 of article XII. and entitled "An act to amend article XII. of an act entitled 'An act to provide for the incorporation of cities and villages,' approved April 10, 1872, as amended by subsequent acts and as amended by an act approved May 18, 1905, and in force July 1, 1905," approved June 27, 1913, be and the same is hereby repealed. (Approved June 28, 1919.)

CITY COUNCILS AND TRUSTEES—POWERS —ZONING.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc.: That in addition to existing powers, and to the end that adequate light, pure air and safety from fire and other dangers may be secured, that the taxable value of land and buildings throughout the city or village may be conserved, that congestion in the public streets may be lessened or avoided, and that the public health, safety, comfort and welfare may otherwise be promoted, the city council in each city, and the president and board of trustees in each village, shall have the following powers:

To regulate and limit the height and bulk of buildings hereafter to be erected, to regulate and limit the intensity of the use of lot areas and to regulate and determine the area of yards, courts and other open spaces within and surrounding such buildings; to classify, regulate and restrict the location of trades and industries and the location of buildings designed for specified uses; to make regulations designating the trades and industries that shall be excluded or subjected to special regulations within fixed districts and designating uses for which buildings may not be erected or altered in such district; to divide the city or village or portions of same into districts of such number, shape and area as may be deemed best suited to carry out the purposes of this act, including the power to create and establish residential districts within which new buildings designed for business may be excluded, restricted or limited, and including the power to regulate and restrict the location of trades and industries and buildings designed for same in such a way that classes of industries which affect the general comfort of the public may be excluded from districts where commercial and professional pursuits which do not affect the comfort of the public are carried on; and to prevent the alteration or remodeling of existing buildings in such a way as to avoid the restrictions and limitations lawfully imposed on any such district: Provided, That in ordinances passed under the authority of this act due allowance shall be made for existing conditions, the conservation of property values, the direction of building development to the best advantage of the entire city or village, and the uses to which property is devoted at the time of the enactment of any such ordinance, and that the powers of this act given shall not be exercised so as to deprive the owner of any existing property of its use for the purpose to which it is then lawfully devoted: And provided, further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent additions to and alterations of any existing plant or building made to further the purpose to which it is then lawfully devoted.

Sec. 2. No ordinance under the authority of this act shall be enacted until a public hearing has been held upon the subject matter of the proposed ordinance before a commission, board or committee authorized by the city council in cities, or the president and board of trustees in villages, to investigate and make recommendations concerning such subject matter, and an opportunity afforded the owners of land or lots within the proposed district to file written objection as herein provided for. Such public hearing shall be held only after publication in a newspaper of such city or village of a notice of the time and place of such hearing at least thirty days in advance thereof and the posting of such notice at not less than four different places within such district, which notice shall indicate the boundaries of the territory to be affected both by the designation of the street and house numbers included and by the legal description of the property therein, and shall state what regulations under the authority of this act affecting such territory are to be considered at such hearing. In addition to making publication and posting notices as herein provided, the officer or officers authorized to hold said public hearing shall cause a notice of similar import to be mailed to the person shown by the records of the county collector as the one who paid the taxes during the last preceding calendar year on each lot, block, tract or parcel of land situated within such territory, at the residence of the person so paying the taxes on each lot, block, tract or parcel of land, if the same can on diligent inquiry be found, and if the same cannot on diligent inquiry be found, such notice shall be directed to such person at the general delivery of the postoffice in the city or village in which said district is proposed to be made. The affidavit of the officer designated by ordinance as the one to give such notice to the effect that such publication was made in such newspaper and by such posting and that such notices were mailed shall be taken as conclusive evidence that sufficient notice was given to all parties interested. When a district is first created no ordinance shall be passed hereunder which shall enlarge or reduce or otherwise change the boundaries of the territory as indicated in such notice without another such notice and public hearing. Said public hearing shall be conducted by the said commission, board or committee and may be temporarily adjourned and reconvened from time to time until final adjournment at the discretion of the said commission, board or committee. After such final adjournment said commission, board or committee shall make its report and recommendation to the city council or board of trustees, as the case may be, and file the same with the city or village clerk within ten days of the date of such adjournment.

Sec. 3. At any time after the public hearing herein provided for, and not more than thirty days after such commission, board or committee shall file its report as required herein, the owners of a majority of the land or lots within the proposed district according to frontage on the streets dedicated to public use shall have the right to file their objection in writing to the formation of such district or to the regulations or restrictions proposed therein. Such written objection may consist of one sheet or of a number of sheets bound together, with the signatures of such owners, the location of the property and the amount of frontage owned by each stated thereon after each name, and the same may be filed with the commission, board or committee designated as the proper authority to conduct such proceedings. Upon the filing of such objection, if it shall appear that the owners of such a majority according to frontage are opposed to the formation or creation of such district as is proposed, or to the regulations or restrictions proposed for any such district, all proceedings for same shall be discontinued, and no ordinance for the creation or formation of such district in such territory shall be passed, and no new proceedings for the formation or creation of such district within the said territory shall be begun within one year after the filing of such objection: Provided, That if said objection shall state that it is directed only against certain of the proposed regulations and restrictions, specifying same, new proceedings as herein provided for may be begun at any time for the purpose of creating such district after changing or modifying the proposed regulations and restrictions.

Sec. 4. The regulations imposed and the districts created under the authority of this act may be amended, supplemented or changed from time to time by ordinance after the ordinance establishing same has gone into effect, but no such change shall be made without notice and public hearing in the same manner as when such district is first created, and in case of written protest against a proposed amendment, supplement or change, signed by the owners of 20 per cent of the frontage proposed to be altered, or by the owners of 20 per cent of the frontage immediately adjoining or across an alley therefrom, or by the owners of 20 per cent of the frontage directly opposite the frontage proposed to be altered, filed with the said commission, board or committee so designated, such amendment shall not be passed except by the favorable vote of two-thirds of the members of the city council in cities or of the members of the board of trustees in villages: Provided, That it shall always be within the power of the owners of a majority of the lands and lots according to frontage within a proposed addition to such district to prevent such addition by filing objection thereto as herein provided.

Sec. 5. Upon the passage of an ordinance under the authority of this act a certified copy of the same, together with a plat of the territory affected certified to by the mayor of the city or president of the board of trustees of the village, as the case may be, shall be filed for record in the office of the recorder of deeds of the count in which the said territory is located, and no such ordinance shall take effect until the same is so recorded. (Approved June 28, 1919.)

NONPARTISAN ELECTIONS FOR ALDERMEN.

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc.: That an act entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation of cities and villages," approved April 10, 1872, in force July 1, 1872, as amended by subsequent acts, be and the same is hereby amended, in pursuance of section 34 of Article IV, of the constitution, by adding to article XII, thereof twelve new sections to be known as sections 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14 of part 4 thereof, said new sections to read as follows:

Part Four.

Sec. 4. To Whom Applicable. The provisions of this act shall apply to all elections for aldermen in the city of Chicago. The name of no person shall be printed upon the official ballot as a candidate for alderman unless the terms of this act shall have been complied with. If recall elections are provided for, to be held within the city of Chicago, the provisions of this act shall apply to such elections, except to the extent that provisions inconsistent herewith are made by law providing for such recall elections.

Sec. 5. Times for Elections. General elections for aldermen shall be held in the year or years fixed by law for holding the same, on the last Tuesday of February of such year. Any supplementary election for aldermen held under the provisions of this act shall be held on the first Tuesday of April next following the holding of such general aldermanic election. Special aldermanic elections shall be held on the date provided for by the ordinance calling the same, and if followed by a supplementary election, such supplementary election shall be held four weeks thereafter.

If any general municipal election for aldermen is held at any date other than the last Tuesday in February, the supplementary municipal election following the same shall be held four weeks after the date of such general municipal election.

Sec. 6. Candidate Receiving Majority Elected—Supplementary Elections. The candidate receiving a majority of the votes cast for alderman in each ward at any general or special election shall be declared elected. In the event that no candidate receives a majority of such votes in any ward or wards a supplementary election shall be held at the time prescribed in the preceding section. At such supplementary election the names of the candidates in each of such wards receiving the highest and second highest number of votes at the preceding general or special election and no others shall be placed on the official ballot: Provided, however, That if there be any candidate who, under the provisions of this section, would have been entitled to a place on the ballot at the supplementary election except for the fact that some other candidate received an equal number of votes, then all such candidates receiving such equal number of votes shall have their names printed on the ballot as candidates at such succeeding supplementary election. The candidate receiving the highest number of votes at such supplementary election shall be declared elected. Such supplementary election shall be deemed a special election under the election and ballot laws in force in the city of Chicago and shall be governed thereby except in so far as such laws are inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

Sec. 7. Nomination by Petition. All nominations for aldermen of any ward in the city shall be by petition. All petitions for nominations of candidates shall be signed by such a number of legal voters as will aggregate not less than 2 per cent and not more than 5 per cent of all the votes cast for alderman in such ward at the last preceding general election. All such petitions, and procedure with respect thereto, shall conform in other respects to the provisions of the election and ballot laws then in force in the city of Chicago concerning the nomination of independent candidates for public office by petition. The method of nomination herein provided is exclusive of and replaces all other methods heretofore provided by law.

Sec. 8. Candidates May Withdraw. Any candidate for alderman under the provisions of this act may withdraw his name as a candidate by filing with the board of election commissioners of the city of Chicago not later than twenty days before the holding of the election his written request signed by him and duly acknowledged before an officer qualified to take acknowledgments of deeds, whereupon his name shall not be printed as a candidate upon the official ballot.

If any candidate at an aldermanic election who was not elected as provided for herein but who shall have received sufficient votes to entitle him to a place on the official ballot at the ensuing supplementary election shall die or withdraw his candidacy before such supplementary election, the name of the candidate who shall receive the next highest number of votes shall be printed on the ballot in lieu of the name of the candidate who shall have died or withdrawn his candidacy.

Sec. 9. Form of Ballot. Ballots to be used at any general, supplementary or special election held under the provisions of this act, in addition to other requirements of law, shall conform to the following requirements:

(1) At the top of the ballots shall be printed in capital letters the words designating the ballot. If a general aldermanic election the words shall be "Official aldermanic election ballot"; if a supplementary election the designating words shall be "Official supplementary aldermanic election ballot"; if a special aldermanic election, the words shall be "Special aldermanic election ballot."

(2) Beginning not less than one inch below such designating words and extending across the face of the ballot, the title of each office to be filled shall be printed in capital letters.

(3) The names of candidates for different terms of service therein (if any there be), shall be arranged and printed in groups according to the length of such terms.

(4) Immediately below the title of each office or group heading indicating the term of office, shall be printed in small letters the directions to voters, "Vote for one."

(5) Following thereupon shall be printed the names of the candidates for such office according to the title and the term thereof and below the name of each candidate shall be printed his place of residence, stating the street and number (if any). The names of candidates shall be printed in capital letters not less than one-eighth nor more than one-quarter of an inch in height, and immediately at the left of the name of each candidate shall be printed a square, the sides of which shall not be less than one-quarter of an inch in length. The names of all the candidates for each office shall be printed in a column and arranged in the order hereinafter designated; all the names of candidates shall be printed in uniform type; the place of residence of such candidates shall be printed in uniform type; and squares upon said ballots shall be of uniform size; and spaces between the names of the candidates for the same office shall be of uniform size.

(6) Said ballots shall be prepared in as many series as there are candidates in the group in which there are the most names; the ballots of the first series shall contain all the names of the candidates for each group to be filed, one immediately following the other in alphabetical order according to their surnames; the ballots of the second series shall be like those of the first series, and the names of the candidates in the second series shall be arranged in the same order as those of the first series, except that the name appearing first in the list of candidates for each group in said first series shall, in said second series, be printed after all the other names in the list of candidates for such group; the ballots of the third series shall be like those of the second series, and the names of the candidates in the third series shall be arranged in the same order as those of the second series, except that the name first appearing in the list of candidates for each group in said second series shall, in said third series, be printed after all the other names in the list of candidates for such group; and so on successively, the name at the top of any list of candidates for each group in any series being placed at the bottom of the respective lists of candidates for such group in each succeeding series, and the name next to the top name in any list of candidates for each group being successively advanced to the top of the list of any succeeding series, until the name of each candidate for each group shall appear at the head of the list of candidates for such group.

Sec. 10. Allotment of Ballots by Precincts. Each precinct of any ward shall be allotted at least 10 per cent more ballots of any one series than there are registered voters in such precinct. Every precinct in such ward shall be allotted a different series of ballots unless there are more precincts in such ward than there are series of ballots printed for such ward. The first precinct of each ward shall be allotted the first series of ballots, the second precinct of such ward the second series, and so on successively until the entire series of ballots shall have been exhausted, whereupon the next precinct of such ward shall be allotted the first series of ballots, and so on in rotation until all the precincts of such ward shall have been supplied with the requisite number of ballots: Provided, however, That in the event that there are more series of ballots than there are precincts in any ward, then the ballots for such ward shall be so distributed in said ward that an equal number of each series of ballots as nearly as possible shall be allotted to such ward irrespective of the number of precincts in such ward.

On the back or outside of the ballot of each precinct so as to appear when folded shall be printed the appropriate words designating said ballot, followed by the designation of said precinct, the date of the election, and a facsimile of the proper election official.

Sec. 11. Party Designations Prohibited—Ballot to Be Separate from Other Ballots. No party name, party initial, party circle, platform, principle, appellation or distinguishing mark of any kind shall be printed upon any election ballot used at any election held under the provisions of this act.

If any party primary election or any election for any office other than aldermanic shall be held at the same time with any aldermanic election, the ballots for aldermen shall be separate from all other ballots, except that any question of public policy not required by law to be submitted on a separate ballot from that containing the names of persons to be voted for may be submitted in the manner provided by law upon the same ballot as that used for an aldermanic election: Provided, That the polls shall be opened and closed for any aldermanic election at the same time as is provided for the opening and closing of any party primary election for any office other than alderman held at the same time.

Sec. 12. Challengers and Watchers. Any candidate for alderman under the terms of this act may appoint in writing over his signature not more than one representative for each place of voting, who shall have the right to act as challenger and watcher for such candidate at any election at which his name is being voted upon. Such challenger and watcher shall have the same powers and privileges as a challenger and watcher under the election laws of this state applicable to Chicago. No political party shall have the right to keep any challenger or watcher at any polling place at any election held under the provisions of this act unless candidates for some office other than alderman are to be voted for at the same time.

Sec. 13. Certificate of Election. No certificate of election shall be given to any candidate who shall be declared elected at any general aldermanic election until after the date fixed by this act for the holding of the supplementary election herein provided for.

Sec. 14. Election Laws Apply When Consistent Herewith. All laws in force in the city of Chicago governing elections for municipal offices or applicable thereto and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act shall apply to and govern all elections held under the terms of this act.

Sec. 2. Adoption of This Act. This act shall not be in force in the city of Chicago until the question of its adoption shall first have been submitted to the legal voters of the city of Chicago and approved by a majority of those voting thereon.

The question of the adoption of this act by the city of Chicago shall be submitted to such legal voters at the first general, municipal, or special election in and for the entire city to be held after the passage of this act, or before that time at a special election to be called by the city council by ordinance.

If this act shall fail to be adopted at the election aforesaid by a majority of the legal voters of the city of Chicago voting thereon, the city council of the city of Chicago may by ordinance direct that the question of the adoption of this act again be submitted to such legal voters at any general, municipal or special election in and for the entire city to be held not less than thirty days from and after the passage of such ordinance. The city clerk of the city of Chicago shall promptly certify the passage of such ordinance to the board of election commissioners of the city of Chicago, and it shall thereupon be the duty of said board of election commissioners to submit the question of the adoption of this act to such legal voters at such election.

If this act shall fail to be adopted at the election referred to in paragraph 2 of this section by a majority of the legal voters voting thereon, the question of the adoption of this act may also again be submitted to the legal voters of the city of Chicago at any general, municipal or special election in and for the entire city to be held not less than forty days from and after the filing of the petition hereinafter provided for, in the following manner: A petition signed by legal voters of the city equal in number to at least 5 per cent of the legal voters of the city voting at the last preceding election for mayor, demanding the submission of the question of the adoption of this act, may be filed with said board of election commissioners, and it shall thereupon be the duty of said board of election commissioners to submit the question of the adoption of this act to such legal voters at the election specified in said petition.

If this act shall fail to be adopted, at any time, at which it is submitted under the requirements of this section, by a majority of the legal voters of the city of Chicago voting thereon, then it may be resubmitted from time to time by ordinance or petition as above provided.

The said board of election commissioners shall give notice of any election provided for in this section by publishing a notice thereof, not less than twenty days prior to such election, in at least one newspaper of general circulation published in the city of Chicago.

The ballot to be used at such election shall be in substantially the following form:

For the adoption of an act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation of cities and villages," so as to provide for nonpartisan elections for aldermen in the city of Chicago.	Yes
	No

If a majority of such legal voters of the city of Chicago, voting thereon at any such election, shall vote for the adoption of this act, it shall thereby and thereupon be adopted. (Approved June 28, 1919.)

MUNICIPAL CONVENTION HALLS.

Every city in this state which has a population exceeding 100,000 inhabitants shall have power and authority, and such power and authority are hereby granted, to acquire, own, construct, manage, control, maintain and operate within the corporate limits of such city a municipal convention hall or municipal convention halls with all necessary adjuncts thereto.

Sec. 2. Acquisition of Property—Appropriations—Taxes—Bonds. Every such city shall have full power to acquire by dedication, gift, lease, contract, purchase or condemnation all property and rights, necessary or proper, within the corporate limits of the city, for such municipal convention hall purposes; and to appropriate money, to levy and collect taxes, to borrow money on the credit of the city for such purposes and to issue bonds therefor.

In all cases where property is acquired or sought to be acquired by condemnation, the procedure shall be, as nearly as may be, like that provided for in an act entitled "An act to provide for the exercise of the right to eminent domain," approved April 10, 1872, in force July 1, 1872, and all amendments thereto now in force or which may hereafter be enacted.

Sec. 3. Appropriations and Bond Issues—How Made. All appropriations and bond issues for the use of any such municipal convention hall shall be made by the city council in the manner provided by law. All warrants upon which any portion of said funds is to be paid out shall bear the signature of such official or officials as may be designated by the city council.

Sec. 4. Payment of Bonds and Interest. The city council shall, in the manner and at the time or times provided by law, by ordinance provide for the collection of a direct annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal thereof at the time such principal falls due.

Sec. 5. Letting Convention Hall to Assemblage. Every such city which shall acquire and own under the provisions of this act a municipal convention hall, shall have power and authority, and such power and authority are hereby granted, to license or lease out all or any part of the same to gatherings or assemblages for definite short periods of time, upon such terms and compensation as may be prescribed by the city council or as may be determined by and through ordinances, rules or regulations passed or prescribed by the city council.

Sec. 6. Free Use to Inhabitants and Local Organizations. The city council under rules and regulations prescribed by general ordinance, and not otherwise, may provide for granting the free use of such municipal convention hall to the inhabitants of such city or to local bodies or organizations existing within such city, for civic, patriotic, educational, charitable or political uses and purposes and for historic celebrations, free amusements, concerts, entertainments, lectures and discussions.

Sec. 7. City Council May Pass Ordinances to Regulate Convention Hall. The city council may from time to time establish by ordinance all needful rules and regulations for the management and control of any such municipal convention hall. All ordinances for the violations of which fines are imposed shall be published in the newspaper selected as the official journal of the city, and the same may be printed in book or pamphlet form in such manner as the city council shall direct, and rules framed in conformity with such ordinances shall be brought to the notice of the public by being posted in conspicuous places in the convention hall. When such ordinances are printed in book or pamphlet form, purporting to be published by authority of the city council, such book or pamphlet shall be received as evidence of the contents of such ordinances, and of the passage and publication thereof as of the dates therein mentioned in all courts without further proof.

Sec. 8. Books of Account. Every city owning and operating any such municipal convention hall shall keep books of account for such convention hall, separate and distinct from other city accounts and in such manner as to show the true and complete financial standing and results of such city ownership and operation. Such account shall be so kept as to show the actual cost to such city of maintenance, extension and improvement; all operating expenses of every description; if water or other service shall be furnished for the use of such convention hall without charge, the accounts shall show, as nearly as possible, the value of such service, and also the value of any use or service rendered by the convention hall to the city without charge; such accounts shall also show reasonable allowances for interest, depreciation and insurance, and also estimates of the amount of taxes that would be chargeable against such property if owned by a private corporation. The city council shall cause to be printed annually for public distribution a report showing the financial results, in form as aforesaid, of such city ownership and operation. The accounts of such convention hall, kept as aforesaid, shall be examined at least once a year by an expert accountant, who shall report to the city council the results of his examination. Such expert accountant shall be selected in such manner as the city council may direct, and he shall receive for his services such compensation, to be paid out of the income or revenues from such convention hall, as the city council may prescribe.

Sec. 9. Definitions. The following words and phrases in this act shall, unless the same are inconsistent with the context, be construed as follows:

1. The words "convention hall" or "municipal convention hall" shall be construed to mean a municipally owned building or auditorium with all necessary adjuncts thereto, used, licensed or leased out for definite short periods of time for gatherings or assemblages of people, either small or large, whether local, state, or national in character.

2. The words "municipal convention hall purposes" shall be construed to mean the municipal corporate purposes defined and designated in this act.

3. The objects and purposes in this act defined and set forth are hereby declared to be municipal corporate objects and purposes.

Sec. 10. Act Not to Be Affected by Invalidity of Any Part. If any section, subdivision or clause of this act is for any reason held invalid or unconstitutional, such decision or holding shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of this act which can be given effect without such invalid part. (Approved June 28, 1919.)

ASSESSMENT OF PROPERTY.

Be it enacted, etc.: That sections 17 and 18 of an act entitled "An act for the assessment of property and providing the means therefor, and to repeal a certain act therein named," approved Feb. 25, 1898, in force July 1, 1898, as subsequently amended, be and the same are hereby further amended so that said sections shall read respectively as follows:

Sec. 17. The assessor shall furnish to each person required to list personal property a printed blank schedule, forms to be furnished by the auditor of public accounts, upon which shall be printed a notice substantially as follows:

"This schedule must be filled out, sworn to and returned to me in person or by mail at .....(address) on or before ..... You are to give a full, fair cash value of the articles mentioned as well as the amount of money required to be returned. Only one-half of the several amounts will be taken and assessed for the purpose of taxation.

"Assessor."

There shall also be printed upon such blank the schedule now required by law, and the following, which is a part of this section: And every person required to list personal property or money shall fill out, subscribe and swear to, and return to the assessor in person or by mail, at the time required, such schedule in accordance with law, giving the numbers, amounts, quantity and quality of all the articles enumerated in said schedule by him possessed, or under his control, required to be listed by him for taxation. The assessor shall determine and fix the fair cash value of all items of personal property, including all grain on hand on the 1st day of April, and set down the same, as well as the amounts of notes, accounts, bonds and moneys, in a column headed "full value," and ascertain and assess the same at one-half part thereof, and set down said one-half part thereof in a column headed "assessed value," which last amount shall be the assessed value thereof for all purposes of taxation. The assessor or some person authorized by law to administer an oath shall adminster the oath required in this section.

Sec. 18. Personal property shall be valued at its fair cash value, less such deductions as may be allowed by law to be made from credits, which value shall be set down in one column, to be headed "full value," and one-half part thereof shall be ascertained and set down in another column which shall be headed "assessed value." Real property shall be valued at its fair cash value, estimated at the price it would bring at a fair voluntary sale in the course of trade, which shall be set down in one column to be headed "full value," and one-half part thereof shall be set down in another column, which shall be headed "assessed value."

The state board of equalization in valuing property assessed by them shall ascertain and determine respectively the fair cash value of such property, which fair cash value shall be set down in one column to be headed "full value," and one-half part thereof shall be ascertained and set down in another column, which shall be headed "assessed value." The one-half value of all property so ascertained and set down shall be the assessed value for all purposes of taxation, limitation of taxation and limitation of indebtedness prescribed in the constitution or any statute. (Approved June 30, 1919.)

RATES OF TAXATION.

All cities, villages and incorporated towns in the state now having the power to levy and collect as high a rate of taxation as is herein authorized and provided for, shall hereafter have power to assess, levy and collect, annually, upon the taxable property within their respective limits, for all corporate purposes, in addition to all taxes which any such city, town or village may now or hereafter be authorized by law to levy and collect to support and maintain schools, erect school buildings and for all other school purposes, and to pay interest on its registered bonded indebtedness, such an amount as their respective corporate authorities may prescribe, not exceeding in any year the rate of 40 cents on each $100 of the assessed valuation of such taxable property as equalized by the state board of equalization for the preceding year. And the rate authorized by this act shall be in lieu of all rates and items of taxation now provided and authorized in such charters, for all purposes other than schools, the erection of school buildings and all other school purposes, and for paying interest on the registered bonded indebtedness of such city, town or village. (Approved June 30, 1919.)

The city council of each city and board of trustees of each village or incorporated town, whether organized under the general law or special charter, which include wholly within their corporate limits a town or towns, shall have power and may annually levy a tax for street and bridge purposes of not to exceed 24 cents on each $100 on all the taxable property in any township lying wholly within the limits of such city, village or incorporated town: Provided, That if in the opinion of three-fourths of the members elected to the city council or board of trustees of such city, village or incorporated town, a greater levy for bridge and street purposes is needed in view of some contingency, an additional levy may be made of any sum not exceeding 16 2-3 cents on the $100 of such taxable property. Said street and bridge tax authorized by this act shall be in addition to any tax any such city, village or incorporated town is now authorized to levy for street or bridge purposes and shall be in addition to the tax that such city, village or incorporated town is now authorized to levy upon the aggregate valuation of all property within such city, village or incorporated town, and the county clerk, in reducing tax levies under the provisions of section 2 of an act entitled "An act concerning the levy and extension of taxes," approved May 9, 1901, in force July 1, 1901, as subsequently amended, shall consider said street and bridge tax authorized by this act as a road and bridge tax, and not to be included in the limitation of 2 per cent of the assessed valuation upon which taxes are required to be extended. (Approved June 30, 1919.)

Levy and Collection of Taxes.

The city council or board of trustees, as the case may be, shall annually, on or before the third Tuesday in September in each year, ascertain the total amount of appropriations for all corporate purposes legally made and to be collected from the tax levy of that fiscal year; and, by an ordinance specifying in detail the purposes for which such appropriations are made and the sum or amount appropriated for each purpose respectively, shall levy the amount so ascertained upon all the property subject to taxation within the city or village as the same is assessed and equalized for state and county purposes for the current year. A certified copy of such ordinance shall be filed with the county clerk of the proper county, whose duty it shall be to ascertain the rate per cent which, upon the total valuation of all property subject to taxation within the city or village as the same is assessed and equalized for state and county purposes, will produce a net amount of not less than the amount so directed to be levied, and it shall be the duty of the county clerk to extend such tax in a separate column upon the book or books of the collector or collectors of state and county taxes within such city or village. And where the corporate limits of any city or village shall lie partly in two or more counties, the city council or board of trustees shall ascertain the total amount of all taxable property lying within the corporate limits of said city or village in each county as the same is assessed and equalized for state and county purposes for the current year, and certify the amount of taxable property in each county within said city or village, under the seal of said city or village, to the county clerk of the county where the seat of government of such city or village is situated, whose duty it shall be to ascertain the rate per cent which, upon the total valuation of all property subject to taxation within the city or village, ascertained as aforesaid, will produce a net amount not less than the amount so directed to be levied; and said clerk shall, as soon as said rate per cent of taxation is ascertained, certify under his hand and seal of office to the county clerk of any other county wherein a portion of said city or village is situate, such rate per cent, and it shall be the duty of such county clerk to whom such rate per cent is certified to extend such tax in a separate column upon the book or books of the collector or collectors of the state and county taxes for such county against all property in his county within the limits of said city or village; Provided, the aggregate amount of taxes so levied for any one year, exclusive of the amount levied for the payment of bonded indebtedness or interest thereon, and exclusive of taxes levied for the purposes of pension funds, public library and municipal tuberculosis sanitarium, shall not exceed the rate of 1.43½ per centum from the taking effect of this act to and including the year 1921 and thereafter not to exceed eight-tenths of 1 per centum in cities and villages of 150,000 or more population according to the last national or state census, and the aggregate amount of taxes so levied for any one year, exclusive of the amount levied for the payment of bonded indebtedness or interest thereon and exclusive of taxes authorized by law for specific purposes shall not exceed the rate of 1⅛ per centum from the taking effect of this act to and including the year 1921 and thereafter eight-tenths of 1 per centum in cities and villages of less than 150,000 population according to the last national or state census, and county taxes for the current year: And provided further: That nothing herein contained shall be held to repeal or modify the limitations contained in an act entitled "An act concerning the levy and extension of taxes," approved May 9, 1901, in force July 1, 1901, as subsequently amended. The city council, board of trustees, or mayor and commissioners, as the case may be, of any city or village having a population of less than 20,000 shall have the power, for the purpose of oiling the streets or public highways within the corporate limits of such city or village, to direct the payment of the costs thereof out of any moneys in the city or village treasury not otherwise appropriated. (Approved June 30, 1919.)

SANITARY DISTRICT AND ELECTRICAL ENERGY.

The sanitary district of Chicago is empowered, upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon between the board of trustees of the sanitary district of Chicago and the department of public works and buildings of the state of Illinois, to develop into electrical energy any water power in the Des Plaines river rendered available by the construction of the Illinois waterway, or to lease or purchase any electrical energy developed by the state of Illinois in connection with the Illinois waterway in the Des Plaines river. The electrical energy acquired under the provisions of the act may be transmitted to the various cities, villages and towns within the sanitary district of Chicago, or adjacent to the main channel of the sanitary district of Chicago, or the city of Joliet, and sold to any public agency, person, firm or corporation for public or private consumption upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed to by the sanitary district of Chicago, subject, however, to the right of the public utilities commission of the state of Illinois to fix the maximum rate which may be charged for any electrical energy developed from such water power. (Approved June 17, 1919.)

PENSIONING OF JUDGES.

Any judge of a court of record in the state of Illinois, whether of the Supreme, Circuit, Superior, Probate, County, City or Municipal court, who has served as a judge in any one or more of said courts for a period or periods aggregating twenty-four years, when he reaches the age of 65 years and shall by resignation or otherwise have ended such service, shall, after such service of twenty-four years and after reaching the age of 65 years, be entitled to and shall receive annually a pension during the remainder of his life for a sum equal in amount to one half the sum annually received as compensation for his judicial service during the last year thereof.

The pension of any such judge shall be paid in the same manner as the salary of such judge was paid during his peroid of service from state, county or city respectively or out of moneys not otherwise appropriated. (Approved June 28, 1919.)

AMERICAN INDIAN DAY.

The fourth Friday of September of each year is hereby designated "American Indian Day," to be observed throughout the state as a day on which to hold appropriate exercises in commemoration of the American Indians. (Approved June 28, 1919.)

ENLARGING LINCOLN PARK.

The commissioners of Lincoln park are authorized, if the proposition is approved by the voters, to issue from time to time bonds not to exceed $2,000,000 for the purpose of enlarging and improving Lincoln park and completing work already begun. (Approved May 1, 1919.)

FOR BOULEVARD LINK.

The commissioners of Lincoln park are also authorized, upon approval by the voters, to issue bonds not to exceed $1,000,000 to aid in the construction of elevated boulevards, the approaches thereto, etc., located wholly or in part in the district taxable for the maintenance of Lincoln park. (Approved June 28, 1919.)

WOMAN SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT RATIFIED.

Illinois was the first state in the union to ratify the woman suffrage amendment to the federal constitution. Both houses of the legislature June 10, 1919, passed a joint resolution ratifying the amendment. Owing to a minor error in the wording the resolution was again passed June 17. The vote in the house was 132 to 3, only Representatives Browne of LaSalle and Representatives Griffin and Smith of Chicago voting no. In the senate there was no negative vote.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION AMENDMENT RATIFIED.

The prohibition amendment to the federal constitution was ratified by the senate Jan. 8, 1919, and the house Jan. 14. The vote in the senate was 30 to 16 and in the house 84 to 66.

*Elected.

STATE VOTE ON PUBLIC POLICY QUESTIONS.

Initiative and Referendum.

That on petition of 100,000 persons any proposed amendment to the constitution may be brought to popular vote and be enacted by majority vote; that on petition of 50,000 electors any legislative act may be suspended by a majority of those voting.

GATEWAY AMENDMENT.

That the initiative and referendum proposition be submitted separately from the main draft of the constitution to apply to the new constitution if adopted or to the present constitution if new constitution is defeated.

For 242,519

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

That cities and other political subdivisions shall be free and able, if the people so elect, to acquire public utilities, the bonds issued therefor to be a lien on the utilities and not on the people.

LONG AIRSHIP VOYAGE.

Starting from a station on the Firth of Forth, Scotland, at 3:45 p. m., Sunday, March 16, 1919, the British nonrigid airship US-11 made a nonstop trip of 1,285 miles in 40 hours 30 minutes. The voyage, which was a world's record up to that time for that type of craft, took the form of a circuit of the coasts of Denmark, Schleswig-Holstein, Helgoland, North Germany and Holland. The weather was unfavorable throughout the trip, which terminated at 8:15 a. m., Tuesday. The flight was particularly noteworthy in that it was carried out entirely over the sea.

Committee Clerk—Peter J. Ellert, 537 county building.
Meetings—The regular meetings of the board of commissioners are held on the first Monday of December, January, February, March, June and September of each year.
Duties—The commissioners are charged with the management of the county affairs of Cook county, as provided by law, having the same powers as the boards of supervisors in other counties. They make all appropriations and contracts and authorize all expenditures. The president appoints, with the approval of the board, the superintendent of public service and other officers and employes whose election or appointment is not otherwise provided for by law.

COUNTY CLERK'S OFFICE.

Clerk—Robert M. Sweitzer, D.
Chief Deputy—John H. Mack.
Chief Clerk—William T. O'Brien.
Chief Bookkeeper—John P. Keevers.
Cashier—J. S. Mayer.
Chief Tax Extensions—Martin J. O'Brien.
Chief Election Department—John D. Hayes.
Duties—The county clerk is also clerk of the County court, clerk of the county board and ex officio comptroller of county financial affairs. As county clerk he issues all marriage licenses, hunting, tavern and other licenses, keeps records of births and deaths, assists at tax sales and makes redemptions from same; receives all tax levies and computes county, state and all city, village, district and other municipal taxes. As clerk of County court he keeps a record of insane, pauper, support, feeble minded, inheritance tax and other cases. Nearly all special assessment cases are recorded in this office. As comptroller he disburses all salaries and all other county funds and has charge of all deeds, mortgages, contracts, bonds, notes and similar papers belonging to the county, settles all accounts, keeps books showing appropriations and expenditures, makes out report for fiscal year and submits estimates for the expenses of all the departments of the county organization.

CLERK OF COUNTY COURT.

Clerk—Robert M. Sweitzer, D.
Chief Clerk—George L. McConnell.

COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE.

The Art Institute of Chicago was incorporated May 24, 1879, for the "founding and maintenance of schools of art and design, the formation and exhibition of collections of objects of art and the cultivation and extension of the arts of design by any appropriate means. The museum building upon the lake front, first occupied in 1893, has never been closed for a day. It is open to the public every weekday from 9 to 5, Sundays from 12:15 to 9 p. m. Admission is free to members and their families at all times, and free to all upon Wednesdays, Saturdays, Sundays and legal holidays. Upon other days the entrance fee is 25 cents.

All friends of art are invited to become members. Annual members pay a fee of $10 a year. Life members pay $100 and are thenceforth exempt from dues. Sustaining members pay $25 or more a year. Governing members are elected by the trustees and pay $100 upon election and $25 a year thereafter. Upon the payment of $400 governing members become governing life members and are thenceforth exempt from dues. All receipts from life memberships are invested and the income only expended. All members are entitled, with their families and visiting friends, to admission to all exhibitions, receptions, public lectures and entertainments given by the Art institute and to the use of the Ryerson reference library of art. Visitors desiring to see the collections under guidance may make appointments with the museum instructors at the office of the director.

MUSEUM.

The Art museum now ranks among the first three in the country. It contains excellent examples of the old masters and of the modern painters. There is also a large and comprehensive collection of sculptures, including reproductions of the work of the greatest sculptors, ancient and modern. There is an extensive collection of architectural casts. Other fields of art are represented by collections of etchings, engravings, textiles, oriental art, Egyptian and classical antiquities, etc. There is a constant succession of passing exhibitions, thirty-five or more in a year. All students enjoy the full use of the collections and the library. The number of visitors to the museum during the year ended Dec. 31, 1918, was 1,018,870.

SCHOOL.

There is a school for beginners, one for students in the various art professions, including painting, sculpture, designing, illustration, and normal art instruction, and one for advanced and highly trained students in the arts of painting and sculpture.

The school is conducted with the most modern methods and has grown to be the most comprehensive and probably the largest fine arts school in the United States. Distinguished teachers from a distance are called in from time to time. Students may enter at any time. The tuition rates are as follows:

FOREST PRESERVES OF COOK COUNTY.

Map indicating location of principal tracts acquired up to Nov. 1, 1919.

FOREST PRESERVE DISTRICT OF COOK COUNTY.

COMMISSIONERS.

The commissioners of Cook county by virtue of their office also serve as commissioners of the forest preserve district of Cook county, authorized by an act of the legislature approved June 27, 1913, and adopted by a referendum vote Nov. 3, 1914. The commissioners Aug. 1, 1919, were: Peter Reinberg, president; John Budinger, Bartley Burg, William Busse, Joseph Carolan, Joseph M. Fitzgerald, Charles N. Goodnow, William H. Maclean, Robert W. McKinlay, George A. Miller, Albert Nowak, Dudley D. Pierson, Daniel Ryan, Emmett Whealan, Frank J. Wilson.

OFFICERS.

Secretary—William J. Gormley.
Comptroller—Joseph L. Gill.
Treasurer—Oscar F. Mayer.
Chief Attorney—Adolph D. Weiner.
Real Estate Agent—Henry P. Kransz.
Chief Forester—Ransom E. Kennicott.
Chief Engineer—Emmett J. Flavin.

FOREST PRESERVE PROPERTY.

The forest preserve district of Cook county on Sept. 1, 1919, held title to 15,000 acres in the district. Some details as to the various preserves follow:

Deer Grove Preserve—1,150 acres of hilly wooded land; 850 acres set aside and fenced for deer; twenty-five acres of artificial lake, which has developed into a home for water fowl.

Elk Grove Preserve—1,600 acres of virgin timber land; has lily ponds and bird refuges.

Des Plaines River Valley Preserve—667 acres (Wheeling tract); old grove portage of Indian days and scene of reception given Father Marquette, French explorer, who surprised the Pottawattomie Indians here—the white man's first visit to Cook county, 1673; Northwestern park tract, extending from the town of Des Plaines to Higgins road, containing tracts of natural forests and sites of half a dozen Indian villages.

North Branch Chicago River Valley Preserve—Includes Indian reservation, Forest Glen, Turnbull, Badek and Glenview tracts; Indian reservation contains all the forest land awarded to Billy Caldwell, the old Indian chief; Turnbull tract contains old Turnbull homestead, established by one of Cook county's pioneers in Indian days; Badek tract, another favorite Indian haunt.

Thatcher Park Preserve—Contains also Steele tract; preserve consists of hundreds of acres of oak and maple forest.

Salt Creek Valley Preserve—On both banks of Salt creek from the Des Plaines river to the west county line; picturesque river valley with splendid timber land.

Beverly Hills Preserve—Promontory of rock on the south side long used as picnic grounds.

Palos Hills Preserve—Contains more than 7,000 acres of hilly forest land extending along the drainage canal and back into the Sag district.

Chicago Heights Preserve—Forest tract with small bodies of water and streams; located at junction of Lincoln and Dixie highways.

Thornton and Glenwood Preserves—Adjoining tracts; fine forest land; said to have been site of a battle between Americans and British in the revolutionary war.

There are also preserves in Hegewisch, South Chicago, Chicago Heights and Edgebrook.

Some of the tracts have been improved with paths, roads, wells, fountains, shelter houses, parking spaces and comfort stations, also dams and artificial lakes.

On account of the growing popularity of golf, the board expects to open for the public in 1920 an eighteen-hole course at Palos Hills, another at 39th street and Harlem avenue and a nine-hole course at Edgebrook.

All of the forest preserves may be reached by automobile and many of them by street car or railroad. The accompanying map will show in what direction they lie from the central part of the city.

During the months of May, June, July, August and September, 1919, approximately 1,200 permits were issued for picnic and camping purposes, giving an idea of the extent to which the preserves are used by the public, which however, does not include single visitors or family gatherings. The records show the following attendance:

May	40,450
June	90,721
July	125,641
August	161,422
September	120,143
Total	538,377

CHICAGO BRIDGE SYSTEM.

The first ferry across the river was established in 1829, where the Lake street bridge now is. In 1833 a floating bridge of logs was in operation just north of the present Randolph street bridge. A foot bridge over the north branch was built in 1832 at Kinzie street. The first drawbridge over the main branch of the river was placed at Dearborn street in 1834. In 1854 a pivot bridge was built at Clark street. These and other bridges of that time were built by the persons most directly benefited by them. It was not until 1857 that a bridge was built entirely at the city's expense. This was the structure over the south branch at Madison street. It cost $30,000. Until 1872 the swing bridges were turned by hand, but in the year named steam power was installed on the Dearborn street structure and later most of the other bridges in the downtown section were similarly equipped. In 1895 the Rush, Lake and Van Buren street bridges were operated by electric motors. The last named structure, which was opened for traffic in that year, was the first of the Scherzer rolling type. The Halsted street lift bridge, the first and only one of its kind, was opened in 1894 and was operated by steam. It cost the city $242,880.

In 1919 Chicago had forty-four bridges with movable spans and thirty with fixed spans. There were also thirty-nine viaducts and eight foot bridges. Most of the movable bridges are operated by electricity. The bridges and viaducts had a value of more than $5,000,000.

Duties—The city treasurer is an elective, charter officer of the city of Chicago; he is also school treasurer of the city of Chicago; treasurer of the firemen's pension fund, public school teachers' pension and retirement fund, public school employes' pension fund, public library employes' pension fund, municipal pension fund of Chicago, and house of correction employes' pension fund. The treasurer receives all moneys belonging to the corporation, deposits the funds in bank, keeps separate accounts of each fund or appropriation. He is the custodian of the taxes, license fees and all other moneys and securities belonging to the various funds of which he is the treasurer. All disbursements of funds are made by the treasurer on warrants signed by officials who are designated by statute.
The legislature, by statutory enactments, requires the city treasurer to render reports at stated periods showing the condition of the treasury of the city and the balance of money in the treasury, and to make such additional reports as the city council from time to time shall require. For this reason and for the further purpose of supervising and limiting expenditures to the amounts appropriated by the city council for each object and purpose, the treasurer is by statute required to keep the accounts of all funds or appropriations and of the debits and credits pertaining thereto. The city's books and accounts must be kept open by the treasurer for inspection by the committee on finance and all members of the city council whenever information concerning the city's financial affairs is required.
As school treasurer he is required by the state school law to keep books and accounts concerning the financial affairs of the board of education, including a record of the revenues collected from taxation or received from the state common school fund, etc., and to make reports at stated periods concerning the state of the school treasury and the balance of money in that treasury at the time such reports are made. His books and accounts concerning school matters must be kept open for inspection by the members of the board of education whenever information concerning the financial affairs of the board of education is required. His bond at the present time is fixed at $2,000,000.

STREET LIGHTING IN CHICAGO.

The municipal street lighting system of the city of Chicago is the largest municipally operated system in the world. Electrical energy is purchased from the sanitary district of Chicago, generated at its hydro-electric plant at Lockport, Ill. Power is transmitted a distance of thirty miles over three 44,000 volt, 3 phase, 60 cycle, transmission circuits mounted on steel towers paralleling the main drainage canal, and delivered to the terminal station at 31st street and Western avenue. From the terminal station the electrical energy is distributed over 12,000 volt city underground transmission cables to eleven city substations, from which the distributing lamp circuits are supplied and controlled. The investment in transmission cables, substations, conduits, wires, cables, lamps and equipment has a present value of over $8,000,000.

In addition to the municipally operated system, electric lights are rented from private corporations to light those portions of the city where the municipal system has not been extended, also gas and gasoline lights are operated under contract to light the less intensively populated sections where the investment necessary for electric lights would be uneconomical.

The following table is a synopsis of the lamps in service and the annual cash cost for 1917 and 1918:

RATES OF FARE FOR TAXICABS.

Fixed by Chicago city ordinances. Sightseeing cars and autobuses having a capacity of eight persons or more not included.

I. Rates by Distance.

For first half-mile (or fraction thereof) for one person.....40 cents
For each succeeding quarter-mile (or fraction thereof).....10 cents
For each additional person for the whole journey.....25 cents
For each four minutes of waiting (or fraction thereof).....10 cents

Waiting time shall include (a) the time during which the taxicab is not in motion, beginning ten minutes after call time at the place to which it has been called; (b) the time consumed by unavoidable delay at street crossings or bridges, and (c) the time consumed while standing at the direction of the passenger.

No charge shall be made (a) for time lost for inefficiency of the taxicab or its operator, or (b) for time consumed by the premature arrival in response to a call.

II. Hour Rates.

For trip of two miles or more.
Car seating two persons, $2.50; minimum charge for trip, $1.
Seating three to five persons, $3.50; minimum charge for trip, $1.50.
Seating more than five persons, $4.50; minimum charge for trip, $2.

Where the trip is for two miles or more and the passenger at the time of hiring any such vehicle expressly elects, as such passenger may do, to pay therefor by the hour, the operator in charge of such vehicle shall supply the passenger with a card upon which shall appear the name of the owner, the name and license number of the operator and the exact time of the hiring; and the charge for such service, in the absence of such express agreement, shall not exceed the rates prescribed above as the "hour rate."

The rate of fare to be asked or demanded for such vehicles shall be determined in accordance with the time which the vehicle is in use by the passenger or passengers engaging the same.

In determining the seating capacity of any such vehicle neither the operator's seat nor any portion thereof shall be computed, but the said capacity shall be determined by the number of persons which can be accommodated in the interior or tonneau of such vehicle.

No charge shall be made for the time consumed in responding to a call or in returning to the place from which such vehicle is called.

Baggage—Every passenger upon any public automobile, autocar or other similar vehicle shall be allowed to have conveyed with him upon such vehicle, without extra charge therefor, his ordinary light traveling baggage in an amount not to exceed fifty pounds. A fee of 20 cents may be charged for conveying a trunk.

Lost Baggage—Whenever any package, article of baggage or goods of any kind shall be left in or upon any vehicle licensed under the provisions of this article, the operator of such vehicle shall, upon discovery of such package, baggage or goods, forthwith deliver the same to the vehicle bureau, department of police, in the city hall.

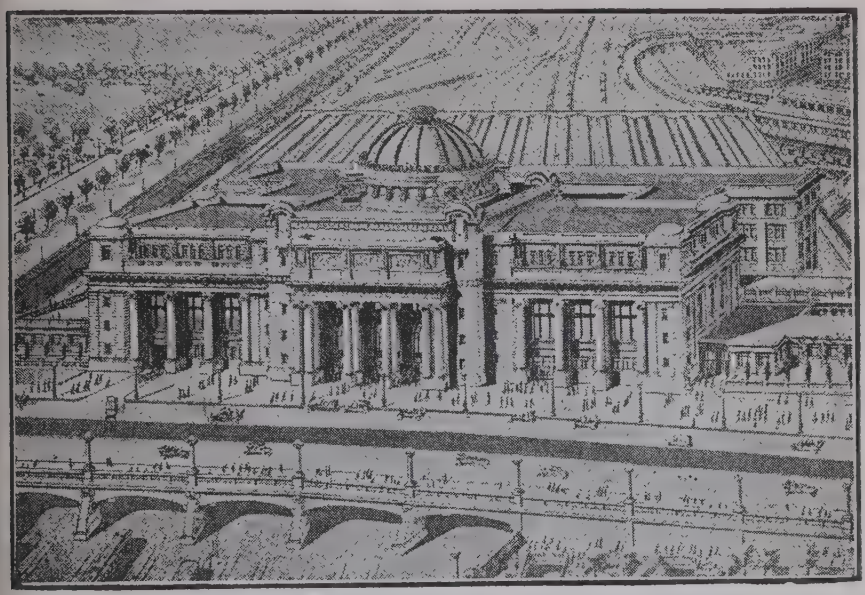
LAKE FRONT IMPROVEMENT PLAN.



NEW ILLINOIS CENTRAL STATION TO BE BUILT ON EAST ROOSEVELT ROAD.

On July 21, 1919, the city council of Chicago passed an ordinance prepared by the Chicago Plan commission providing for the establishment of harbor district No. 3, the construction by the Illinois Central Railroad company of a new passenger station, the electrification of certain lines of the Illinois Central and Michigan Central companies within the city and the development of the lake front. It was estimated that the Illinois Central would spend $110,000,000 for electrification and the construction of the new passenger station. The ordinance was signed by the mayor on July 31.

The new harbor is to be built between 16th and 31st streets extended into Lake Michigan. Provision is made for the reclamation of submerged lands lying east of the railroad tracks for park and driveway purposes. Work on the new station is to be begun within six months after the ordinance becomes effective. The preliminary work of preparing for electrification must be started within sixty days after the ordinance becomes effective and be completed within two years. The entire suburban service is to be electrified within five years from the expiration of the two years mentioned, the freight service north of East Roosevelt road within two years after the suburban lines are electrified, the entire freight service south of East Roosevelt road to the city limits within five years after the freight lines north of East Roosevelt road are electrified, and the entire through passenger service within five years after the freight lines south of East Roosevelt road are electrified.

An outline of the benefits made possible for Chicago by the passage of the ordinance includes these:

1. Erection of largest passenger terminal in world.
2. Construction of stadium seating 100,000.
3. Building of aquarium, rivaling New York's.
4. Electrification of 405 miles of I. C. tracks.
5. Harbor development with eight miles of docks.
6. Reclaiming of 1,500 acres of lake for parks.
7. Water course five miles long and 600 feet wide.
8. Depression of I. C. tracks nine to fourteen feet.
9. Construction of five viaducts north of Roosevelt road and seven south.
10. Freight facilities costing over $18,000,000.
11. Four bathing beaches accommodating 120,000 persons.

The passenger terminal will have fifty-two tracks, ten more than the largest now in existence. The station proper will conform in design to the Field museum in marble a block away.

The stadium will be in the city's front yard, Grant park, with tunnels under and viaducts over the tracks that easy access may be gained.

OTHER FORWARD STEPS BY CHICAGO.

[By Edward J. Glackin, Secretary of the Board of Local Improvements.]

In 1919 the board of local improvements took steps to carry out many of the projects of the Chicago Plan commission for a greater Chicago. The Michigan avenue improvement progressed rapidly and will be open to traffic by next May from Randolph street to Chicago avenue. The total cost of this improvement, when completed, will be about $13,750,000. In December, 1919 the assessment roll was prepared and ready to file in the proceeding for opening Ogden avenue, from Union park to Lincoln park. The cost of this improvement will be about $5,000,000. Public hearings were held and ordinances prepared and sent to the city council for the following improvements:

Widening North and South Western avenue, from Howard street to 119th street; cost estimated at about $4,800,000.

Widening East and West South Water street and River street, from Lake street to Michigan avenue, and opening a street between Dearborn, Clark, Lake and East South Water streets; estimated to cost about $7,600,000.

Widening West Randolph street, from Sangamon street to Ogden avenue; estimated to cost about $1,250,000.

Widening West Polk street, from Halsted street to Canal street; estimated to cost about $600,000.

The board's engineers prepared surveys of the proposed following improvements:

Widening North and South Robey street, from Montrose avenue to 95th street; estimated to cost about $18,400,000.

Widening North and South Ashland avenue, from Pratt boulevard to 95th street; estimated to cost about $11,600,000.

The board paved about eighty miles of streets and alleys in 1919, costing about $6,000,000. Construction work was greatly retarded owing to labor conditions and the high cost of material.

The board expects to pave about 175 miles in 1920 at an estimated cost of about $12,000,000.

Some 100 miles of sidewalks were laid in 1919, at a cost of about $650,000, and it is expected that in 1920 about 200 miles of sidewalks will be laid at a cost of about $1,400,000.

About twenty miles of sewers were built in 1919, costing about $600,000, and about twenty-five miles will be built in 1920, at a cost of about $1,000,000. A contract was let and work started on the Augusta street sewer system, which, it is estimated, will cost about $1,000,000. A contract was also let for the Crawford avenue sewer system, which, it is estimated, will cost about $1,000,000.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANK.

The postal savings bank was opened at the main postoffice, Chicago, Aug. 1, 1911. Any one 10 years old or over may open an account. No account may be opened for less than $1, nor will fractions of a dollar be accepted for deposit. Depositors are now allowed to deposit a total of $2,500, any part or all of which may be deposited in any month.

Deposits are evidenced by postal savings certificates issued in denominations of $1, $2, $5, $10, $20, $50, $100, $200 and $500.

Depositors of the postal savings system by applying therefor thirty days in advance may exchange the whole or a part of their deposits on Jan. 1 or July 1 of each year for United States registered or coupon bonds in denominations of $20, $100 and $500, bearing interest at the rate of 2½ per cent per annum, payable semiannually and redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after one year from the date of issue, both principal and interest payable twenty years from that date in United States gold coin.

Postal savings banks have also been established at the following postal stations: Armour, Auburn Park, Austin, C, Canal, Chicago Avenue, Chicago Lawn, Cragin, D, Dauphin Park, Douglas Park, Eastside, Edgewater, Elsdon, Englewood, 51st Street, Garfield Park, Grand Crossing, Hawthorne, Hegewisch, Humboldt Park, Hyde Park, Irving Park, Jackson Park, Jefferson, Lake View, Lincoln Park, Logan Square, M, McKinley Park, Morgan Park, North Halsted, Norwood Park, Ogden Park, Pilsen, Pullman, Ravenswood, Riverdale, Rogers Park, Sheridan Park, South Chicago, Stockyards, 20th Street, Washington Heights, West Pullman, Wicker Park and at stations No. 10 (Hull House) and No. 195 (Boston Store).

The Chicago office ranks third in the United States with total deposits June 30, 1919 of $7,743,441 and 22,748 depositors.

CHICAGO SCHOOL CENSUS OF MARCH 27, 1916.

TOTAL POPULATION.

Taking the minor population conservative multiple, which proved to be the only one successfully close to the actual federal enumeration of the total population in 1910, Mr. Bodine estimated the total population of all ages in Chicago in 1916 at 2,550,000. This would be an increase of 112,474 as compared with the school census of 1914, which covered all ages and showed a total population of 2,437,526. Mr. Bodine pointed out that the ratio of increase in both the minor and total population had been appreciably retarded in the two years by the decrease in immigration from Europe, by the return of many foreign born parents to take part in the war, by the trend of many families to the suburbs close to Chicago but outside the city limits where they could not be included in the census, and by the growth of apartment houses with limited space.

DEAF, BLIND, CRIPPLED AND ILLITERATE MINORS.

There were in 1916 567 deaf children in the city and 182 minors who were blind, or nearly so.

There are 126 more who have visual defects leading to the sightless life.

The city had 645 crippled minors of whom 210 were so incapacitated that they were eligible for transportation service to the crippled children's centers. There were 2,086 so called "subnormal" minors in the entire city, including those feebleminded, mentally backward or having mental defects. Returns from special divisions in the public schools make a complete count of this class of children possible. Chicago has 221 mutes.

The illiterates over 12 and under 21, mostly between 16 and 21, total 573, who cannot read or write.

NO SCHOOL CENSUS IN 1918.

Owing to litigation over the membership of the board of education no school census was taken in Chicago in 1918.

General Information.

The Chicago public library is a free public institution, established under the Illinois library law of 1872. It derives its revenue from an annual library tax of approximately one mill. A board of directors of nine members is appointed by the mayor, three annually for terms of three years. The library occupies the site formerly known as Dearborn park, bounded by Michigan avenue, Washington street, Garland court and Randolph street. The cost of the building was about $2,000,000, including the furniture, book stacks and machinery. There are forty-four branches, six high school branches, 107 delivery stations and sixty-eight deposit stations.

The right of drawing books from the public library belongs to all who reside in the city of Chicago, and also to those who make their homes in the suburbs within the limits of Cook county and are regularly employed in the city. In order to become a book borrower it is necessary only to file an application giving the name and residence of the applicant and bearing the signature of a second person, who must be an actual resident of the city, appearing as such in the latest city directory. This person becomes the guarantor to the library for the proper observance of the library regulations on the part of the applicant. These regulations merely provide that books drawn for home use must be returned within the stated period and must not be defaced or injured.

At the close of May 31, 1919, the public library contained 978,456 volumes. The aggregate circulation for the year ending May 31, 1919, was 7,407,999 volumes, which does not include the use of books kept on the open shelves at the main library or its branches or the periodicals or newspapers used in the reading rooms.

CHICAGO PARKS AND BOULEVARDS.

LINCOLN PARK SYSTEM.

Commissioners (appointed by governor with consent of senate)—Francis T. Simmons, John H. Hardin, Andrew Lanquist, Albert W. Goodrich, Bertram M. Winston, Samuel M. Felton, William Wrigley, Jr.

Officers—President, Francis T. Simmons; vice-president, John H. Hardin; auditor, Andrew Lanquist; secretary and superintendent, John C. Cannon; advisory counsel, Emil C. Wetten; treasurer, Frederick H. Rawson.

Office—In Lincoln park near Clark and Center streets.

The Lincoln park district consists of the towns of North Chicago and Lake View, with Fullerton avenue as the dividing line, and is bounded on the north by Devon avenue, on the south by the Chicago river, and extends from Lake Michigan on the east to the north branch of the river and North Western avenue on the west.

The area of the Lincoln park district is 12.64 square miles. The total area of the parks and boulevards is 642.63 acres, with 11.755 miles of boulevards.

Lincoln Park—Lincoln park, previously known as Lake park, began its history under its present name by resolution passed by the common council of Chicago under date of June 5, 1865. The park proper is 317 acres in extent and extends from Diversey boulevard to Oak street along the lake front. To this 200.59 acres of land has been added by filling in Lake Michigan north of Diversey boulevard. This extension contains a 57 acre yacht harbor. The park contains a large floral department, also an extensive zoological garden containing about 1,800 animals. Boating and bathing facilities are furnished and the park lagoon—one mile in length—gives an admirable course for racing. The Academy of Sciences is located in the park at the foot of Center street. This building was erected in 1893 and contains about 250,000 specimens. It is noted for its collection of local natural history specimens and for its complete collection of mollusks. The park has provided facilities for outdoor games during both the winter and summer seasons.

Stanton Park—At Vedder, Vine and Rees streets; area 4.78 acres; equipped with fieldhouse and outdoor gym facilities.

Lake Shore Playground—Area 9.16 acres; is situated between Pearson street and Chicago avenue, extending from the Chicago avenue pumping works to the lake. This park is fitted up as a playground, containing a shelter house, and with outdoor and indoor gymnasium apparatus.

Seward Park—Contains 1.78 acres; is fitted with outdoor and indoor gymnasium and has a fieldhouse which contains reading rooms, assembly hall, clubrooms, a branch of the public library and facilities for gymnastic work and aquatic sports.

Welles Park—Western avenue and Montrose boulevard; fieldhouse and out-of-door gymnasium facilities; area 8.17 acres.

SMALL PARKS, PLAYGROUNDS AND BATHING BEACHES.

Bureau of Parks, Public Playgrounds and Bathing Beaches.

Secretary—Walter Wright.
Superintendent of playgrounds—E. T. Brekke.
Director in charge of beaches and pools—T. R. Daly.
Director in charge of activities—H. J. Fisher.
Director in charge of maintenance—F. K. Kaiser.
Senior foreman of parks—F. R. Thomason.
Office of the bureau—1004 city hall.

The bureau of parks, public playgrounds and bathing beaches is a bureau of the department of public works. It maintains and has jurisdiction over seventy municipal playgrounds, five bathing beaches, four natatoriums, sixty-five small parks, city forestry or street trees and Gage farm nursery.

The playgrounds are open all year around from 8 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock at night and each is in charge of a director and attendant, and during the spring, summer and fall a young woman assistant director or physical instructor.

The bathing beaches under the jurisdiction of the bureau are the Clarendon beach, the largest municipal bathing beach in the world; the 51st street bathing beach, 76th street bathing beach, Rocky Ledge beach at the foot of 79th street and the Rogers Park beach at the foot of Kenilworth avenue.

The city has obtained the possession of the shore property extending from 75th street to 79th street, and it is intended to establish a large beach and park at this location.

Three of the four natatoriums are open the year around and no charge is made for their use. They are very popular in their respective neighborhoods, as is shown by the large attendance. Instruction is given in swimming during the winter months.

The small parks vary in size from a beauty spot of one-tenth of an acre to a forty acre park and are used to give every possible means of recreation to the people. Play apparatus, tennis courts, wading pools, etc., are established wherever possible.

City forestry is also under the jurisdiction of the bureau of parks and the work of trimming trees goes on throughout the year. An emergency truck is used to remove the dead and dangerous trees in the parkways throughout the city so as to prevent accidents to pedestrians.

Following is a list of the small parks, playgrounds, bathing beaches and natatoriums under the jurisdiction of the bureau of parks, public playgrounds and bathing beaches, with the area of the parks in acres and size of the playgrounds:

TABLET TO THE A. E. F.

A bronze tablet erected at the northwest corner of the federal building in memory of the American soldiers who fought in France was unveiled Oct. 19, 1919, by the Sons of the Revolution. Attorney Samuel B. King, president of the society in Illinois, made the introductory speech.

The unveiling marked the anniversary of the surrender of the British army to the American and French army, which closed the revolutionary war, at Yorktown, Va. The principal speaker was Gen. L. Collerdet, military attache from the French embassy at Washington. The tablet reads:

"The minute men of 1775, who left the plow and shouldered the musket that men in America might be free and equal, were beholden to France for the victory. To the men of 1917 in khaki and blue the spirit of the minute men is beholden for the redemption of the debt to France that was made when the commander of the American army in France said 'Lafayette, we are here.'"

DIRIGIBLE BALLOON DISASTER IN CHICAGO.

Thirteen persons lost their lives and more than a score of others were injured when the dirigible balloon Wing Foot Express burst into flames, fell and crashed through the skylight of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, Chicago, a little before 5 o'clock on the afternoon of July 21, 1919. Ten of the dead were employes of the bank who were at work in the institution when the accident occurred, two were passengers and one a mechanic in the airship. The bank employes were burned or crushed to death as the two heavy gasoline tanks and two rotary engines fell upon or near them, scattering flames in every direction. One passenger had both legs broken when descending with a parachute, and died from his injuries the day after the accident. The other passenger and mechanic died in the crash on the bank roof, having been unable to use their parachutes in getting away from the burning balloon. Nine of the bank employes were killed almost instantly, while another died two days later. The names of the victims were:

Helen P. Berger, stenographer.
Marcus C. Callopy, teller.
Jacob E. Carpenter, messenger.
Earl H. Davenport, publicity man.
Marie Florence, clerk.
Mary Gallagher, stenographer.
Irene Miles, stenographer.
Evelyn L. Meyer, stenographer.
Edwin A. Munzer, clerk.
Milton G. Norton, photographer.
Carl Otto, telegrapher.
Joseph Scanlon, bank messenger.
Carl Weaver, mechanic.

John Boettner, pilot of the dirigible, alighted with his parachute on a roof and escaped with slight injuries. Harry Wacker, chief mechanic of the craft, had his back broken in descending with his parachute.

The dirigible was built at Akron, O., by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company of that city, and was designed to carry passengers on short pleasure trips from and to the White City, an amusement resort in Chicago. On the day of the disaster it made its first trip, flying from the White City hangar to Grant park, where it alighted. At 2:30 it made another short trip up the north shore and returning to Grant park landed again. At 4:05 it started up again with five men in the car—a pilot, two mechanics and two passengers. One of the passengers was Milton G. Norton, photographer for the Herald and Examiner, and the other Earl H. Davenport, publicity agent for the White City. It had been cruising about forty-five minutes over the downtown section when the accident occurred and its evolutions had been watched by thousands, to whom the sight of a dirigible was a novelty. Many of the spectators saw the balloon catch fire at a height of 1,200 feet and saw the occupants jump, relying upon the parachutes with which they were supplied to escape from death. It was one of the most thrilling accidents in the history of the city as well as one of the most peculiar.

The length of the "blimp" was 158 feet, diameter of gas bag, 34 feet; length of gondola and motor, 50 feet; motor equipment, two tractor 80 horsepower La Rhone motors; gas capacity, 100,000 cubic feet; gasoline capacity, 200 gallons; value, $100,000.

Send Out Letters!

Your prospective customers are not mind readers. You must tell them what you want to sell, why it is good, why it is of advantage to them—invite them to buy!

You can't see all your logical prospects in person! There are too many of them and your time is limited.

But you can talk to them all—as often as you have a mind!

You can drive home your proposition and arouse their interest—then sit at your desk and take checks out of the morning mail.

You can send them letters.

Good letters.

Four-page illustrated letters, part of the complete campaigns we prepare.

Four-page illustrated letters that compel the mail clerk to send the interesting detail to the executive along with the personal message.

You can cash in on letters in many ways—speed up different channels of your business.

Whether you're near the Atlantic or the Pacific, the Gulf or the Canadian border—or anywhere in between—we're prepared to give a personal interview.

The Brunswick

ALL PHONOGRAPHS IN ONE

Gives New Beauty to Record Music

"Tones that are reproduced truer, finer, sweeter." "Music that in both spirit and letter is restated with greater beauty." "All records transcribed with greater fidelity."

Golden opinions like these are showered on The Brunswick by its hearers everywhere. And why?

Because, with its many other betterments, it has an exclusive, new Method of Reproduction.

Come in for free demonstration.

A Drop in the Bucket

Every householder's expenses are divided into a number of items; food, rent, clothing, fuel and light, house-furnishings, insurance, education and amusements, sickness—and the telephone.

Of all these items of expense, the telephone bill is one of the least, being a very small percent of the total cost.

For a trifling sum at most you have constantly at your command millions of dollars' worth of property and the service of skilled workers.

In business the cost of the telephone is frequently an even smaller proportion of the overhead expense than in the household.

It only needs an emergency to bring it home to any subscriber that the telephone is worth many times its cost.

FIELD MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY.

President—Stanley Field.
Vice-Presidents—Martin A. Ryerson, Watson F. Blair.
Director of the Museum and Secretary—Frederick J. V. Skiff.
Treasurer—Solomon A. Smith.
Assistant Secretary and Recorder—D. C. Davies.

The Field Museum of Natural History, established in 1894 at the close of the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893, occupies the temporary building erected for fine arts in Jackson park, the exposition site. The founding of a scientific institution of this character in Chicago was made possible by the gift of $1,000,000 by Marshall Field, who on his death (Jan. 16, 1906) bequeathed the institution a further $8,000,000. $4,000,000 for the erection of a permanent building and $4,000,000 for endowment. In addition $1,500,000 has been donated by other individuals and there is an annual income from other sources than endowment of about $25,000. The citizens of Chicago have confirmed legislative provision for the levy of a tax for the maintenance of the museum when a new building shall have been erected, which it is estimated will eventually produce approximately $100,000 per annum.

The new building is now near completion, near and south of Roosevelt road extended in an easterly direction. The architecture of this building is ornamental and dignified in character, as befits its location in a public park. The general architecture of the present building in Jackson park has been retained as well as the beautiful effects of the colonnade structure.

The nucleus of the exhibition material was gathered by gift and purchase at the World's Columbian Exposition. Most of this material, however, has since been rearranged, readapted or discarded. Several departments created at the organization have been abandoned, until, after the lapse of twenty years and the expenditure of approximately $6,500,000, the museum is now divided into five departments—namely, anthropology, botany, geology and zoology, and the Harris public school extension. Many expeditions for the purpose of obtaining study, exhibition and exchange material and data have been dispatched all over the world. The results of these expeditions, investigations and researches have been published by the museum from time to time, which publications have been distributed to kindred societies and institutions both at home and abroad. An important contribution of $250,000 by Norman W. Harris was announced in December, 1911, for the extension of the work of the museum into the public schools of Chicago. The plans for carrying out Mr. Harris' wishes were placed in operation in the spring of 1913. The museum has a working library of about 70,000 titles, an extensive exchange system, fully equipped departmental laboratories, a herbarium of more than 500,000 sheets, study collections in mammals and birds reaching many thousand specimens, a large two story taxidermy section, a well equipped printing shop, illustration studios and assaying and lapidary rooms. In North American ethnology, in the world's mineralogy, in economic botany, the museum is particularly prominent, while its series of mounted mammals furnishes examples of advanced museum methods. The present main building covers nine acres and is open to the public on all days except Christmas and Thanksgiving. An admission fee of 25 cents is charged except on Saturdays and Sundays, when admission is free to all. Students, scholars and teachers are admitted free on all days between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

The museum is incorporated under state law and the administrative control rests in a board of trustees with president, secretary, etc. The executive of the museum is the director, under whom there are five head curators with divisional assistant curators, preparators, etc. The entire museum records, the accessions system, the historical files, publications and supplies are in charge of a recorder.

SOME REASONS

UNDER THE

TORRENS SYSTEM

By JOSEPH F. HAAS, Registrar of Titles of Cook County

What is the Torrens System in Cook County? It is a system of registering the title of land, with a guarantee by the people of Cook County that the title as registered is correct.

It is the modern, up=to=date method of holding and transferring title to real estate.

BECAUSE

1. Cook County guarantees each Torrens title with three billion dollars of taxable assets.
2. The Indemnity Fund of over fifty thousand dollars insures the immediate cash payment of any damages sustained.
3. Protection is given owners against judgments rendered against people of the same or similar name.
4. Special protection is afforded against tax sales and tax deeds.
5. Owners are protected against fraudulent signatures on deeds or other instruments.
6. Adverse possession does not run against land registered under the Torrens System.
7. A Torrens Certificate of Title is conclusive evidence of good and valid title.
8. Defects in title are wiped out forever by initial registration.
9. Transfers may be made in one-third the time required under other systems.
10. The transfer fee is only $3.00 no matter what the value may be of the property transferred.
11. The Circuit Court of Cook County retains a continuing jurisdiction for the purpose of protecting the title to Torrens property.
12. No statute of limitations runs against the guarantee of a Torrens Certificate.

PROMPT AND EFFICIENT SERVICE BY THE OFFICE OF THE

TORRENS LAND CERTIFICATES

Absolutely guarantee title to land when registered. Under this system, transfers and loans can be closed without cost to the seller within forty-eight hours.

THE COUNTY ABSTRACT PLANT

Furnishes merchantable abstracts of title 40% cheaper than prices charged by abstract companies.

HOUSE NUMBER SYSTEM IN CHICAGO.

The present house number system in Chicago was established by an ordinance passed June 22, 1908, and effective Sept. 1, 1909. This applied to all streets except those between the river, 12th street and the lake. Sept. 20, 1910, the city council passed an amendment to the ordinance making it applicable to the entire city. The change in the business district went into effect April 1, 1911. The system is laid out on two base lines, State street dividing the east and west streets and Madison street the north and south streets. Numbers are assigned on the basis of 800 to the mile or 100 to the prevailing block of 660 feet or one-eighth of a mile.

A Remarkable Record

IN recognition of the results obtained from safety measures in practice on the Chicago Elevated Railroads, the American Museum of Safety in 1916 awarded "Honorable Mention" to the Chicago Elevated Railroads in the Brady Medal contest among electric railroads.

Eleven years without one fatal accident

One billion nine hundred millions of passengers—equivalent nearly to the population of the world—have been carried by the Chicago Elevated Railroads during eleven years without a single fatal accident while on their trains.

Safety first, last and always is the constant watchword of the Elevated management. Civic pride alone, aside from individual interest, should induce Elevated patrons to co-operate in the elimination and prevention even of minor accidents.

ELEVATION OF CHICAGO AND LAKE MICHIGAN.

Mean sea level or mean tide at New York is the standard plane to which all elevations in the United States are referred, and the figures here given are heights above that plane. They are from the official records of the United States lake survey which have been maintained since 1860. The monthly mean surface of Lake Michigan has varied from 583.57 in June, 1886, to 578.98 in December, 1895. The annual mean surface has varied from 582.96 in 1886 to 579.47 in 1896.

The actual fluctuations in water surface from which these means are obtained have a much larger range and the immediate change in a few hours is often as great as two feet. The mean level of Lake Michigan from 1860 to 1914 (the average of all monthly means) was 581.20, and for the period from 1860 to 1875 it was 581.63, indicating that the mean level remains about the same, although the daily, monthly and annual fluctuations may be quite large. The highest known monthly mean was in 1838—584.7—and the lowest was in 1819—578.0—these being somewhat indeterminate. The United States lake survey has adopted as a standard low water for reference of soundings on its charts 578.5, a little higher than the lowest ever known as a monthly mean.

The Chicago city datum is 579.94 and this plane is used in most local works, including the harbor improvements made by the United States. This is about one foot above the lowest monthly mean of recent years and 1.26 feet below the mean level 1860-1914.

For general purposes the level of Lake Michigan should be taken as being somewhere between 581 and 582 feet. The heights of land in Chicago vary from 590 to 652 (Galewood) but the average may be placed at about 600 feet. The downtown section runs from 586 to 593 feet.

How the Great Bell Telephone System Started and How and Why It Must Continue to Grow

A great discovery is made.

It will benefit all men in their business, domestic and social affairs.

No one person has the means to promote and operate it.

A medium must be created by which many may join with their brains and money to put the discovery into use for the service of the public.

To meet just such cases the law provides for a corporation, a thing devised for the purpose of putting little sums of money together, through the issuance of bonds and stocks, to form what is known as capital, with which to do big things that the little sums cannot do alone.

Small interests, shares in the corporation, are sold to any one who has a little extra money, i. e., to the public, and the public buys in order that it may secure for itself the benefits of the great discovery.

The money realized by the corporation from the sale of the bonds and shares goes into the purchase of land, buildings, equipment and apparatus for adapting the great discovery to the use of all the people.

When the plant is ready to serve the public, rates are made and these the public pay for the individual right to use the great discovery, in their business and in their homes.

The rates must be high enough to pay the wages of those who actually operate the business; to pay for the upkeep of the buildings, equipment and apparatus; to create a surplus for taking care of emergencies, such as storm damage, for example, which cannot be provided for in advance; and to pay the Wages of Capital, that is, the interest on the bonds and dividends on the stock sold to those who put their little sums of money in in the first place to make the great discovery available for their own use and for use of all the people.

Probably the most important obligation resting on the rate scale is the payment of the Wages of Capital, because, as populations grow and as business grows, they lean more heavily on the great discovery, and in order that it may expand far enough and rapidly enough there must from time to time be more capital, to meet the demands for more buildings and more ground, more equipment, more apparatus. Only by the continuous investment of capital can the great discovery be developed so as to meet the wants of the public.

Capital, principal, must have its wage, otherwise it becomes unemployed. Unemployed capital produces nothing for those to whom it belongs, and this lack of production drives them to use it up when paying for everyday necessities, food clothing, fuel.

Now, unless a job looks safe—that is, unless the rates charged for service are high enough to pay the capital wage as well as the labor wage and other charges—those who have capital will not put it into the extensions necessary for the broader use of the great discovery, for fear of losing it and thus be left without either wage or capital.

The development of the great discovery must not stop; its service must continue to flow unhindered for the benefit of all who need it.

The Telephone corporation is simply the trustee which handles the business details incidental to utilizing the great discovery: Paying the bills, supervising and directing the operation, developing the personnel, studying the public welfare as influenced by the great discovery and looking about for new capital. It has but one end to serve, the supplying of service to the public with funds provided by the public.

The valuation since 1875 is the equalized valuation fixed by the state board of equalization. From 1867 to 1875 the valuation was made by the city for the city tax. From 1898 to 1908, inclusive, the assessed value was one-fifth of the actual value. In 1909 the rate was fixed at one-third and in 1919 at one-half. The total valuation includes capital stock and railroads.

INTERESTING FACTS AND FIGURES

In 1907, when the traction problems were solved by the so-called "Settlement Ordinances" (after the entire question had been submitted to a referendum vote of the residents of Chicago), a value was established by the City of Chicago through an independent valuing commission covering the properties as they then existed. The valuation established by the city, $50,000,000, was more than $30,000,000 below the value claimed by the companies and was reached by arbitrarily disregarding many millions of capital that actually had been invested in the properties.

To this 1907 valuation the city, under the ordinances, provided that the companies should add the amounts actually expended on capital account when authorized and certified by the Board of Supervising Engineers. These expenditures covering track extensions and additions to equipment brought the total purchase price as of January 31, 1919, up to $157,164,907. This represented the figure at which the city might have taken over the properties if it chose to exercise its right at that date.

The companies pay to the city of Chicago for the privilege of operating their cars in the streets 55 per cent of their net receipts annually. This has amounted in twelve years to approximately $25,000,000.

During the year ended January 31, 1919, the Surface Lines carried a total of 1,204,362,342 passengers. Of these 685,300,000 were revenue passengers and 491,659,000 were transfer passengers. The very large percentage of transfer passengers brought the average fare per passenger down to 2.8 cents, giving the companies the smallest cash return per passenger of any large city in the country.

There are approximately 500 miles of double track in the Surface Lines system and an army of 15,000 employes is employed in the operation and maintenance of the properties.

Suggestions for Visitors.

Chicago, aside from its importance as a great business center, has numerous attractions which make it the ideal vacation city, and its location on the shores of Lake Michigan justifies its recognition as the ideal summer resort. The Surface Lines offer the most convenient transportation in Chicago.

Here are a few suggestions to the visitor who desires to become acquainted with some of Chicago's attractions and for the general information of those who would like to have a more comprehensive idea of what to see and how to see it.

NEW MUNICIPAL PIER—Here is one of Chicago's newest and greatest wonders—a great recreation center and a steamboat landing extending 3,000 feet into the lake and costing about $5,000,000. Here one may enjoy the cooling breezes of Lake Michigan while getting an expansive view of the city's sky line. There are many attractions on the pier itself during the season, including observation towers, board walk, children's playground, open air and inclosed restaurants, public dining room for picnickers and immense freight and passenger boat terminals. No one should miss this trip. Take through route No. 1 car in Wabash avenue, State street car in State street, Broadway car in Dearborn or Randolph street, Clark street or through route No. 22 car in Clark street, or Lincoln avenue car in LaSalle street; ride north to Grand avenue and transfer east to the lake. Cars operate on the pier.

CLARENDON BATHING BEACH—This municipal enterprise is one of the newest attractions in Chicago. It is owned and operated by the city and should be visited by every one. Costly buildings beautify the premises. Ten thousand bathers can use the beach at one time, and even if one does not care to "take a dip" a pleasant afternoon can be spent here. Take through route No. 1 car in Wabash avenue or Broadway car in Dearborn or Randolph street, ride north to Sunnyside avenue and walk east to the lake.

CHICAGO'S GREAT ZOO—No collection of animals in the United States is more complete or interesting than the one in Lincoln park. Here are 1,700 specimens which are a continual source of delight to children and grownups alike. One cannot visit the "Zoo" too often. Take through route No. 1 car in Wabash avenue, Clark street or through route No. 22 car in Clark street, Broadway car in Dearborn or Randolph street, or Lincoln avenue car in LaSalle street, ride north to main entrance of Lincoln Park at Center street.

CHICAGO'S WONDERFUL PARKS.

DOUGLAS PARK—Has many attractions, such as athletic field, flower gardens, boating facilities and natatorium. Take 12th street car in Dearborn or Adams street, or Ogden avenue car in State or Randolph street, ride west to park at 12th street and California avenue.

GARFIELD PARK—Has many attractions, including flower gardens, boating facilities, public golf course, largest conservatory in the United States, several statues. Take Madison street car in Madison street to park entrance at Central Park avenue.

HUMBOLDT PARK—Offers facilities for boating and other recreation and has some attractive statues. Take Division street car in State or Washington street and ride west to park at terminus of line.

JACKSON PARK—One of Chicago's most beautiful spots, on part of which was located the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893. Here are splendid boating facilities, a bathing beach, two public golf courses, Field museum, flower gardens, government life saving station and LaRabida sanitarium. Take Jackson park car or Stony Island-93d car in Wabash avenue to "Midway" at 59th street.

LINCOLN PARK—One of the city's most interesting attractions. See Zoo with 1,700 animals, Academy of Sciences, bathing beach and golf course near Diversey boulevard, conservatory, flower gardens, boating and other recreation facilities; also the world famous Saint-Gaudens statue of Abraham Lincoln. Take through route No. 1 car in Wabash avenue, Clark street or through route No. 22 car in Clark street, Broadway car in Dearborn street or Lincoln avenue car in LaSalle street, ride north to main entrance of park at Center street.

WASHINGTON PARK—Offers facilities for boating and other recreation. Take Indiana-51st car in Wabash avenue and ride south to terminus at park, or take Cottage Grove car in Wabash avenue and ride south to 55th street entrance.

AMUSEMENT RESORTS.

RIVERVIEW PARK—A large amusement park with many attractions and space for picnicking purposes. Take Riverview-Larrabee car in Dearborn street and ride north to park at terminus of this line. Or take through route No. 2 car in Clark street or Clybourn avenue car in Wells street, ride north to terminus at Belmont avenue and walk north two blocks to gate.

WHITE CITY—A large amusement park with many things to interest a visitor. Take Wentworth avenue or through route No. 2 or No. 22 car in Clark street, or take State street car in State street, ride south to 63d street and transfer east to park gate at South Park avenue. Or take Cottage Grove-71st or through route No. 4 or No. 5 in Wabash avenue, ride south to 63d street and transfer west to park gate at South Park avenue.

MADISON GARDENS—Those who enjoy roller skating can spend a very pleasant evening at Madison Gardens at the corner of Madison and Rockwell streets. There are special facilities for those who are learning, special instructors for ladies and children. An orchestra furnishes appropriate music. Take Madison street cars to the doors.

OTHER POINTS OF INTEREST.

ACADEMY OF SCIENCES—A noted museum of natural history having many interesting specimens. Open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily and 1 p. m. to 5 p. m. Sundays. Free. Take through route No. 1 car in Wabash avenue, or Clark street or through route No. 22 car in Clark street, or Broadway car in Dearborn street, or Lincoln avenue car in LaSalle street, ride north to Lincoln park entrance at Clark and Center streets.

CHICAGO HISTORICAL SOCIETY—Depository of valuable historical documents and relics of Chicago's early days. Open daily 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., except Saturday afternoons and Sundays. Free. Take State street car on State street, or through route No. 1 car on Wabash avenue, ride north to Ontario street and walk one block west. Or take Clark street or through route No. 22 car on Clark street, ride north to Ontario street and walk east one block to Dearborn.

FIELD MUSEUM—One of Chicago's "seven wonders" is this costly collection of natural history material gathered from the remotest corners of the world. Its original home in Jackson park was the Fine Arts building of the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893. A permanent building to house this great institution has been erected in Grant park at a cost of $4,000,000 and when the exhibits have been moved from the old building the museum will be open to visitors 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. daily; free on Saturdays and Sundays.

CUBS' PARK—Home grounds of Chicago's National league team. Take Clark street or through route No. 22 car in Clark street and ride north to entrance at Addison street.

SOX PARK—Home grounds of Chicago's representative in the American Baseball league may be reached by taking Wentworth avenue or through route No. 2 or No. 22 car in Clark street. Ride south to 35th street and walk one block west to park entrance.

HAYMARKET SQUARE—This largest market for truck garden produce was the site of the anarchist riot in 1886. The activity of this place any weekday morning is worth watching. Take Ogden avenue car in State, Randolph or Lake street, and ride west to Desplaines street. Or take Madison street car west as far as Desplaines street and walk north two blocks to Randolph street. A stroll for several blocks west through the market will be interesting.

FLAG DISPLAY DAYS IN CHICAGO.

In accordance with an order issued by Mayor William Hale Thompson May 8, 1915, the American flag should be hoisted on the buildings under the jurisdiction of the city government on all election days and on the following anniversaries:

Feb. 12—Lincoln's birthday.
Feb. 15—Sinking of the Maine.
Feb. 22—Washington's birthday.
Apr. 19—Battle of Lexington.
May 30—Memorial day.
June 14—Flag day.
June 17—Battle of Bunker Hill.
July 4—Independence day.
Oct. 9—Chicago day.
Oct. 12—Columbus day.
Oct. 17—Battle of Saratoga.
Oct. 19—Surrender of Yorktown.
Nov. 25—Evacuation of Yorktown.

On all the foregoing dates the flag should be hoisted at full mast, with the exception of Memorial day and the anniversary of the sinking of the Maine, when it should be at half-mast. The hours of displaying the flag are from sunrise to sunset.

By an ordinance passed Feb. 5, 1917, by the Chicago city council, the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner" in public places in any way except as an entire and separate composition and without embellishments of national or other melodies is prohibited. The playing of the air as dance music or for an exit march is also prohibited. Violation of the ordinance by proprietors or performers is punishable by a fine of $100.

GARNISHMENT LAW OF ILLINOIS.

Section 14 of the act of 1872 as amended in 1897 and 1901 declares: "The wages for services of a wage earner who is the head of a family and residing with the same, to the amount of fifteen ($15) dollars per week, shall be exempt from garnishment. All above the sum of fifteen ($15) dollars per week shall be liable to garnishment."

Employers are obliged to pay wages amounting to $15 or less, notwithstanding the service of a writ of garnishment, providing the person to whom wages are due makes affidavit that he is the head of a family and is living with the same.

A Bank of SERVICE and SAFETY

The flexibility of outdoor advertising makes it applicable to any sales plan, commodity or territory.

It is adaptable to both local and national advertising. As a national medium, it localizes national advertising to any given community.
